☐Hall of Fame pitcher Warren Spahn, who pitched for Casey Stengel on the 1942 Boston Braves and the 1965 New York Mets speaking: "I'm probably the only guy who worked for Stengel before and after he became a genius."

☐Stop complaining about North and South Dakota. Suppose there were East and West Dakotas?

☐The road to success is always under construction.

☐The first icepick manufacturer who became a millionaire was the first who started manufacturing ice trays.

☐It is nice to be important, but it is more important to be nice.

☐The man of thought who will not act is just as dangerous as the man of action who will not think.

☐"I'm sure if the world should blow itself up, the last audible voice would be an expert saying it couldn't be done." Peter Ustinov said it.

☐In military lingo a retreat is a retrograde maneuver. Interchange is a bureaucratic word for crossroads.

☐He said he couldn't play golf that day because of his obligod-damnations.

☐Some folks talk because they have something to say. Others talk because they have to say something.

Area safety & consumer officials issue Halloween hints

Area police, fire department and state consumer officials recently released Halloween safety guidelines and encouraged community efforts to watch out for the safety of children who are trick-or-treating.

These are tips from the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission:

Costumes, masks, beards, and wigs should be labeled " Flame Resistant." Although this does not mean they will not catch fire, such labeling indicates that they will resist burning and should extinguish quickly once removed from the ignition souce. Flimsy materials and outfits with big, baggy sleeves or billowing skirts should be avoided to minimize the risk of contact with candles or other sources of ignition.

Costumes should be light and bright enough to be clearly visible to motorists. For greater visibility in dusk or darkness, costumes should be decorated or trimmed with reflective tape which will "glow" in the beam of a car's headlights. Bags or sacks should also be light colored and decorated with reflective tape. Reflective tape is usually available in hardware, bicycle, and sporting goods stores. Children should also carry flashlights to see—and be seen—more easily.

Costumes should be short enough to prevent children from tripping and falling. Children should also wear safe, sturdy shoes. Mother's high heels are not a good idea for safe walking.

Hats should be tied securely to prevent them from slipping over children's eyes.

Apply natural mask of cosmetics rather than have a child wear a loose fitting mask which might restrict breathing or obscure vision. If a mask is used, make sure eyeholes are large enough to allow full vision and make sure the mask fits securely.

If swords, knives, or similar accessories are carried, they should be of soft or flexible material.

Smaller children should always be accompanied by an older responsible child or an adult. All children should use the sidewalk rather than walk in the street, and they should WALK not run from house to house. Children should be cautioned against running out between parked cars or across yards and lawns where ornaments, furniture, or clotheslines present dangers.

Children should only go to homes where residents have outside lights on as a sign of welcome. Children should not enter homes or apartments unless they are accompanied by an adult.

Those receiving trick-or-treaters should remove anything that could be an obstacle from steps, lawns, and porches. Candellit jack-o-lanterns should be kept away from landings and doorsteps where costumes could brush against the flame. Indoor jack-o-lanterns should be kept away from curtains, decorations, or other furnishings that could be ignited.

Parents should encourage home parties and celebrations in place of trick-or-treating.

Consumers wishing further information may call the CPSC toll-free Hotline at 800-638-CPSC.

We are serious cash buyers of gold, silver & platinum; both old & new diamonds, estate & antique jewelry, sterling flatware, gold filled items, industrial precious metals, dental gold, old & rare coins, tokens & medals, postcards & collectables. Our evaluation & gold & silver assay tests are free & at no obligation while you wait. We will meet or beat any legitimate offer to buy published locally, nationally, or internationally. Many local dealers claim to be the "highest buyers" so shop around & see us last. We may be a little further away but the few extra miles are worth the effort. We also exchange all denominations of foreign currency & coin on the spot. Banks send their customers to us for just that purpose. We have the most competitive prices on new jewelry in New England & also do expert jewelry repair & appraisals.

THANKSGIVING NOVENA: O Holy St. Jude, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor to all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg you to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent petition. In return, I promise to make your name known, and cause you to be invoked. Say Three Our Fathers, three Hail Marys and Glorias. Publication must be promised. St. Jude, pray for us and all who invoke your aid, Amen. This Novena has never been known to fail. I have had my request granted. Publication promised. (This Novena should be said on 9 consecutive days.) DMC. (10/29)

PRAYER THROUGH APPLICATION OF HOLY SPIRIT - Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I may attain my goal, you who give me the Divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you, even and in spite of all material illusion. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine.

The person must say this prayer for 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the favor requested will be granted even if it may appear difficult. This prayer must be published immediately after the favor is granted without mentioning the favor. Only your initials should appear at the bottom. S.F. (10/29) the Citizens Advisory Committee. He is an advocate of the restoration project .

Pros and cons of Greenbush rail line. . .

Although his move from Boston to Hingham signified an economic achievement, Grimes said he has become "transportation poor" because of the change of residence.

He explained the rail line is just several yards away from his property on South Street. "I moved there when the trains were still running freight along the lines. I knew a train ran there when I bought the house. And now I welcome the change that may take me into Boston," he stated.

Grimes argued the South Shore's rise in development and economic success was helped by the activation of the rail line.

Richard Cook, a Hingham planner and member of the Citizens Advisory Committee, described himself as neither an advocate nor an opponent of the project. He labeled himself a "doubting Thomas" who continued to ask questions before formulating a final decision.

"I am concerned with the reactivation of the Greenbush line," he admitted, adding he was not opposed to commuter rail service, but to the route as it traveled through the business area of Hingham.

The planning board, Cook said, looks at the current environmental review process in a positive manner, adding, "it must prove to me it can be implemented without affecting the community."

Residents of the South Shore, he said, are not living in a static environment. A master plan must first be developed, he emphasized, with transportation needs addressed in that comprehensive plan.

The Greenbush rail line runs through the business area of downtown Hingham, the property most sensitive to this type of impact. The three or four grade crossings there, according to Cook, "are an obstruction to traffic flow."

Cook noted that in the 1960's when the downtown area appeared as if it were disappearing, the merchants banned together and made it a viable, attractive, and successful commercial and social area.

"The merchants (of Hingham) are concerned with the reactivation of the railroad," he said. "It will take a substantial portion of their delivery area away and create an environment different from what they have there."

"The planning board encourages the state to seriously study the alternatives - what will best serve us without affecting the things that are most dear to us," Cook stated.

Deborah Cook of Cohasset is a representative to the Citizens Advisory Committee. As a committee member, Cook said, she will be looking into the "nuts and bolts" issues regarding the restoration. "There are a lot of questions, like, is the commuter boat a viable alternative if the railroad will be drawing people away?" she stated.

She is concerned that by restoring a rail system here, it will be a magnet that draws a large population into the community. Cook said if a parking facility for the rail line is constructed along Rte. 3A, "we will definitely receive overflow parking from other towns."

When asked if the rail system may one day be self supporting, an MBTA official noted that all current state commuter lines operate in the deficit. All Boston lines are subsidized by the state, he added.

Consultant Wolfe explained that once an alternative is selected by the secretary of environmental affairs, funding will have to be procured for whatever project will be finalized. "Assuming we will have the funding, and everything goes according to schedule, the project should be completed by 1991." she stated.

The last word, according to the MBTA consultants, will rest with the state legislators who will decide whether to fund any transportation project.

In answer to a question from the audience, one consultant explained the former Greenbush commuter line was discontinued in July, 1959 because it was unprofitable. He explained that projected ridership for the Greenbush line would be about 12 - 15,000 people each day. The fare into South Station would be from $1.50 to $3, he estimated.

Historical Society president resigns from post

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

To many people in Cohasset, Connie Parker is the Historical Society. She would be the first to dispute that.

After 12 years as the president of the society, Mrs. Parker is stepping down next week.

"I don't like being boss," she says with a laugh. Sitting inside her Parker Street kitchen, she recalled the daily work, the nightly meetings and the continual fundraising associated with her tenure. "I never wanted to be boss. The only reason we accomplished all we did is because I had cooperation from 99 percent of the townspeople and the members of the society."

The outgoing president adds, "believe me, I'm leaving the society in capable hands. I'm not dropping out of sight and I'll be willing to help in any way."

The Cohasset native will remain in town with her husband, Lawrence Jr., a former local realtor. "We're not going anywhere," she promises. "I'm not moving. I can't live anywhere but in Cohasset. I love this town, the salt water, the marshes. This is where I'll stay."

Mrs. Parker had to think a moment before recalling exactly how she accepted the presidency in 1974. "I think someone must have asked me, and I don't know how or why I answered yes. I never wanted the glory, and I certainly had no idea of being president," she says. "I was asked out of the clear blue. Actually, I was more active in the historical societies I belonged to on the Cape. I wasn't so very active here."

That soon changed. After her installation, Mrs. Parker began to hunt in earnest for badly-needed office and archive space for the society. "We had books in eaves of buildings, and our treasurer and secretary had their books at their homes. It was totally disorganized. Then one day I was walking by the Lothrop House. It had been empty for six years. I proposed to the board of trustees that we buy it, even though it was in terrible condition."

In fact, Mrs. Parker recalled, it was so decrepid, that one board member refused to tour the building. "The front lawn was overgrown with bushes, the windows were broken, there were cats living inside," she recalled.

But she persevered. The mother of four, Mrs. Parker was familiar with the expense of weddings, and she envisioned the Lothrop House as one day evolving into an elegant, inexpensive and local site for wedding receptions. The 163 year-old home could also be used as the society's office, and would serve as a meeting place for various town committees and organizations.

And if there was one thing the Parkers were

No decision on new patrolman

After more than a year, Cohasset is still experiencing a shortage of police officers.

Selectmen failed to make a patrolman appointment this week, twice splitting the decision in a 2-2 tie.

The police department has been down one patrolman since Officer John Rhodes suffered a heart attack more than a year ago. He was on sick leave for several months before retiring from the department.

A month ago, selectmen interviewed the top three Civil Service candidates for the vacancy. Last week, they reverted back to the Civil Service list and interviewed a fourth candidate.

At this week's meeting, selectmen began the discussion by asking Police Chief Joseph Kealey for his recommendation. "I strongly recommend you select one of the candidates from the top three" listed by the Division of Personnel, he answered. The three top candidates were Patrick Plante, Vernon Hubbard and William Oliver.

"I believe if we're part of the Civil Service systems, we should follow the rules," Chief Kealey added. "I see no reason not to go by the rules. I don't want to recommend one. I've never worked with them, I don't know them. They all seem qualified."

Selectmen Cliff Mitman responded, "I'm a little disappointed that you aren't making a recommendation. I think that's part of your job." Selectman Mitman suggested they consider all four candidates previously interviewed for the position.

"I'm not the appointing authority," Chief Kealey replied. "I don't know the reason the appointment has not yet been made. I think you'll be getting into a very tough area if you don't pick from the top three. You'll have to have sound and sufficient information to bypass the top three." The chief added if he was more familiar with the candidates, or had previously worked with them, he would be more qualified to make a recommendation for appointment.

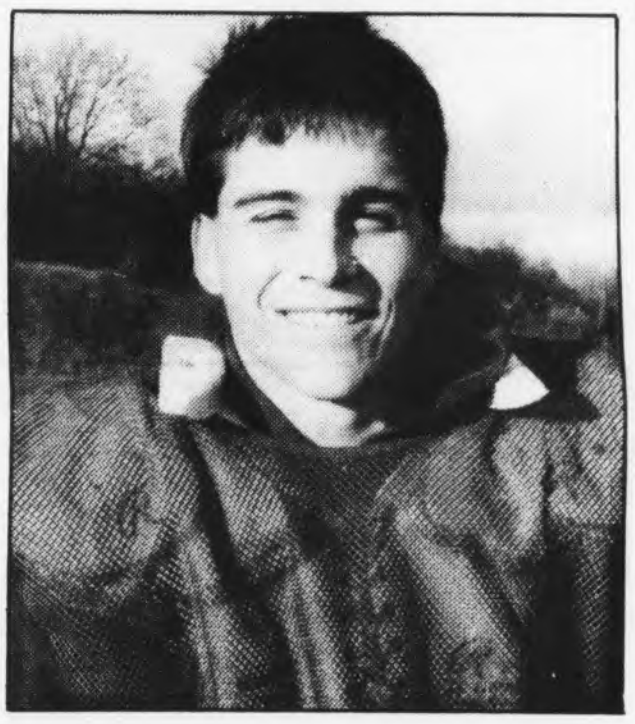
Durkin breaks CHS scoring record

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff



When Bob Durkin raced into the Abington end zone Saturday, he didn't just put the Skippers on the scoreboard. He put his name in the records book.

In 1957, Walter Sweeney set Cohasset's single-season scoring record with 134 points. With games to go, Durkin surpassed Sweeney's mark.

"Records are made to be broken, right?" Sweeney commented. "I was very happy that he broke the record. At the rate this kid's going, it looks like he'll double it. I think he's a fantastic ballplayer."

Off the gridiron, Durkin is modest and soft-spoken. He recalled the record-breaking run.

"It was the first place from scrimmage," he said. "We scored right away and I just saw Clark (Athletic Director Clark Chatterton) and Walter come onto the field.

"I didn't realize it; I didn't think about it at all until Clark sprinted onto the field with Walter Sweeney. It had slipped my mind completely."

Characteristically, Durkin credited his blockers for their contributions to his scoring success.

"It's basically these huge linemen we have," he said. "I think that's the key, definitely."

Of Sweeney, who played 14 years for the San Diego Chargers and Washington Redskins in the National Football League, Durkin said, "I wonder what kind of a line he played with and what he would do with a line like this."

Sweeney said he has attended several Skippers games this year and has watched Durkin perform.

Large turnout for Tuesday's election

It was a bigger turnout than expected as 59 percent of Cohasset's voters cast ballots in Tuesday's state election.

"We went way over what we had anticipated," Town Clerk Frances Marks said Wednesday morning. And despite the large turnout, results were tabulated by 9:30 p.m.

Cohasset followed the state's trend by siding heavily with the Dukakis-Murphy ticket for the governor's race. Congressman Gerry Studds won handily in his hometown over Republican opponent Ric Barros and Independent Alexander Barros.

Voters in Cohasset overwhelmingly decided not to repeal the state seat belt law. Question five, which asked voters whether the existing law should be repealed, resulted in a 1513 affirmative vote, compared to a total of 1239 votes in the negative.

Cohasset voters defeated referendum question one which would regulate state funding of abortions. Question two was defeated by a two-to-one margin. That amendment would allow public funding for private schools.

Question three, regarding a surtax on state income tax was approved by a margin of 600 votes in Cohasset. Voters approved a law which would require the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering to clean up hazardous waste sites within a specified time.

Question six on voter registration by mail was

Veterans honored

Cohasset will not hold an official observance of Veteran's Day, Nov. 11.

Instead, the town's veterans organizations will hold a special ceremony Nov. 16 at 2 p.m. At that time, members of the George Mealy American Legion Post and the VFW Post will honor Cohasset's only known Congressional Medal of Honor recipient, the late Levi Gaylord. The ceremonies will take place at the Central Cemetery.

Gaylord, who fought during the Civil War, is buried in that cemetery. Recently, the national Society of the Congressional Medal of Honor uncovered the fact that Gaylord had received the award. A special marker was placed at his grave in the Central Cemetery.

A color guard will be present at the Nov. 16 ceremonies. A brief history of Gaylord will be presented, and Taps will be played in conjunction with a multi-gun salute.

The public is welcome to attend the ceremonies.

Cohasset's week . . .

Landfill environmental review

The town's drainage advisory committee reviewed the environmental notification forms submitted by Cohasset Heights landfill for another area of expansion.

The committee concluded by stating "Cohasset Heights is a potential threat to the Cohasset water supply" and to adjacent environments. The members recommended that the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs require Cohasset Heights Ltd. to prepare an environmental impact report for expansion of the landfill into Area four.

Selectmen Chairman Diane Sullivan commended the town committees which took the time to review the environmental notification form, and made recommendations to the board.

Environmental assistance

Robert Beal Jr., environmental chairperson for the South Shore Chapter of the Telephone Pioneers, has volunteered his group's assistance in various community projects.

In a letter to selectmen last month, Beal stated that the Telephone Pioneers are available to assist the town with tree plantings, flower plantings, beautification or conservation.

In the past, he noted, the Pioneers have assisted in saltmarsh plantings, beach erosion projects, cleaning of Weymouth's Herring Run, playgrounds and tree and park projects.

Beal said he is available to meet with town boards or agencies to discuss any proposal or project that may be assisted by the Pioneers.

Dump closed, Nov. 11

The Board of Health informed the residents of Cohasset and all town licensed trash haulers that the Cedar Street Municipal Landfill will be closed on Tuesday, November 11 as it is the Veteran's Day holiday.

As the normal days the landfill is closed are Monday and Wednesday, please plan on the three day closure when bringing trash to the landfill for that week.

In addition, the Board wishes to remind everyone that leaving trash at the gates of the landfill is illegal and is punishable by a fine.

Can anyone guess what this building is, and where it was located. Submit your Peek at the Past answers to the Cohasset News store or Colonial Pharmacy news drop for the Mariner.

Land bank discussions

After receiving endorsements from the conservation and water commissions, selectmen said the land bank proposal will likely be put on the warrant for the April town meeting.

Water commissioners proposed the concept of a land bank last year, but selectmen delayed any action, saying it needed further study and input from other town boards.

The conservation and the water commission reviewed the proposal, and in a written report to selectmen, outlined their endorsement.

The land bank would create an additional cost to be paid when purchasing real estate in Cohasset. That percentage amount would be set aside in a special account to be used by the town to acquire additional conservation land.

In its report to selectmen, the conservation commission endorsed the plan, although members differed on the percentage amount to be levied on the real estate transactions. One member, Austin O'Toole, opposed the plan, saying it would make it more difficult for young people to purchase homes in Cohasset.

The water commission voted to support the proposal and offered its assistance to adopt the plan.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said the proposal should be prepared for inclusion in the April town meeting warrant.

Early automobiles topic at historical society

The Cohasset Historical Society's annual meeting will be held at Trueblood Hall, the Unitarian Parish House Tuesday, Nov. 18.

The featured speaker will be Eugene Baril, retired officer of the Registry of Motor Vehicles, whose subject will be early automobiles and automobiling. Mr. Baril, volunteer official historian for the Registry, has researched the development of early automobiles and driving, particularly in the South Shore area.

During the opening years of the 20th century one of the foremost automobile builders in the country, Col. Albert A. Pope, was a summer resident of Cohasset. Beginning as a maker of bicycles, Col. Pope became an auto manufacturer in an age when the "horseless carriage" was just becoming a fixture on the American scene. Other famous names in the world of automobiles dating from that era included the Stanley brothers, Duryea, Olds and Henry Ford. Among the first registered Cohasset drivers were Dr. Oliver H. Howe, August F. B. Petersen and Daniel Nichols Tower, all of whom were driving cars here before 1910.

Mr. Baril has amassed a wealth of information and documentation about these and other automobile builders and owners who were pioneers in the fascinating years when the auto began to replace the time-honored horse.

The forthcoming meeting also will seek the annual election of Society Officers and Directors. Mrs. Constance W. Parker, who has served as President of the Society since January of 1974, is retiring and will become President Emeritus. This meeting will honor her for her many years of service to the Society.

Catering the dinner will be Jessica; the menu is sherried beef with rice, time of the dinner will be 6:30 p.m. Reservations are a must, and are $10. Contact the Society at 383-6930 or 383-1351 to place reservations.

Checks may be mailed to the Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, or dropped by at the house.

Selectmen split on police officer appointment

Selectman Sullivan said she too was disappointed not to receive a recommendation from the police chief.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle then made a motion that William Oliver be appointed. Selectman James Gallagher seconded the motion which was defeated when Sullivan and Mitman voted in opposition.

Gallagher than recommended Patrick Plante be appointed but there was no second to his nomination.

Selectman Mitman nominated Robert Keirce, the fourth candidate interviewed by selectmen last week. Selectmen Sullivan seconded that motion.

"I agree that after review, Keirce is the candidate for Cohasset," she noted. "His background check was exemplary. He is an individual who since his graduation has been interested in law enforcement. He has been an MP with the Marine Corps and his recommendation from the Marines was excellent."

Selectman Sullivan noted that his supervising officer in the Marine Reserves is a MDC sergeant, who expressed the wish that Keirce had applied to the MDC rather than Cohasset.

Selectmen Sullivan and Mitman voted for Keirce, with Laugelle and Gallagher opposed.

With no other nominations forwarded, Selectman Sullivan noted, "there'll be no appointment this evening."

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew explained that the current Civil Service list expired Monday night. If selectmen request another list, it will likely be a duplicate, he said.

In other action Monday night, selectmen decided to specify in the licenses of all clubs in Cohasset that guests must be accompanied by a member of that club. Selectmen approved this regulation which was established by the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC).

After checking with another community, Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said most clubs allow guests into the establishment if they are accompanied by or meeting a club member there. Some clubs have guests sign a registration book when they enter the building.

Selectmen were discussing the issue after the ABCC decided to suspend the liquor license held by the American Legion for three days in November. According to the ABCC, two of its agents were served liquor without being asked whether they were guests at the club.

Selectman Laugelle said, "I think we're going overboard over a simple matter." He agreed that guests of all clubs should be made to sign a registration book.

"If we don't adopt this, the ABCC could come in a pull the license at any time," Selectman Sullivan explained, suggesting the regulation specify that on all club licenses granted by selectmen, guests be allowed entrance if they are accompanied by a member of the club.

"It sounds as if we should go at least that far," Selectman Mitman concurred."Then we'll get on record as having something."

Selectmen voted unanimously to support the regulation.

Also during Monday night's meeting, selectmen voted unanimously to support a request from the Tree and Park Department for a $1,600 reserve fund transfer. Department Supt. Peter Laugelle explained that the 12 year-old motor on a ride-on tractor can no longer be repaired. In order to have the tractor functioning by the spring, Laugelle told selectmen he can not wait until a town meeting appropriation.

Selectmen also voted unanimously to support a $322 reimbursement to the town's insurance company. That covered the town's deductible payment on a claim made by a man whose motorcycle was damaged from a pothole on Hull Street. The town was held liable for the damages, according to Executive Secretary Andrew, who said the hole was immediately repaired.

The board also voted to support a request for a $10,000 payment to Electronic Voting Machine Corp. for the purchase of electric vote tallying machines. The appropriation was made at the April town meeting, and the equipment has been tested during the past three elections. The $10,400 bid was the only one received for the purchase. The town clerk traded in the previous vote counter and received $500 which left a remaining balance of $9,900.

Selectmen accepted the resignation of Jacqui Fahy from the Cultural Exchange Committee. They also voted to appoint Dean Harrold to the conservation commission.

Selectmen went into executive session to discuss a grievance filed by the Cohasset Patrolmen's Association. The closed session was requested by the personnel committee, saying it was a matter related to contract negotiations.

Seahawks Gold defeats Blue in 6-5 thriller

On Sunday, Nov. 2, the fans were treated to the most exciting Mite B hockey game of the season. In a battle of unbeaten teams, the Seahawk Gold team, coached by Ted Malley, edged out a resilient Seahawk Blue team coached by Ed Kelly, 6 to 5.

At the beginning of the season, the coaches do their best to distribute the 100 or so 7-, 8- and 9-year-old kids from Cohasset, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell and Scituate as evenly as possible. Not only does every child play an equal amount of time but hopefully they line up against those of equal ability. This weekend's game, that was still in doubt during the last minute, is a tribute to their efforts.

Two swift stickhandlers, Charlie Keyes and Nick Esposito, led the Gold team with two goals and an assist apiece. Bobby Allen added a goal and some great passing, and Marcus Willy had two assists.

Leading the Blue team in a losing effort was sharp shooting Ralph Studley who scored a hat trick. He had a lot of help from his linemates, Adam Alpert, Keith Armstrong, Mark Kelly and James Marcella who added a couple of assists each. James Marcella had a breakaway goal as did speedy Evan Crockford who was a constant threat.

The game winner came with only two minutes 38 seconds left. Nick Esposito stole the puck, broke across the blue line and, despite being tripped on the play, managed to get a pass off to Adam Fuller who fired a hard shot past the Blue goalie, Matt Schortle. Matt, in his first game as goalie, was outstanding. He made several key saves to keep his team in contention.

In the final seconds, the Blue team had a power play and a last chance to tie but they were thwarted by the Gold team to preserve a hard-earned victory.

The final score was Seahawk Gold team, 6—Seahawk Blue team, 5, but there were no losers in Randolph this day.

Connie Parker stepping down from historical society accustomed to, it was home renovations.

"My husband and I purchased a 250 year-old home on the Cape in 1952 and we completely restored it. There was no water, no heat, no roof on the place. It was completely unspoiled. It took us three months to do, but together we restored it. It was fascinating."

The society paid $45,000 for the newest aquisition. The Cohasset Savings Bank granted the membership a low interest mortgage. "When we started the renovations, the neighbors were so pleased. We've done a lot of work and I'm very proud of the place."

The house was purchased through a townwide appeal. "We got hundreds of donations," she explains. "We got everything from $3 donations to thousands. But even that $3 donation was well thought-out and appreciated."

The Lothrop House has evolved, according to Mrs. Parker, into a self-supporting entity. The increasing amount of rentals and activities within the building are meeting the heating and utility costs. Last year, through vigorous fundraising efforts by the society, the mortgage was burned.

"One thing I disliked about being president was Roberts Rules of Order and raising money," Mrs. Parker states. "I hate to ask for money. I love to handle yard sales and fish chowder lucnheons, things like that. But getting on the phone or writing a letter asking people for donations, that's a very hard thing to do. I swear, I'd give the money myself if I had it."

The president recalled how she once found a primitive painting of the Lothrop family, something she considered essential to the decor of the Summer Street house. The owner of the painting offered it to the society, but at a skyhigh price of $5,000. "And," she recalled, "I had two weeks to raise the money. So I got on the telephone and asked people for a thousand dollars here, and a thousand dollars there.

"After we bought the Lothrop House, someone once told me never to ask the town for money. That way, the society will own the entire house and its contents. That's the way I wanted it," she adds. "I think of the Lothrop House as a living museum. It's not overcrowded, it's exactly the way it should be - a typical, nice home as it was when it was built in 1823."

Another 'pet' project of the outgoing president is the extensive collection of antique gowns and clothing. The items were once housed in the decaying Independence building on Elm Street. "But that place was so damp, and I was always fearful someone would trip down the front steps and fall right into the street," Mrs. Parker states. "It just wasn't feasible to continue there."

Locating a suitable museum for her treasures will be a continuing quest for Mrs. Parker. "We've done a lot of fashion shows with these beautiful gowns. We just did a Victorian Promenade two weeks ago. Margy Erickson of Charlestown has helped with these shows. She's the Civilian Clothing Advisor for the Union and Confederate Volunteers. Without her, we couldn't do all we do."

The young Cohasset teens who model these small-waisted gowns have in turn become interested in the history of the clothing they display. "I think this next generation will be more interested in preserving the history of this town than the current generation. I see it in these girls we have model, and I hope they continue that interest," Mrs. Parker says.

Will the current president miss the daily duties of her office? "I'll miss the people I worked with, meeting the public. But I won't miss running those meetings," she says, referring to the society's business sessions.

"I was getting stale," she says, once again laughing quietly at herself. "I haven't been out of town for a long time. My husband and I used to travel all the time. We loved to go hunting in Kansas, in Canada and up in Maine. We did a lot of site seeing along the Cape in the summertime. We lived there for 25 years and met people from all over.

"Now I feel like I'm running out of ideas. My husband isn't well and that is my first concern," she says.

The Cohasset Historical Society is a good, capable organization, according to its president. "And I think our grandchildren will be much more active than this current generation has been.

"I'll still be around," she promises. "I'm not dropping out of sight. I'll be willing to help out in any way. I never anticipated being an historian. I was always interested in history, but never thought I would go this far."

The society, she emphasizes, has not succeeded through her efforts alone. "Everybody in this town has cooperated, from the board of trustees to the people who gave us $3 donations."

It has never been a one-woman show, she explains, noting that all worthy accomplishments are the result of "95 perspiration, and five percent inspiration.

"That's something I was told when I attended Colby Junior College. It's worked ever since, and that was 55 years ago."

Land-taking hearing

The Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has scheduled a public hearing Nov. 13 in regard to the acquisition of land for public water supply purposes.

In response to a request made by the Cohasset Water Commission, DEQE has scheduled a public hearing at 10:30 a.m. at the office of the Metropolitan Boston/Northeast Region, 5 Commonwealth Ave., Woburn.

The commission requested the hearing to discuss a proposal to purchase 36 acres of land surrounding Lily Pond. Two developers have presented plans to subdivide and develop that land bordering the town's main water supply. An appraisal of the property is currently being conducted for the town.

☐ Mark November 8 on your calendar, it is Monte Carlo Night at the Cohasset Golf Club. Sponsored by the PSO, it will be just like a casino with all of the games available, as well as food prepared by the Catered Affair. The cost is $15 per person (advance sale only), and there will be a door prize, a cash bar, and loads of fun. Call a PSO member for more details.

☐ Elizabeth W. Van Slyck, of Black Rock Road, is a new member of Northeastern University's Twenty-Five Year Associates, celebrating 25 years of service to Northeastern.

Van Slyck, retired professor of physical therapy, received a certificate and University chair in recognition of becoming an associate. The group is composed of more than 254 employees who have worked for Northeastern for 25 years or longer.

☐ Nelly B. Willshire has joined the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Real Estate Company as a sales associate, according to manager Muriel Desmond.

Willshire worked as a real estate salesperson with Associated Realty of State College, Pennsylvania and also for the Billingual Program at Penn State University. She received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Music from the Catholic University of Peru and studied French for four years at the Alliance Francaise. She has also completed real estate courses in financing and law at Penn State University.

A Cohasset resident, she is active in the Cohasset Garden Club, Cohasset Golf Club and Cohasset Indoor Tennis Club. She and her husband Frederick are the parents of two sons, Frederick and Frank who attend Cohasset High School where they are members of the school's tennis team.

☐ As we all know, Nov. 11 is the day the Armistice was signed. It is also a special day for Henry Kennedy (also known as "Bunny" or "Gramp"), for that is the day he will be celebrating his 90th birthday! Bunny was "over there" on that Nov. 11 when the Treaty was signed which brought peace to our Nation. Bunny is now in the Del Manor Nursing Home in Rockland. Although he cannot celebrate as he would like to, his friends send him a special Birthday Greeting!! Bunny served in the 101st Div. Co. K from Cohasset and saw many battles in France.

South Shore Art Center officials attempt to break ground during Sunday's official ceremonies. The new $1 million art center will be located at the corner of Pleasant Street and Ripley Road. Participating in the cement-breaking were (l to r) Margaret Dillon, Sheldon Ripley, Claffy Williams and Shirley Neer. (Alan Chapman)

☐ It's too bad that the Ocean State Marathon wasn't televised when it was held recently, we all could have seen Cynthia Whealler of Jerusalem Road run in her first marathon. It was held in Newport, Rhode Island, was 26.2 miles long and Cynthia finished it in 4 hours and 3 minutes. Good work Cynthia, everyone is real proud of your efforts and happy to see that your training paid off in such a grand manner.

☐ The Skippers once again thrilled their loyal fans with a big win over Abington last Saturday, proving that they certainly are "Super Bowl" material (wouldn't that be fun). It was doubly exciting when Bob Durkin broke Walt Sweeney's scoring record, and Walt was there to present him with the football that he used to score. Bob is the high scorer in our division, and has a shot at breaking the State Record before the season is over. It will be hard to do next week, as they play East Bridgewater, the other contender in the league...don't miss this one; its home, its at 1:30 and it will be exciting for sure! Support our hard-working players and enjoy yourself too.

☐ When you are cleaning out your attic or basement this fall, don't throw your things away before you check to see if it can be used by the Bargain bazaar, part of the Village Fair. As they say "your junk is someone else's treasure." Things for the bazaar are being stored in the basement of Saint Anthony's rectory, and may be dropped off on Mondays, Wednesdays or Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

☐ Finally, don't forget the Beechwood Congregational Church's tenth annual antique show that will take place this weekend (Nov. 8) at the Deer Hill School from 9-5. There will be things for sale as well as things that will be on display, a snack bar and lots of fun for the "browser" as well as the buyer.

☐ Don't forget to report your family news, everyone should know it!

Field hockey, soccer teams prepare for state tourney

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner Correspondent

Field Hockey

The girls started off their final week of the regular season by crushing Duxbury 4-1. This victory marked the first time in over 13 years that Cohasset has beaten the Dragons in Duxbury. Coach Clare Brady was very pleased with her team's performance and felt Cohassset turned in one of its best passing games of the season. However, the key to the victory, according to Brady, was the fact that the Skippers used their overwhelming speed and blew by Duxbury on many occasions.

Cindy Spooner and Maureen Farren had a pair of goals a piece. Brady cited Kerri Cullinane and Sarah Bishop as playing very well on offense. Debbie Hartley also turned in a good effort for Cohasset.

In the girls' final game before the tournament, Cohasset walked over Norwell 4-0. Brady felt her team dominated almost the entire game and created numerous scoring opportunities. Brady believed the score of this game could have just as easily been 10-0 because of all the shots her team just missed.

Cindy Spooner led the team with 2 goals followed by Sarah Bishop who had one and Kerri Cullinane who picked up one as well. Maureen Farren did a great job of creating scoring opportunities and assisted on all 4 of Cohasset's goals. Heather St. Onge, Liz Williams, and Jackie Lydon all played well for Cohasset.

The girls open up the tournament this week on Wednesday when they face Dighton/Rehoboth. Cohasset was seeded fourth in the tournament and is looking forward to a victory in round one of this year's tournament. If Cohasset should win on Wednesday, the girls will play on Friday and face either Medway or Bellingham.

This year Cohasset was represented in the South Shore league all star game by an amazing 5 players: Maureen Farron, Sara Dickermann, Maria Cahill, Cindy Spooner and Lisa Shumaker. Coach Clare Brady was bestowed the honor of coaching the coastal team in the all star game because of Cohasset's second place finish in the league.

Boys' Soccer

Two weeks ago, after a long ten-day rest, the boys beat Abington, 4-2. After being down 1-0 and getting off to a slow start, Cohasset bounced back and scored 4 quick goals before halftime to squander any of Abington's hopes for a victory. Coach Dan Magner was proud of the way his team came back after being down a goal to win the game decisively.

Jim Reidy, Adam Durant, Todd Fitzpatrick and Ian Smart all picked up goals for the Skippers. Magner singled out Todd Fitzpatrick as being outstanding on the field.

The boys' next challenge was to defend their league title against Norwell which they did successfully by tying Norwell 0-0. Magner felt his team played well but had a tough time trying to defend against Norwell's primitive kick and run style of playing. However, Cohasset ended up outshooting Norwell by a 2 to 1 ratio and totally dominated the game the last 15 minutes.

Magner felt that Jim Gallagher, David Shultz, and Ned Chase all played well for Cohasset.

Saturday, the boys tied rival Sandwich 0-0. The Skippers played an outstanding game and were especially impressive on defense. Cohasset also showed alot of finessse in its passing game as well.

Defensively, the boys were led by Steven Meyers, Jim Gallagher and John Reidy who were like "pillars" according to Magner. Ian Smart, Kostas Roukanakis, and Jim Reidy all played well and created many scoring opportunities. This tie with Sandwich qualified the boys for the state tournament. Thursday, the boys killed East Bridgewater 5-1. Magner felt his team turned in a solid effort and did what it had to do in order to win. Magner was impressed with the way in which his team refused to play down to the level of the weaker East Bridgewater team.

Jim Reidy scored 30 seconds into the game and then scored again just before halftime. Todd Fitzpatrick picked up 2 goals and Ian Smart had one for Cohasset. Todd Fitzpatrick had a great day offensively for Cohasset along with David Shultz who had two assists. John Linsley also turned in a good effort on defense. This victory won and insured the league title for the Skippers.

Friday, in the boys' final game of the regular season, Cohasset tied a fired up Duxbury team 0-0. The game was pretty even all along until the last 15 minutes when Duxbury began to dominate and put tremendous pressure opn Cohasset's defense. At this point, the defense shone and refused to let Duxbury score. Magner was happy that his team never gave up and felt the boys showed alot of character by hanging on tough in this game.

Defensively, the boys were led by goalkeeper Joel Reidy who had an outstanding game in net. Ned Chase also played well on defense and shut down Duxbury's leading offensive player. John Linsley and Jim Gallagher had good games as well.

In the South Shore league all star game Saturday night John Reidy, Jim Reidy, Todd Fitzpatrick and Ian Smart all played representing Cohasset. Coached by Dan Magner, these boys all played very well and were very impressive to the other coaches in the league.

Tuesday, the boys begin the tournament when they face an extremely talented Marion team. Magner feels that because of the great way in which his team has played all year against tough competition, Cohasset should fare well against Marion. Should the boys win on Tuesday, they will play Bristol-Plymouth on Saturday.

Girls' Soccer

The girls started off the last week of their season by crushing East Bridgewater, 4-0. This victory marked the first time the girls have ever been able to beat East Bridgewater away. Coach Kennan Startzell was pleased with the way in which his team kept its composure and not become flustered as a result of East Bridgewater's rough style of play.

Caitlin Staunton led Cohasset offensively with two goals followed by Kerri Kirkendall and Jen Coley who each had one. Startzell cited Katie Lord and Vicky Kelley as playing well for the Skippers.

In the girls' final game on Friday against Scituate, Cohasset lost 2-0. Cohasset played well in this game especially in the second half but unfortunately was unable to capitalize on several key scoring opportunities. Startzell was proud of the fact that his team never quit and gave 100% until the very end.

Cohasset's overall record stands at 6-9-2. Startzell was pleased with the way his team progressed and improved as the season went on. The girls were always competitive in every game and carried the play against almost everybody.

Next year Startzell expects to qualify for the tournament behind the leadership of Kerri Kirkendall, Liz O'Leary, Jen Coley, Katie Lord and Katie Murphy. Startzell said, "I enjoyed this year and am looking forward to next year."

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Norma Telesco
Home Center Realty

DETERMINING YOUR HOME'S MARKET VALUE

With the recent interest rate declines, we are seeing a lively real estate market and, in general, higher home prices. Even so, it's crucial to avoid overpricing your home if you plan to sell.

When you decide to list your property, your agent will prepare a market analysis for you. This will have prices of homes similar to yours that have sold recently in your area. These prices come from official sales records, and will be much more reliable than word-of-mouth information from your neighbors. The agent will help you make comparisons. You can adjust your price downward if your home lacks major updated kitchen, or fireplace. If your home has features not found in the others, your agent can help you decide if a higher price is appropriate. The market analysis will give a good idea of what your home is likely to sell for. If you keep your list price within five percent of the market price, your home has an excellent chance of selling quickly and for top dollar.

One of the professionals at Home Center Realty would be happy to arrange a free market analysis of your home. Just call 749-8833 or drop by our office at 57 Water St., Hingham.

Honor to veterans

Every Veteran's Day, we take time to write something complimentary about our town's veterans. And hopefully, you take the time to read it. It's not that we are patronizing our veterans, taking but one day of the year to honor them. But there are so many more issues to peruse and subjects to discuss. Usually, our veterans are brushed aside while we highlight other, more immediate concerns.

Our daily lives have become so complicated. With fulltime jobs, children and volunteer commitments, there is little opportunity to quietly sort our thoughts. But when we can grasp that chance, it is welcomed and necessary.

If you ask a variety of persons what the definition of 'veteran' is, you would certainly receive a variety of answers. Some may consider a veteran a soldier who was involved in combat. Others may concede that anyone in the armed forces is a veteran. And what about those men and women currently enlisted?

Surely, Veteran's Day is a time to celebrate the courage of all these people, and to honor all former patriots of this country. Most of us will never know the fear and anguish of combat. For that, we must be grateful. But we must surely stand in awe and gratitude of those who stood in our defense.

Can we not take the time, next Tuesday, Nov. 11, to think about our veterans? Can we not sit down with a brother, a cousin, a father, or a grandfather and ask the questions we have longed to be answered? Stories they may have neglected to tell us, tales that have dimmed with the passing of years and new experiences.

Grandparents could explain, in grander detail than any history book, what it was like to travel to France during the world's first war. Were they frightened? Were they injured? Did they become friends with the people they were sent to protect?

Fathers can talk about their exploits aboard a PT boat or destroyer in the South Seas. Were they ever in battle? How long were they gone from home?

Brothers, perhaps still stinging from the rejection they received upon their arrival home, can tell us for the first time about a war they weren't allowed to win. Are they still bitter?

Veteran's Day is not a symbol. It is an opportunity for all to learn about our history; to acknowledge the great achievements and despair of men and women who had the courage to defend us. It is time to listen and heed their message.

Most of us can never claim to be veterans. That is both our comfort and our loss. It would indeed be an honor to stand together with the veterans of our town. It is an exclusive membership, worthy of our respect and compassion.

A good variety of costumes and characters mingled last Friday with residents of the Ripley Road Nursing Home. Greg Boyne greeted residents in his best shark costume, while his classmates await an introduction. (Kathy Perlow)

Milliken committee explains request

To the Citizens of Cohasset:

It is with much consternation that our committe finds it necessary to respond to the publicly stated position of the Advisory Board. Recently, the Milliken Field Improvement Committee approached the Advisory Board for the purpose of securing additional monies for engineering and architectural work, needed to obtain cost estimates and bid documents, to bring to the town meeting. Essentially, there were three reasons for our request:

First, and foremost, to obtain a complete set of drawings in order to determine the actual cost of the project;

Secondly, a water pipe, currently located on Lillard Field, must be moved in order to accommodate the proposed 400M track;

Thirdly, our projected costs, as determined by the previous building inspector, were only estimates, and not based on current prices.

The Advisory Board's contention, that our committee is exceeding the wishes of the town meeting is perplexing. As you can see, article 14, as presented in the warrant of June 17, 1985, is quite specific in terms of the scope of our efforts:

Article 14 (inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Clifford Mitman, Jr., and others.) To see if the town will raise and appropriate or transfer from available funds the sum of twenty thousand and no/100 ($20,000.00) dollars for the cost of preparation of plans and specifications and costs estimates for improvements to the town's outdoor athletic facilities located at Milliken Field and the upper field behind the high school; or act on anything relating thereto:"

Additionally, at the selectmen's meeting in the early spring of 1985, the chairman clearly directed our committee to obtain a complete set of drawings so that the town may be better advised in making its final determination whether or not to fund the project.

The relocation of the varsity game site and track to Lillard Field was purely a financial consideration, resulting in savings of approximately $200,000 dollars. With the proximity of the high school, the need for bath rooms, storage and concession areas, could be accommodated through existing facilities in the main building. Further, the repositioning of three fields at the Milliken site would provide for greater community and recreational use, as well as practice areas for all junior high and high school athletic teams.

The role of the school facilities committee clearly includes providing for playing and practice sites for high school students. Our group has met with the school facilities committee and received their blessing in the pursuit of this project.

Our committee recognizes that there are a number of costly and necessary undertakings for budget consideration. It is not our intention to elevate the priority of this project beyond what the town sees fit to do. We are, however, trying to respond to what we consider to be an obvious need to improve the quality of space available to the community at large and our young people. Our resolve is clear, and we will continue to act within the scope of warrant article 14 and the mandates of the town meeting.

Committee

Advisors clarify budget rejection

To the citizens of Cohasset:

The purpose of this open letter is to clarify the reasoning behind the advisory committee's unanimous rejection of the "Milliken Field Project" committee request for an additional $16,000 to "Complete Engineering Drawings."

The following issues were considered in our decision.

1) The special Town Meeting article which authorized the original $20,000 funding for this project passed by only four votes (126-122) leaving the town's position on this issue far from clear.

2) Our understanding of the intent of the article approved by Town Meeting was that the funds were to be used to develop plans which are sufficiently detailed to allow for preparation of good quality cost estimates. With this information in hand Town Meeting could then take an informed vote on the overall merits of the project. In our judgment the Milliken Field Project Committee intends to go beyond this intent by having final construction engineering drawings prepared.

3) When they appeared before us to request additional funding, the Milliken Field Project Committee and their project engineer indicated that they already had done sufficient work to establish a good project cost estimate. This estimated cost for Phase I of this project is $550,000.

4) The reserve fund, which is used to meet the unanticipated critical town expenses, was funded by Town Meeting at $115,500 for fiscal year 1987, which ends June 30, 1987. At this point we have $98,000 remaining. In each of the past several years we have spent the entire reserve fund, therefore we have little margin for error.

In summary we believe that the Milliken Field Project Committee is exceeding the mandate of the Town Meeting by attempting to proceed to the final construction drawing stage. We believe that the work done thus far has provided adequate project costing information for presentation to Town Meeting. We believe that no additional town money should be spent until Town Meeting votes to proceed with the proposed project.

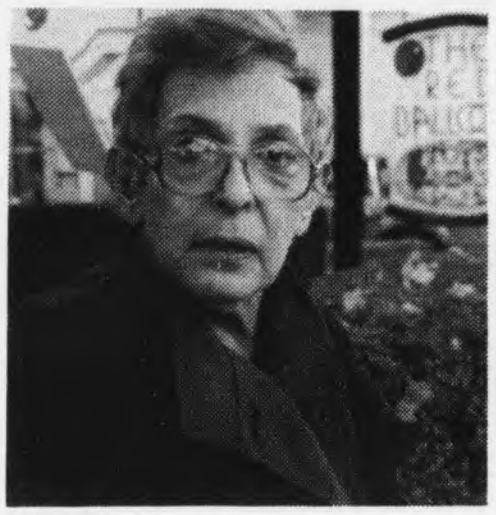
What do you think about commuter rail restoration?

"I commuted to work every day and have taken the train, the bus and my car in from Cohasset. I'm definitely not for the train coming back. It would destroy a lot of property. Now, people use the tracks as a place to ride their horses; this would deprive them of a safe place to ride."

-Sigrid Carey

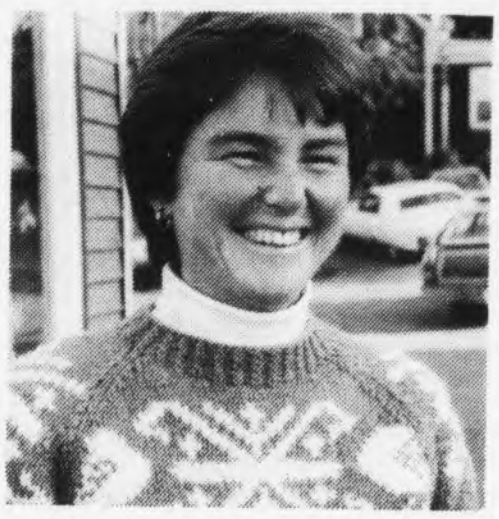


"I believe in public transportation, but would like buses instead of trains. There's no transportation here and I believe the whole south shore should have it. It would save people from bringing their broken-down cars into Boston."

-Alice Kulturides

"I think it would be fantastic. I used to ride them when I first moved to Scituate years ago. They were wonderful, but filthy. If they could bring them back and clean them up, it would be great!"

-Carol Russel

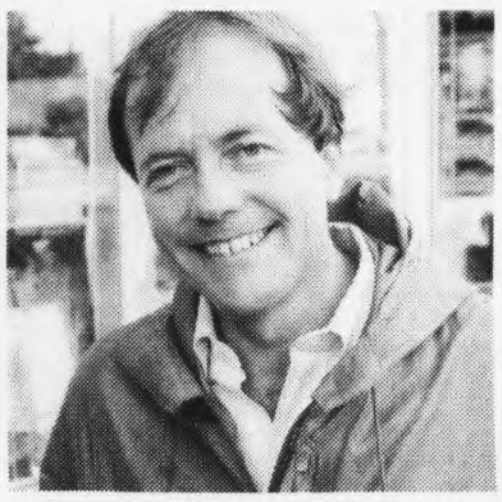


"I think it would be great. It doesn't help us personally; we would go on Route 128. But I think the elimination of any traffic on routes 128 and 228 would be an advantage to a lot of people."

-Martha Loiter

"I'm against it. Everyone has built over it and now it would interfere with people's privacy. Also, people might get hurt. They need some kind of service, but I don't think they could use the old tracks because it's been built up over the years."

-Charles Michaels



"It's a good idea, but there still would be a problem for people who need to get beyond Boston. I couldn't use it, because I work in Brookline. But I still think it's a good idea. The more public transportation we have, the better off we are."

-John Martin

"We're poorly served on the south shore. It's not that the Greenbush Line would be a panacea for our problems, but perhaps it's a solution to some of our problems."

-David Alexander

"It's a great idea, but I think I'll be an old man before I see it happen. There are too many obstacles to overcome."

-Jim Collins

Thanks for Wheelwright Park restoration

Letters

To the Editor:

Wheelwright Park, located off North Main Street in Cohasset, has been the site of several public-use projects since the days of the WPA in the 30s. The WPA had cleared several picnic areas in which they had built fireplaces and located benches, and had excavated and built an ice skating pond. Over the years, the skating pond and the picnic areas have become overgrown by vegetation, and the benches have been destroyed either by vandals or the weather. Fortunately, Wheelwright Park is adjacent to the Troop 28 Boy Scout camping area, and the Boy Scouts try to keep the area presentable.

Last year, Life Scout Nicholas Lelecas selected the beautification of Wheelwright Park for his Eagle Scout candidate project. He, and the group of scouts and other volunteers who he directed cleared back the brush and tree growth from the long-abandoned picnic areas and removed the fallen trees, brush and debris from the skating pond. He installed a new sluice-gate to control the water height, and for the first time in many years, the skating pond was used by the neighboring residents last winter. Last summer, he and his group of scouts and volunteers built and installed 8 new benches at the picnic areas and along the trails for the convenience of the public. In addition, they constructed and installed new oak signs with trail directions and point of interest information, which they placed along the trails.

Nicholas Lelecas would like to thank L & R Realty, Cohasset Hardware, Mr. Rocco Laugelle, Mr. Arthur Lehr, True Value Hardware of Hingham and the New England Altar Company of Quincy for their generous donation of materials for this project, and the many scouts and volunteers who turned out during the year to help restore Wheelwright Park.

The winners were as follows: Scariest: Erin O'Leary and Tara Gallagher; Most-Artistic: Lori Galland; and Shona Hislop & Katie (tie) Brennock; Most Comical: Meka-Marie Laugelle; Prettiest: Kathleen O'Brien and Colleen Fitzsimmons; Most Original: David Aronson; Preppiest: Tracy Hyde and Jennifer Anstead; Punkest: (tie) Mark Mercurio, and Tracy Reardon; Cutest: Alyson Gallant.

Artist of the month

Artist of the Month is a new program in a way. Last year the ladies came to our classes, but they only came three times. My mom started the program, so I know all about it. Artist of the Month started in Illinois, in my old school, but it was called Picture Lady. Also, my mom used to take me to the Art Institute of Chicago and soon I could identify artists like Vincent VanGogh and Marc Chigall.

Artist of the Month is when a volunteer mother comes in and talks about the artist of the month, like Vincent VanGogh. They show pictures and talk about the artist's life. Every month a new artist and a new mother come (the artist doesn't come; just copies of his or her pictures). Most of the time the kind of artist is different each month. Artist of the Month helps get us interested in different artists and their work.

I think that having a different mother every month is nice because you can meet everyone's moms. My mom is teaching my class next and I can't wait to see what we're doing!

Modern European History Meeting

Edward F. Sheehan, chairman of the Jr./Sr. High School Social Studies Department, attended a meeting recently of the southeastern Massachusetts Association For Advanced Placement European History Teachers.

Mr. Sheehan has taught Advanced Placement Modern European History at Cohasset High School since 1974. The meeting was held in The Professional Development Center at Duxbury Intermediate School.

William T. Bristol of Duxbury High School was the host for the meeting. He was assisted by two other local social studies teachers; Mr. James J. Kirkcaldy of Hingham High School and Mr. Peter J. Homen of Apponequet Regional High School.

The meeting consisted of a workshop concerning the dual topics of The Enlightenment and The Romantic Movement in Europe. Teaching strategies and materials used in the classroom were discussed during the all-day conference. Plans were made to have another meeting of the group—this time at Apponequet Regional High School in February of 1987.

Teachers who attended were from: Cohasset High, Hingham High, Duxbury High School, Boston College High School, Xaverian High, Bishop Stang, North Quincy High, Amherst High and Whitman-Hanson Regional High School.

Volunteers prepare for Village Fair Dec. 6

Virtually all the leading players for Cohasset's 46th annual Village Fair are in place, and in production of gift and decorative items that will go on sale, Saturday, Dec. 6 around Cohasset Common.

Handmade gifts of all types for the Boutique are being fashioned at weekly work meetings in the vestry of the Congregational Church as are a host of attractive articles for the Children's Table and the Secret Room.

Attic and basement treasures, as well as racks of used books, are being gathered in St. Anthony's Rectory basement, while work on the preliminary decorations for the hundreds of wreaths is the focus of Wednesday morning work sessions in an Atlantic Avenue home.

While much has already been accomplished by the workers, all these committees would welcome additional helpers and issue a cordial invitation to any prospective volunteer.

All these preparations and many more have been set up and are being monitored by the Central Committee, chaired this year by Annette Sawchuk of the Congregational Church. The other churches are St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal, First Parish Unitarian and Panagia Greek Orthodox. The participation of five denominations in a single fund-raiser is believed to be a unique instance of ecumenical effort.

As usual, many familiar local names are found on the organization chart for the Fair as people continue with responsibilities they have held for several years, but more than ever this year new workers have been enlisted to infuse the institution with new vigor.

Susie Coley and Wilma Vanderlugt join Mrs. Sawchuk as representatives to the Central Committee from the Congregational Church. June Simeone is the representative of St. Anthony's, while Carol Martin represents the Unitarian Church, Sheila Wallingford St. Stephen's, and Cindy Dedes and Linda Argeros are the Greek Orthodox Church members. Phyllis Peck is serving as secretary to this Central Committee.

The mix of veteran workers and enthusiastic newcomers prevails among the chairs of a number of the larger and more active committees. Heading the Boutique activity is Carol Sandblom who has been prominent in this major activity for several years and has organized a nearly year-long schedule of preparation. Jane Long of St. Anthony's and Nancy McLaughlin of the Unitarian Church are co-chairs of the Children's Table, another feature which requires extensive advance preparation. Ann Delaney of St. Stephen's heads the popular Secret Room, which offers youngsters a chance to shop in private for modestly priced gifts for their parents.

Gail Bell, General Chairman of the Fair last year, has taken over as chair of the Bargain Bazaar, an activity that will fill Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House with a mountain of used but still useful items of all types. Plants are being collected by a committee headed by Sheila Wallingford of St. Stephen's Church, while Alice Daunt of St. Anthony's and Helen Hooper of St. Stephens' continue with their familiar oversight of books.Kiki Booras is chair of the baked goods and candy sale, while Ralph Coley has taken on the chairmanship of the busy and popular Chowder Bar which again will operate in the Congregational Church.

Jean Manganaro again heads up the big job of organizing the making of wreaths, Kate Caldwell is chair of the Children's Activities and Jim Dedes has the major responsibility for gathering and selling home-made food, including Greek specialties and a salad bar. Familiar names associated with popular features of the Fair are Marilyn Hobson, popcorn; Ham Tewksbury, cheese; Phil Shockman, Snack Bar; and Jeff Steele, Santa.

This year will mark the return of the program of a Village Fair Dinner on the evening of the Fair, December 6, and tickets for this feature which was once a highpoint of the Fair day, are already on sale through representatives in the individual churches.

Ruth Nedrow of the Congregational Church, is chair of this event, assisted in that church by Tish Jordan, while representatives in the other churches are as follows: St. Anthony's, Susan Reardon and Joan Larrabee; Unitarian, Ann Churchill and Mary Anne White; St. Stephen's, Sally Avery; and Greek Orthodox, Sophia Koutrobis. The dinner will be held, as it was for many years, in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church.

St. Stephen's will also be the site this year of the Secret Room in a move from the Congregational Church that offers larger quarters for this extremely popular feature.

Historical Society news

SUMMER SEASON

Once again the Society's Elm Street museums experienced a successful summer season. A discernable increase in attendance accompanied the presence of Warner Brothers' film crew and several film stars, during weekends of July and August.

Visitors included travellers from a number of countries and from many of the United States. The town's Recreation Department held two tours of the buildings, once in the spring, and the other recently held as a "post-season" tour. This summer marked the 50th year of Society ownership of the Capt. John Wilson Historical House, an 1810 Sea Captain's home given to the Society by William Hamilton McGaw in 1936.

Members of the Cohasset Garden Club again spent many hours maintaining the lawn and gardens around the Society's two museums, and continue to elicit compliments from both visitors and passers-by. The Garden Club's continuing efforts at the Elm Street buildings have created a visual centerpiece for the town's historic business district.

THE GOWN COLLECTION

Even though we do not have a Gown Museum, we have over 600 articles of clothing to care for - gowns, hats, fascinating underwear, gloves, shoes, even "high button" shoes, parasols, canes or walking sticks, men's clothing, top hats, and last but not least, small children and babies' beautiful long christening gowns, short dresses and dolls clothes.

All have been moved once again, from the basement of the Lothrop House and the Maritime Museum to a private home (to remain nameless), where all has been sorted, hung to dry or boxed again temporarily until permanent quarters are found to store and display it.

One dress "found" recently had a tag on it saying "1807. Becky Bates." Could this be the Rebecca Bates famous for playing the fife or beating the drum in the War of 1812, who scared the British ships away from the Scituate shores?

Gowns have been loaned to many individuals and groups. One outfit of the 1916 era worn to a luncheon at Lake Tahoe, was judged to be the most elegant, second only to the hostess.

We must find a proper place to store properly, and also show this fantastic collection of gowns and clothing that was once advertised as "Second only to the Smithsonian," which is truly believable.

Did you know that the American Constitution was written in Cohasset during the summer of 1986??? In the Society's Capt. John Wilson Historical House?

In reality, Boston's WNEV television Channel 7 chose the Wilson Historical House as the site for filming a promotional introduction for their series of programs devoted to the bicentennial of the American Constitution. The sequence shows a calligrapher writing the Preamble to the Constitution, and has been shown on television a number of times. More recently, a still picture photographer from WNEV replicated the same scene, using the hand and arm of the Society's Curator "writing" the Preamble.

During late July and August the Society's Capt. Wilson House carried the sign of the "Eastwick Historical Museum" for the filming of Warner Brothers' film version of John Updyke's novel "The Witches of Eastwick." A number of the scenes featuring Hollywood personalities Jack Nicholson and Cher were filmed using the Capt. Wilson House and Maritime Museum as background. Both WNEV and Warner Brothers made sizeable donations to the Society for the use of our buildings.

South Shore Science Center news

World's End in Hingham is a special place in any season. The leaves will be off the trees so you can enjoy winter silhouettes and broader vistas. Join naturalist Marshall Katler on Wednesday, Nov. 12 from 9:30 a.m. to noon for an adult/family guided walk sponsored by the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell. Route and destination will be influenced by the weather. Meet at the Natural Science Center, Jacobs Lane, off Route 123. Pre-paid registration required (members/$7; non-members/$9). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

FINDING YOUR WAY

Have you ever walked through the woods on a path and wished you could venture off the path in any direction without being lost? Enjoy an autumn day with Bill Perkins, naturalist, learning how to use a compass, pacing and other methods to find your way in a scavenger hunt. Dress appropriately for the weather. Meet at the Science Center on Thursday, Nov. 13 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Pre-paid registration required (members/$4.50; non-members/$6). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

PET CARE

Snakes, turtles, rabbits, spiders! Pets? They are called exotic pets because they are so unusual, but they do make great pets! Join Dr. Barbara Kohn, Norwell's new veterinarian, on Saturday, Nov. 15 from 10 a.m. to noon and learn more about caring for your pet. If you have an unusual pet (no cats or dogs, please) and would like to bring it to show, please tell the Science Center at registration. Pets must be in a cage! Pre-paid registration required (members/$4; non-members/$5). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

Village Fair - children's table

Workshops are being held Wednesdays from 12:30 - 2:30 p.m. and Thursdays 7:30 - 10 p.m. at the Congregational Church.

Both workshops need volunteers. If you would like to help out and cannot attend the workshops kits are available. There is also yarn and fabrics available for anyone to fashion into an item for the table.

Please call Nancy McLaughlin for further information at 383-0167.

Any help you can give will be greatly appreciated.

Amateur gardeners to meet

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet on Tuesday, November 18, at 1:00 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Edith Quigley.

The program, "Flowers by Jan", will be presented by Jan Lydon from North Marshfield.

Audubon talk Nov. 6

An illustrated talk on India and Nepal entitled Off the Beaten Track will be presented at 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 6, at the Massachusetts Audubon Society's South Shore Sanctuaries headquarters, 2000 Main St., Marshfield.

Explore southwestern India and central Nepal by foot, boat, train, bus and elephant.

Learn about the culture, developmental and energy issues and wildlife concerns as an atypical tourist.

Steve Nadel, an energy scientist for Mass. Audubon will be guest speaker. Cost is $3 for members, $4 for non-members.

On Friday, Nov. 7, an 8:15 a.m. birdwalk at Third Cliff in Scituate is planned. Cost is $2 for members, $3 for non-members.

On Saturday, Nov. 8, at 10 a.m. a natural history walk is planned for the Scituate Glades. Come dressed for the weather. Cost is $2 for members, $3 for non-members.

The Audubon Society is planning children's programs during Thanksgiving vacation. On Nov. 28, a program about getting ready for winter will be held, and on Nov. 29, youngsters will learn about building a bird feeder.

Hingham Church Fair

The Hingham Congregational Church, 378 Main St. (Rte 228), will sponsor its "Country Fair" Saturday, November 15, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

A wide variety of country and holiday folk art, including hand-made and stencilled wooden items, dolls, wreaths, knitted articles, ornaments and plants, will be available.

The Fair will also feature a Wishing Tree, baked goods, such as holiday pies, frozen for your convenience, as well as baked beans, chili, cheese, jams and jellies. Some of the "Antiques and Collectabales" are Fiestaware, crystal stemware, old Whiting and Davis mesh handbags, and an unusually fine green velvet Victorian album.

The "Trash or Treasure" tables will offer a large selection of household and kitchen items, plus lamps, pictures, toys costume jewelry and sporting goods.

Artist Jane Tooker of Scituate will display some of her oil and acrylic paintings, including those of popular children's storybook characters.

Children can enjoy their own area for games and entertainment, and hotdogs will be on sale. Homemade "Morning Muffins" can be purchased from 9:30 until 11:30 a.m., when a country luncheon of home-made soups and sandwiches will be served until 1:30 p.m.

Annual dinner meeting

Tuesday, Nov. 18 is the date of the Society's Annual Meeting with catered dinner and a special evening program. The location will be Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House, the time of the dinner will be 6:30 p.m. There will be a short "social hour" starting at 6 p.m. with wine available for a $1 donation. Caterer will be Jessica, and the menu will feature the popular sherried beef with wild rice, salad, vegetables and dessert.

The special guest speaker for the evening is Eugene Baril, official historian of the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles, whose subject will be "early automobiles and automobiling." Mr. Baril is a student of early automobiles and automobiling in Massachusetts, and has gathered extensive information about this fascinating aspect of the late 19th and early 20th century scene.

Advance reservations for the special evening are $10, and must be made by Tuesday, Nov. 11. Checks payable to Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, MA 02025. Phone reservations taken at 383-6930 or 383-1351. Please remember, advance reservations are a must.

Balladeer program Nov. 6

Arthur Schrader, a singing historian and ballad singer at Old Sturbridge Village, will present a family program Thursday night Nov. 6, at the Cohasset High School at 7 p.m. in the Audio visual room.

Come and hear folk and popular songs from 300 years of American History.

Schrader's program has been described as an outstanding educational experience, fun and informative.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

Hospice to hold open house

The staff and volunteers of the Hospice of the South Shore will hold an open house Sunday afternoon, November 9, for families who have been involved with the Hospice program. The event is an opportunity to renew contracts and share experiences.

The Hospice of the South Shore provides comprehensive home health and support services to patients and their families. Since 1979 the agency has served ten communities in the South Shore area, including Braintree, Weymouth, Quincy, Holbrook, Randolph, Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull.

The Hospice open house will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. in the offices of the VNA Foundation of the South Shore, 400 Franklin Street, Braintree Five Corners.

Church antique show

The Beechwood Congregational Church will hold the Tenth Annual Antique Show and Sale, from 9-5 p.m. on Nov. 8 at the Deer Hill School.

Antiques such as primitives, glassware, jewelry, furniture and other collect ibles will be on sale and display.

This is the tenth year the Beechwood Congregational Church has sponsored an antique show and sale. The first antique show and sale was held at Cohasset Town Hall under the direction of Ruth Frost and ran for two straight days.

For your convenience there is a public snack bar to satisfy your appetite with coffee, tea, cold drinks, hot dogs, sandwiches and dessert.

Free ample parking is also provided.

Mark your calendar for Nov. 8 at Deer Hill School, from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. for the Tenth Annual Antique Show and Sale, a tradition started ten years ago.

Late basketball registrations

Late registrations for the Cohasset Recreation/Boosters Basketball League will be accepted this week at the Recreation Department Office, at town hall.

The program is for boys and girls, grades 2 through 9. The fee is $10.00, with a 50 percent discount offered to subsequent children registering from the same family. Checks are to be made payable to "Town of Cohasset". There will be a $4 team shirt charge per player.

It is important that your son/daughter attends a 45 minute evaluation session Saturday, November 15, according to the following schedule:

Time/ Location	H.S. Gym Down	H.S. Gym Up	Deer Hill Gym
9 a.m.	Gr. 4 Boys	Gr. 6 Girls	Gr. 2 Both
10 a.m.	Gr. 5 Boys	Gr. 7 Girls	Gr. 3 Both
11 a.m.	Gr. 6 Boys	Gr. 8 Girls	Gr. 4 Girls
12 noon	Gr. 7 Boys	Gr. 9 Girls	Gr. 5 Girls
1 p.m.	Gr. 8 Boys
2 p.m.	Gr. 9 Boys

Coaches will draft balanced teams based on these evaluations! Your son/daughter will then be contacted by his/her coach within a few days to indicate the time and place of the first game on Saturday, November 22.

No games are scheduled during any holiday periods in order to avoid conflicts. Including playoffs and finals, a total of 8 games will be played by all participants. The season concludes February 7, which is the Saturday prior to the start of Winter Vacation.

Thank you for your continued support. As in the past, refreshments will be available during the season at the high school only.

Plantation Offers Workshops

Plimoth Plantation will offer two November workshops on the art of making year-round herbal home decorations.

On Monday, Nov. 3, a workshop entitled "Wall Decorations (Hats and Swags)" will be conducted by staff herbalist Darlene Beauvais of Norwell from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Winslow Membership House, 10 River St., Plymouth. Class members will use dried herbs and flowers to trim a straw hat or create a decorative herbal swag to bring home.

On Monday, Nov. 10, an "Herbal Wreaths" workshop will be held from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the Winslow Membership House, Participants will learn the craft of herbal wreath-making, arranging lavender, artemisia, nigella, silver king, sweet annie and other dried herbs and flowers to make a wreath suitable for gift-giving or home decoration.

Class members are asked to bring scissors and a pair of garden clippers to workshops. The fee for each workshop, including all materials, is $25 for non-members, $20 for museum members. For more information, or to register, call the Membership Department at 746-1622, ext. 80.

Plimoth Plantation is the outdoor living history museum of 17th century Plymouth. Located on Warren Avenue (Route 3A), three miles south of downtown Plymouth, the museum is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Nov.30.

Seahawks Dance

The Seahawks Youth Hockey, which includes the towns of Scituate, Norwell, Cohasset, Hull and Marshfield in its youth hockey program, will be sponsoring it's annual get-together dance.

The dance will be held Nov. 15, at St. Francis Cabrini Hall, Hood St., in Scituate at 8 p.m. Tickets in advance will be $15.00 a couple, admission at the door will be $20.00 a couple.

For further information or advance tickets see your team administrator or call Linda Graves at 383-6924.

'Alice in Wonderland' to be presented at town hall

The magic of author Lewis Carroll's classic tale "Alice In Wonderland" will come to life on the Cohasset Town Hall stage this holiday season when the Cohasset Dramatic Club presents its first play of the 1986-1987 community theater season.

Playdates of "Alice In Wonderland" will be Friday and Saturday, Nov. 21 and 22 with curtain time at 8 p.m., and Sunday, Nov. 23, a matinee at 2 p.m.

Directing "Alice" will be Ellen Kelley, a teacher of dramatics at the South Shore Conservatory and Director of the Dramatic Club's productions of "Scenes From American Life" and "Scapino". Ellen also has appeared in Cohasset productions, notably in "A Man For All Seasons". She often can be seen in production aspects of Dramatic Club shows, working behind the scenes. Production Manager for the Cohasset presentation of "Alice In Wonderland" is Helen Ketcham, and Scene Designer is Sheldon Ripley.

In the role of Alice will be Cohasset's Kate DeLima, backed by a talented cast of actors and actresses of diverse ages. "Alice In Wonderland" is a play designed to be performed by a combination of youth and age, and appeals to the young and young-at-heart of any age. Veterans of numerous Cohasset Town Hall productions can be seen in the forthcoming "Alice", and newcomers to the Dramatic Club will be equally well represented in a cast numbering more than thirty.

Lewis Carroll's delightful characters will abound in this stage version of "Alice", from the Mad Hatter to the March Hare, the Cheshire Cat, and White Rabbit, the King of Hearts (and a veritable "deck" of playing cards), the Red and White Queens. the Queen of Hearts, Tweedledum and Tweedledee, the Duchess, the Dormouse, the White Knight, Humpty Dumpty, the Mock Turtle and a host of other ingenious characters will appear, as they do in Carroll's original tale.

This stage version of "Alice In Wonderland" was first staged in the 1930's and is an adaptation by the distinguished actress Eva LeGallienne with her collaborator, Florida Friebus.

In the stage version, an attempt has been made to retain the unique ambiance of Lewis Carroll's original tale. Thus, it is not simply a play for the very young, but is designed to appeal to both children and adults alike. The Dramatic Club's forthcoming November presentation of "Alice In Wonderland" promises to be a highpoint of this holiday season.

Tickets for the Cohasset production of "Alice In Wonderland" will be $4, available at the door at times of the performance, and will be available in advance prior to playweek, at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

A special Dress Rehearsal of "Alice" Thursday, Nov. 20 at 8 p.m. will welcome Senior Citizens as guests of the Club, without charge.

Appliance efficiency law will save electricity

Legislation for appliance efficiency co-sponsored by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray was recently signed into law. This new law will greatly improve the energy efficiency of major appliances.

It requires that as of January 1, 1988 refrigerators, freezers, showerheads, water heaters and fluorescent ballasts sold in Massachusetts must meet certain minimum efficiency standards. The least efficient appliance models will be prohibited from the market, while still leaving a wide variety of models and options to suit every consumer taste.

The cumulative savings to consumers are estimated to be in excess of $750 million. By the year 2000, this legislation will save between 200 and 300 megawatts of peak capacity savings, coupled with Federal appliance efficiency legislation now on the President's desk.

Rep. Murray said the bill's success was due to its broad support. "A unique coalition that included such diverse groups as the Massachusetts Audubon Society, the Massachusetts Electric Company, the Massachusetts Municipal Wholesale Electric Company (MMWEC), Boston Edison, MASSPIRG, and the Environmental Lobby. It's rare that we get utilities and environmental and consumer groups working together." Altogether 19 organizations or companies endorsed the bill.

The Executive Office of Energy Resources and the Mass Audubon Society both produced studies showing the tremendous energy and dollar savings of the bill. This information was crucial to the passage of the bill.

Rep. Murray praised the timing of the passing of the federal bill which assures that the provisions of Massachusetts' law would not be pre-empted until the Federal legislation takes effect.

Message from the director:

I have been in Cohasset at the Senior Center (COA) for ten months, and in that time I have met hundreds of wonderful people here in Cohasset. I would like to take this opportunity to thank you all for the warm welcome to the Senior Center. The time has gone by so quickly. On that very cold day in January when I started as Director, it was hard to believe that Spring would ever come. What a Spring it was! First our budget was approved at Town Meeting in April, we received funding to purchase a new Senior Shuttle, and a week long celebration in May for "Senior Center Week" in honor of Older Americans Month. The Summer months were filled with picnics, baseball games and a wonderful boat trip around Boston Harbor. Oh! We can't forget our wonderful "Cohasset Senior Shrutters." Now fifty seniors are walking and talking all over town and enjoying every minute.

Yesterday I was looking out my office window to see the Canadian Geese heading south. Could this be Autumn with the holidays fast approaching?

This year the Cohasset Council on Aging is preparing for a fun-filled holiday season, and we hope you will join us for our first annual Trim-A-Tree Party on December 12, at 1:00 p.m. We look forward to seeing you there.

Kathy Bryanton

The program will include questions & answer session. November 13, Mr. Henry Stowers - Shared Living - Housing Alternatives for Seniors. As seniors deal with physical restraints that come with aging and anticipate advancing frailty, Shared Living can be a breakthrough to continue independent living and avoid unnecessary placement in nursing homes. Join Henry Stowers of South Shore Elder Services for slides and discussion of Shared Living - Thursday, Nov. 13, at 1:00 p.m. Light refreshments served.

Senior Center Walking Club - will meet at 10:00 a.m. Tuesdays through Fridays at the Center. Special walks include: Nov. 7, Pond Meadow in Weymouth, Nov. 14 to Norris Reservation in Norwell, Nov. 21 Bear Cove in Hingham. For more information call 383-9112.

Election turnout . . .

approved 1663 to 968. Question seven, a non binding referendum regarding a national health program, was approved by a margin of 300 votes.

The final referendum, urging the national government to enact an acid rain control program, was approved by a huge margin, 2100 to 466.

The town's electronic ballot counters, used in the previous two elections, once again proved to be a time-saver for Cohasset's election workers and eager campaign staffs. All the results, including the ballot questions were tabulated within three hours of the closing of the polls.

"It's been going a lot smoother each time," Marks commented. "Another convenience that lessened the confusion at the polls was the one-way traffic around Highland Avenue the day of the election. That really helped keep the town hall area open and free of pedestrian and vehicular traffic."

Durkin sets new CHS scoring record . . .

"He's very similar to the way I was when I was a back in high school," he said. "He's big and he's fast and he runs with power.

"He reminds me so much of myself when I was a ball carrier for Cohasset High School, I can't help but think about the old days. I think he's got an excellent chance to be a good college football player."

Durkin's coach, Phil Pisano agreed.

"The kid has great savvy for the game," he said. "He picks his holes and finds openings and has the combination of power and speed.

"He's very tough to tackle," the coach added. "because he has worked very hard during the off-season with weights and has worked very hard this season in terms of staying in tip-top condition."

Pisano added, "For that record to stand as many years as it did, certainly this is a significant thing. But I think Bobby is more concerned about the team in its efforts to remain unbeaten.

"I'm sure he is very satisfied with what he's done individually, but I think he's more a team player," he said.

Durkin proved his coach right.

"I think the most important thing right now is the fact that we're 7-0 and we're ranked fourth in Division 4. That's the most important thing to me.

"The record is secondary to the team's standing; I'm just hoping we can go undefeated and get into a Super Bowl."

If Super Bowl berths were determined by desire and dedication Durkin would have his way.

Sweeney commented, "I think the basic ingredient, the most important thing for a good football player, or a good athlete in any sport, is to have a lot of heart. And Bob definitely has a lot of heart."

Pisano agreed. "His attitude is fantastic."

The same attitude and dedication that have garnered him glory on the gridiron may help him attain his higher goals.

Durkin has applied early-decision to Harvard University, where he hopes to study computer science and play Ivy League football.

But before he pahks his cah in the yahd or goes to a Super Bowl, Durkin knows he has some business to attend to.

Cohasset will battle East Bridgewater on Saturday. "This is the biggest game of the year," he said.

As Durkin attempts to add to his new single-season scoring record, the man who held the mark previously for 29 years will be in the stands cheering him on.

"I'm going to be there watching him for the rest of the season," Sweeney said, "and I hope he continues to do well. I'm sure he will, and I'm rooting for them to go undefeated."

House bill to restore Coast Guard strength

Washington, D.C. - Acting in the final days of the 99th Congress, the House of Representatives has approved legislation that "Will restore the U. S. Coast Guard to full operating strength," according to Congressman Gerry E. Studds (D-MA).

"The Coast Guard Authorization bill, along with other recent Congressional action, will give the Coast Guard the peopole and the equipment it must have to fight the war on drugs and to save lives at sea. The Coast Guard of 1987 will have 1700 more people than it had in 1986; it will have more money for training; it will have better communications equipment, new patrol boats and additional aircraft."

Representative Studds, who is chairman of the House Subcommittee on Coast Guard and Navigation, said that Congress has "finally given the men and women of the Coast Guard the support and the resources they deserve. The passage of Coast Guard Authorization and anti-drug legislation reflects the respect and confidence that the American public has for this service, as well as the importance of its missions to the health and safety of our country."

On Oct. 16, the House approved the Coast Guard Authorization Act of 1986, which calls for an increase of $135 million in Coast Guard operating expenses. The bill, which was sponsored by Rep. Studds, has been sent to the White House to be signed into law. The bill includes a provision that will authorize the transfer of vessels confiscated in drug enforcement operations to educational institutions having programs in fishing vessel safety. This provision was developed in response to a request to Congressman Studds by Cape Cod Regional Vocational High School in Harwich.

Congress also gave final approval to Omnibus Anti-Drug legislation that includes provisions sponsored by Studds to appropriate $173 million in additional law enforcement resources for the Coast Guard. The additional funds will be used to enable the Coast Guard to initiate maritime air surveillance operations off the southeast coast, and to bolster at-sea enforcement capabilities along the entire east coast.

Post offices will be closed for Veterans' Day Nov. 11

Residents are reminded that all post offices will be closed and there will be no regular mail delivery Tuesday, Nov. 11, in observance of the Veteran's Day Holiday.

In keeping with postal policy, Express Mail and Special Delivery will be delivered on the holiday. Collection boxes in local areas will be picked up according to holiday collection schedules beginning at 2 p.m., as will collection boxes in the Downtown Boston area.

Twenty-four hour service, seven days a week, is available at the Self-Service Postal Center located in the lobby of the General Mail Facility, 25 Dorchester Avenue, Boston.

The postal service is reminding customers that while Christmas may seem a long way off now is the time to plan for holiday mailings to foreign countries. This is especially true for people who have relatives in the armed services stationed overseas.

The suggested mailing date for Europe-bound surface mail is Nov. 3 and most packages destined to military personnel should be mailed in Nov. Packages weighing up to 30 pounds that do not exceed a combined length and girth measurement of 60 inches may be sent to military personnel via Parcel Air Lift (PAL). These packages are airlifted domestically to a gateway facillity and then airlifted on a space available basis to the overseas military installation. Mailers pay the regular parcel post rate to the U. S. exit port, or from the port of entry, plus a fee for air service.

The air service fee is 30 cents for parcels weighing two pounds or less; 60 cents for up to three pounds; 90 cents for up to four pounds; and $1.20 for up to 30 pounds.

Military parcels shipped in Nov. may also go by Space Available Mail (SAM). This way packages are sent by land in the continental U. S. and then are flown overseas on a space-available basis. Packages up to 15 pounds and 60 inches in combined length and girth may be sent by Space Available Mail (SAM) for regular parcel post rates.

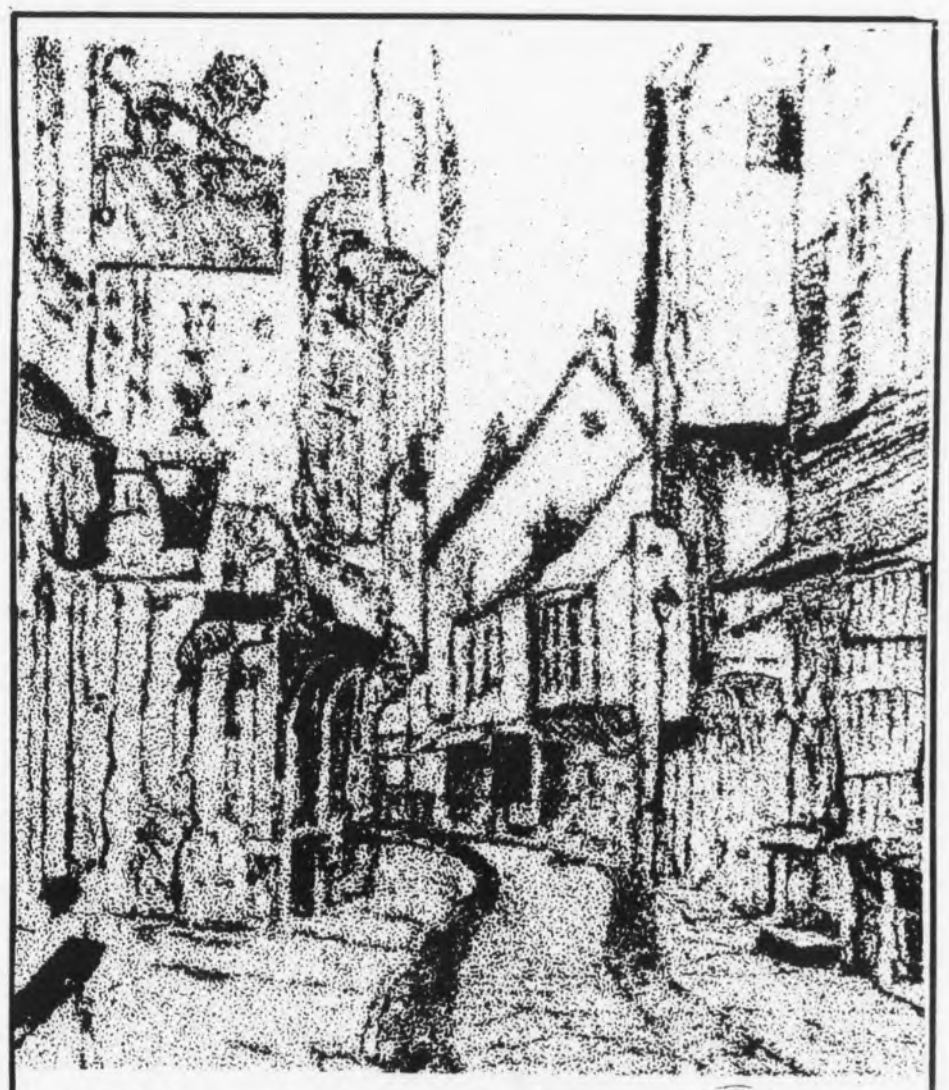
Post offices have a complete list of suggested mailing dates that customers can consult to assure their parcels and cards arrive in time for Christmas.

Montessori School news

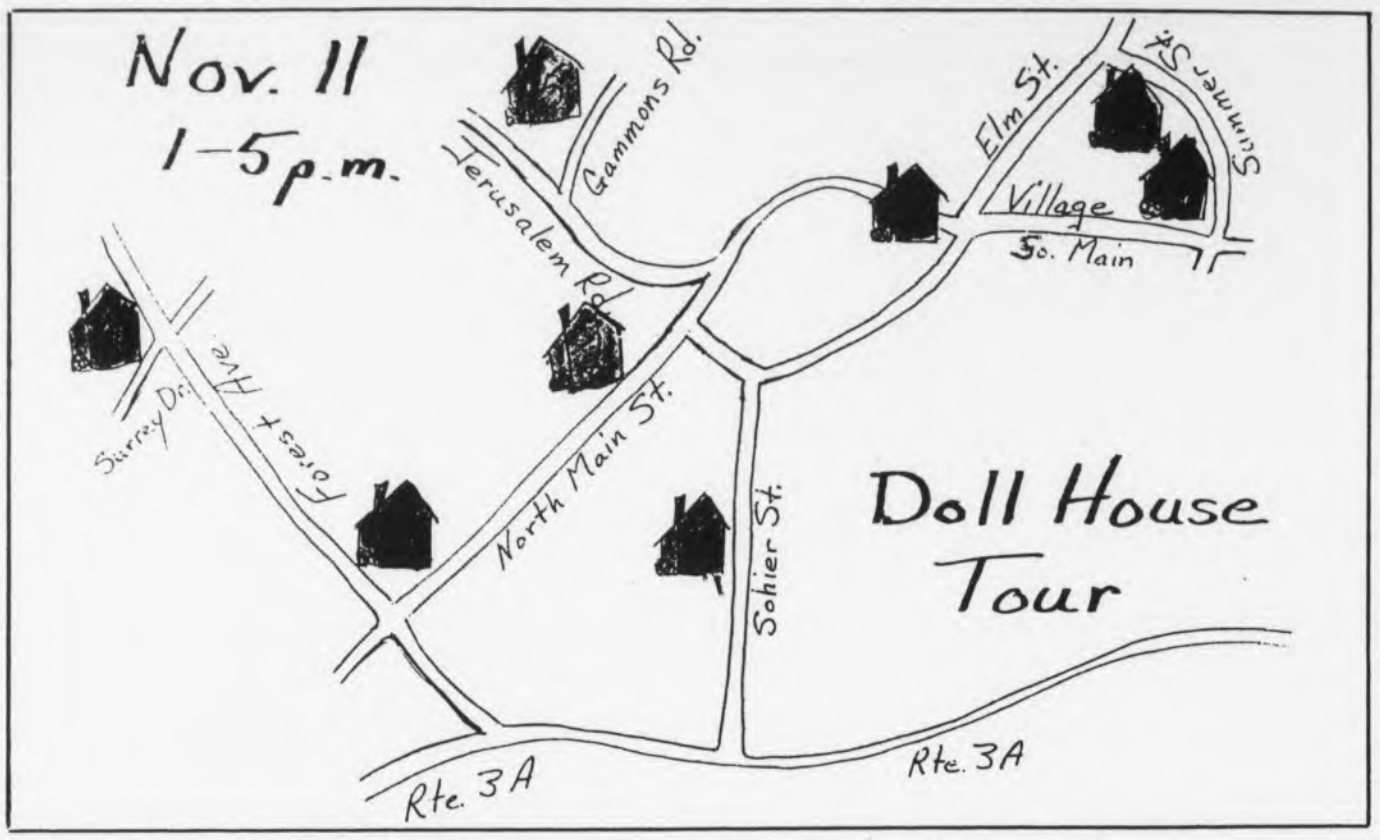
The Old Colony Montessori School at 20 Derby Street, Hingham began its twenty-third year Sept. 15. Tracy Harris, the head teacher, reports that 56 children ages two years nine months through five years old were phased into the two Childrens' House half and full-day programs. Teachers Regina Garvin, Tish Scally, and Marilyn Walsh all returned to share the Childrens' House teaching duties with Ms. Harris. Twenty-six children ages six through 10 began classes in the Junior Houses with returning teachers Mary Sanford, Chris Ackerman and Nancy Schrauth.

The school's foreign language classes, computer program, music program, and sport's sessions are in full swing under the instruction of Gerta Call, Maggie Cooney and Ginny Galpin.

The president of the Board of Trustees, Ginny Bradley, welcomed parents at the opening orientation meeting Sept. 5. A week later, she conducted the first meeting of the Board. Since O.C.M.S. is a parent run school the Board and all ten committees responsible for the school's operation consist of parents of children in the school. This unique structure allows parents' efforts to directly effect the quality of their children's eduction.



Community Center Doll House Tour to be held



The idea is novel, yet not altogether unique.

According to Judy Volungis, the community center sponsored a Doll House Tour six years ago. The success of that event led to a second tour which will be held Tuesday, Nov. 11 from 1 to 5 p.m.

"We figured this would be the perfect day," she stated. "It's a holiday, yet it's on a Tuesday so most people will be home. This will be a great outing for that day."

The tour will feature 11 doll houses, located in various homes throughout town, and at the community center at the corner of Ripley Road and North Main Street. "It's similar to a Garden Club-type house tour, where you go through the different homes decorated especially by the club members," Volungis explained. "This tour will feature doll houses and miniatures like you've never seen before. It's an amazing event."

The tour will include articles and replicas collected over the years by their dedicated owners. "Some are very elaborate," she said, "and others are children's dollhouses that have been decorated with a lot of imagination and tastefulness.

"We have everything from a four-room Colonial home to a 12-room mansion with two balconies which was built in Italy," she noted.

Proceeds from the show will benefit the center's building fund. The center is looking toward completion of their fundraising to match a grant donated by the South Shore Playhouse Associates.

"I think everyone, from grandmothers, to mothers, to daughters, to collectors, will enjoy this tour. And what a better way to get your child interested in dollhouses, than to see what these people have done with their collections," Volungis added.

"We've had calls from collectors from Hanson and Abington. There are serious miniature collectors who love these events. But it's also something anyone else can enjoy," she noted.,

Each house has a different story to tell, according to the show's organizer. "One is a general store and it has everything a store would have in it. This was just a hobby started by the owner that evolved into something more serious.

"We also have a model of the Lothrop House which will be shown at the Lothrop House on Summer Street. That one is owned by E. Lawrence Parker Jr.," she said.

The entire tour, which is spread throughout town, concludes at the community center. The Junior Gardeners, under the direction of Regina Schultz and Betsy Good, made all the table decorations for the refreshments which will be served at the center.

"The whole tour will take about two hours," Volungis explained. "When everyone is done with the tour, they can come back to the community center for tea and cookies. The Garden Club of Cohasset has been very helpful with those arrangements."

Tickets, which are $5, are available by calling the community center at 383-0088. Tickets may be picked up at the center any day, including the day of the event.

There will also be a free shuttle bus provided for senior citizens, but reservations must be made in advance. To reserve the shuttle bus, seniors are asked to call the senior center prior to the day of the show.

Among the homes featured on the Nov. 11 tour are Barbara Conte's eighteenth century house, located at 151 Sohier Street. This work of art was Carlo Conte's preoccupation during the last 15 years of his life. Mr. Conte, whose work was renowned throughout the country, even designed his own tools. All the furniture and kitchen equipment is handcrafted. Barbara's current project is the miniature flower arrangements within the stucco flower urns on the patios and terraces.

The second house belongs to Ellen Woolf of North Main Street. That is an eighteenth century house, with few modern details except for the electricity. That modern convenience, however, is used to light the rooms' candlesticks. It is a three-story Colonial, and is inhabited by the Carruthers family of four, a cook named Mrs. Banks, six dogs, a cat, a mouse and a canary. Ellen has been decorating this house for five years.

The third house tour home is owned by Ann Hublitz of Forest Avenue. The home was owned by Ann as a child and was originally furnished with plastic items. She gave the home to her daughter who gradually refinished the building. She added window boxes, shutters, new furniture and rugs. A fireplace was added along with electricity. According to Mrs. Hublitz, this house was the motivating force that led to her daughter's career. She is currently an architecture student at the Rhode Island School of Design.

The fourth home is located on Forest Avenue and is owned by Rebecca Jordan. This was a gift given to Rebecca by her grandmother who decorated it in the Jordan's early American preference. Handmade gingham curtains, oriental rugs and a pewter chandelier are just some of the handmade articles in the home which were collected all over the United States.

The fifth home is owned by Carolyn Hamilton of Forest Avenue. The miniature home is inhabited by the Robert Hamilton Sedden family who emigrated to this country in the mid-1800's from England. While on buying trips for the Joseph Horne Co. in Pittsburgh, Robert Hamilton found many interesting purchases for this magnificent house.

The sixth home is located on Gammons Road and is owned byJean Repogle. It is an exact reproduction of Jean's former Victorian home in New Jersey. Jean has landscaped the property and painted the brick walk. The home includes diamond-shaped windows and a second floor balcony.

The Lothrop House miniature reproduction will be shown at the actual Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street. It was built to scale by E. Lawrence Parker Jr. in 1978 and includes many of the details of the 1823 original.

The tour will continue to Sankey Road to view the dollhouse owned by Sarah Pease. It is a Colonial house with a fifties kitchen and bathroom which was made by Sarah's father 26 years ago. Three years ago, the home was renovated and electricty was added along with a new roof, windows and doors. It is a never-ending project for the Pease's.

There will be seven homes shown at the community center.

The homes include a replica of the house owned by Grace Tuckerman on King Street. It was built by Mrs. Tuckerman's father, William G. Russell, a former president of the community center. The second home is owned by Karin Story and is a charming Cape Cod dollhouse with furniture handcrafted by her grandfather in California. Anna Sandell's dollhouse, built in Italy and furnished with creations by the same artist, will be displayed at the center. It is a simple home, one that Anna plays with frequently.

Other displays include a Colonial owned by Shona Hislop. It is the home of the mice family and is done in a Christmas setting. Johanna Horn's Victorian house will be on display. The handcrafted house includes a special room decorated for a ballet dancer. Jean Lennon's general store is complete with a miniature pot belly stove, barrels of goodies, candy jars, dried goods, vegetables and fruits. Erin Lennon's Colonial farmhouse completes the tour. It was made by her grandfather and all the furnishings were selected by Erin.

Help Celebrate a Tradition of Caring

Visit the VNA HealthCare '75' booth for free blood pressure screening, free gifts and more!

VNA of the South Shore beginnings

In 1911 when births and surgery might take place right in people's homes, a group of concerned and energetic women organized the Visiting Nurse Association. Similar groups formed throughout the South Shore, and the great tradition of the VNA of the South Shore began.

Caring for Cohasset

In Cohasset, the early roots of the VNA of the South Shore, then known as the Cohasset Social Service League, were founded by Mrs. Oliver H. Howe. The group dedicated itself to training and caring for children and helping needy townspeople. Today, with the VNA of the South Shore, this group still continues its tradition of caring and provides a full complement of home health care and hospice services to the people of Cohasset.

A Celebration

Come help us celebrate 75 years of home health service. Stop by our HealthCare '75' booth at Stop & Shop, 790 Cardinal Cushing Hwy. on Wednesday, Nov. 12th from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. We'll have free blood pressure screening, free gifts and more!

CHS graduate chronicles life in Turkey

(This article was written by Richard Tebbetts, a 1979 graduate of Cohasset High. After a year of post graduate study at the Hotchkiss School in Conn., Richard has been traveling throughout the world. In total, he has spent more than two years traveling to the Eastern European nations, to Israel and Africa, and he is currently living and working in China. Richard expects to be in Australia within a few months. Ed.)

TURKEY: Meeting-place of the 19th and 20th Centuries

Turkey is a land where the 19th and 20th centuries meet on the gentlest of terms. The contrast is highlighted by the fact that one leaves this dry mountainous paradise without knowing which one was more enjoyable: the horse-drawn buggies of Buyuk (one of the Prince Islands in the Sea of Marmara)or the cozy,'French Riviera' atmosphere of Kas (pronounced Cash) on the Mediterranean Sea.

'Turkey is a land where the 19th and 20th centuries meet on the gentlest of terms.'

This young nation is a tourist's and historian's heaven.

Nowhere is the contrast more stark than in the former Ottoman Capital of Istanbul. The beautiful old city of Stanboul is surrounded by three internationally famous waterwavs: 'The Golden Horn,' the Bosphorus and the Sea of Marmara. From the Topkapi Palace on the bluffs overlooking these waters one sees modern ferries and ocean-going ships passing from the European to the Asian side of the city. The perfectly preserved Palace, dating from the 15th century, was the official residence of the Sultans until 1853. The palace and its beautiful gardens have been turned into a museum.

Istanbul is a leader in the production of first quality leather and textile goods. However, textiles and other supplies are carried around the old city of Stanboul in 19th century style; on the backs of men. Brightly colored wool and synthetic hats, gloves and socks abound in Turkey. The craft is ancient, the colors vivid and modern.

To really understand Istanbul and the surrounding areas one must ride up the Bosphorus. Here the traditional and the ultra-modern are side by side. Beautiful wooden homes from the late 1800's dot the shoreline next to ones built with the most modern of materials; double paned bay windows, aluminum roofing, and sky lights.

Turkish hospitality is something that reminds one of courtesy in days gone by: it is literally endless for foreigners who want it. After a five minute conversation asking for directions we were once invited to somebody's home for tea. The Turkish people are respectful of visitors. Do not be alarmed if a Turkish man or woman asks, "Where are you from?" These inquisitive people ask all foreigners these and other questions. They like talking to people from other nations!

Tea is the national drink of Turkey.At breakfast, before and after lunch and dinner, the apple, orange, cinnamon and traditional teas are served. The tea break is a national pastime. Men (not women who are working all day at home) will sit the better par of a day in a tea bar playing backgammon, cards o other games. The Turks will show a foreigner how to play backgammon in a matter of minutes. They know the strategies of the game so well that five minutes is all it takes for a game "between friends."

The cuisine in Turkey is rich in fruits, vegetables, rice, and lamb. Peaches as large as grapefruits are commonplace in Turkey. Melons, grapes, and dried fruits are available throughout Anatolia. Rice is stuffed into peppers or tomatoes or served with just a touch of meat. The well-known Turkish specialties of Sis Kebab (pronounced shish kebab--pieces of lamb, onion, pepper, and tomato skewered on a wooden pin) and fried uskumru (mackeral) must be tasted while in Turkey.

If you are visiting Turkey in mid-August, a Muslim festival, Kurban Bayram, can be seen. During this 'Sacrifice' Holiday each family slits the throat of a sheep in remembrance of the sacrifice of Abraham. In the streets of the larger cities, the ritual is performed. This festival is something very eye-opening for westerners.

The first and foremost modern Turkish leader, Mostafa Kemal Ataturk, is a national symbol of independence and strength. His pictures, statues, and quotations are everywhere. This man and his ideas alone broke the cycle of decadence that had set in in the 19th century. Ataturk, after fighting courageously in World War I, found himself without a country at the end of the war. A war of independence ensued in which Ataturk, 'the father of all Turks,' emerged as the hero. Mostafa Kemal Ataturk managed to westernize his country in many different ways. Clothing requirements, the language, the government and its laws were changed over a period of less than 15 years (1923-1938). The fez, a flat-topped conical red cap originally from the Arabic countries, was outlawed and a western style hat was worn by the new leader. Women were not (and officially are not) allowed to cover their faces with veils. The alphabet was 'Latinized' and in 1934 the Turkish people, both male and female, obtained the right to vote. Turkish men could only have one wife after the change of law outlawing polygamy.

However, Turkey's desire to 'westernize' itself could not be accomplished in just 15 years. Women still do not usually work in commercial establishments.The great majority of Turkish families are highly traditional. Women young and old stay home to do the daily chores of cooking, cleaning, and shopping. There are many little boys of six, seven, eight, or nine years of age sitting in the hot sun selling their wares. The experiences these young people get in the streets sends them on their way to manhood at a very young age. These 'young adults,' on the other hand, have no formal education and no real childhood; 19th century problems. Religious, historical and cultural differences within Turkey make a complete break with 19th values (having many children, wearing a veil) very difficult. In Istanbul, Ismir, and Ankara women are working outside the home. Young children seem very happy in Turkey. As more than one Turkish man said, "Turkish people can do anything." One step at a time.

'As more than one Turkish man said, "Turkish people can do anything," one step at a time.'

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

In baseball, as in life

That was a tough one. In baseball, as in life, loss is harder when hope has dared to come out of the hiding places of the heart. Moreover, a sporting loss to New York is worse than a loss to Chicago or Los Angeles. The proximity, the history, and the megalopolitan inequality make it so. And a close loss to the cocky, overbet-on Mets was harder than losses to the demonstrably Super football Bears and the historically second-best basketball Lakers.

Moreover, the loss to the Mets in the world series was harder than other Red Sox loses in poorer performances in previous seasons because final victory in the sixth game was so close we could taste its sweetness before the last pitch was thrown. When all of a sudden the taste of sweetness turned into a Mets rally that two nights later made them this year's champs, the emotions evoked ran deeper than the game itself. The Red Sox' loss became the girl in whose eyes we imagined we saw love, or the appointment that went to another man, or the son or daughter we did not have.

What was hardest for me to take were the office wags after the sixth game, wags who know little about baseball, wags who had more riding on the office pool than on the outcome of the ballgame—wags instantaneously excoriating John McNamara for a single unlucky role of the dice. To the wags John McNamara's unlucky roll in the sixth game has undone all the lucky, smart moves in all the games of the season. For the moment at least he is with Harry Frazee, his failure to "defense" Billy Buckner as infamous an act as the trading of Babe Ruth. Why are the wags so cruel to gentleman John McNamara?

Probably because, as it has been observed by wiser men than I, baseball is so much like life. Like life the game goes on in a pedestrian way for many years until once in a great while something thrilling happens. "Once in a lifetime" is the saying we use to describe it. But when "once in a lifetime" abruptly ends with fulfillment denied is when we are most vulnerable, and—as we rebuild the walls around ourselves—the most peevish and petty. As the condemned man waits more easily for the executioner than for his next plate of gruel, office wags tolerate their station in life far better than they do John McNamara's mistakes.

All of which says much about ourselves but does not do justice to the Red Sox and their achievements in 1986. So, before the season enters into folklore and I return to the political assignment I am generously paid not to deviate from, I would like to prick what I think is a misconception about the Boston Red Sox.

It is the notion, long cultivated in the Boston press and now given over to the national press, that Red Sox history is a torturous tale in which from time immemorial the team has found new ways of letting its supporters down. Of course there have been some instances of let-downs—notably 1972, 1974, 1977, and 1978—in which the team fell out of first place late in the season. But the true history of the Red Sox, it seems to me, is a succession of thrills, not failures.

Always the Red Sox have been interesting, as colorful in their play as the uniforms they wear. When I was a boy there was Ted Williams hitting a home run in his last game before going to war in Korea, then returning to hit .388 at the age of 39, then hitting a home run in his last career at bat at 42. Even during the lean years of the early sixties that followed Williams' retirement the Red Sox were fun. There were Dick ("Monster") Radatz, Felix (We want a hit!") Mantilla, Dick ("Dr. Strange-glove") Stewart, and many others.

Then there was 1967—the Impossible Dream. 1967 was a year that Boston, like other cities in America, was in considerable trouble. In June the hippies came to town and Roxbury nearly exploded. But by August the night air on the streets of the city was alive with people listening to the "Cardiac Kids" on transistor radios.

It is said that when Carl Yastremski came to bat in one critical situation that summer, a driver entering Callahan Tunner stopped lest he lose his radio signal—and caused the worst traffic jam in Downtown history. On another occasion when Yaz was batting, I was about to enter a church for a wedding (not my own.) By the time Yaz had homered the bride had said "I do." "Lovely "wedding!" I lied with a kiss on her cheek as I went through the receiving line at the reception.

Then there was 1975, another troubled year in Boston's history. That was the year of Tiant and Denny Doyle and rookie Fred Lynn, and, as ever, Carl Yastremski. Above all it was the year of the sixth game in the World Series when Carlton Fisk, playing on a knee that had been reconstructed the year before, hit a home run that until the coming of Dave Henderson was the most dramatic in Red Sox history.

Then there was this year, the achievements during which in my view transcend sport. A man who lost his mother in an automobile accident and returned to hit over .350—Wade Boggs. A man who lost his father and his sister to cancer yet played like an all-star all season—Rich Gedman. A man said to have apporximately as much God-given baseball talent as I do, who played like a Hall-of-Famer—Marty Barrett. A man from Texas who carried the team all season—Roger Clemens. A gentleman Mormon from Utah who carried the team in the World Series—Bruce Hurst. A man who carried the team into the World Series and whose strong Negroid features, warm smile, and outstanding play will probably do more to eradicate the last vestiges of white racism hereabouts than all the public service announcements in history—Dave Henderson.

And so it goes. It seems to me that we who follow the Red Sox have everything to be grateful for and nothing whatever to be bitter about. Good heavens, if the Cleveland Indians had played as well as the Red Sox have during the last twenty seasons their fans would have rocked the continent from the Alleghenies to the Rockies and from Keewatin on Hudson Bay even unto the Commandantes in Nicaragua. Perhaps in Boston with all those Celtics banners, with Williams and Lonborg and Yastremski, with Orr and Esposito, with Cousy and Russell and Sam Jones and Havlicek and Bird all come to please us—perhaps we have been spoiled.

I think not—only touched to the heartstrings by the best game of them all. For baseball remains a better game (and therefore a better metaphor of life) because it is all game. It is fundamentally absurd, it has no connotation of rival armies like football, or of wandering cannibals like contemporary ice hockey. A fellow throws a ball, another hits it with a bat, and if he hits it he runs toward a base. If the team of the fellow who threw the ball retrieves the ball and gets it to the base before the fellow who batted it gets there, the batter is "out." If the batter gets there first he is "safe."

The game is thus so simple that its meaning and most of its workings are as comprehensible to the "office wag" as they are to the wiliest manager. Therefore, more than any other game, baseball is liberated to touch the heartstrings of the soul. The occasional cruelty of some of the wags, then, can be explained: They have been touched. The office pool is not what really mattered.

* * * *

I must again report that this is a political column despite the liberties I take with the assignment. The reminder is necessary because this week Politicus runs for the first time in the Bridgewater Townsman and the Kingston Independent Voice—bringing to 14 the number of fine community papers regularly carrying these alleged thoughts. For me it is no exaggeration to say that the priviledge of dealing in ideas before such a literate readership redeems many sorrows I have known. Writing for two more towns on a dark November afternoon with nothing left of summer but the memory makes me think of spring training—only 16 weeks away.

We'll take it all in '87!

MUSINGS — by John H. Cutler

Todays quiz: Can you name the tongue, the pen, and the sword of the American Revolution? Answer below.

Mark Twain speaking: "All you need in life is ignorance and confidence, and then success is sure." In my opinion, incidentally, Adam didn't like apples. He ate the apple merely because it was forbidden.

Keats is supposed to have penned the most beautiful metaphor ever written in English: "Life, like a many-colored dome, stains the white radiance of eternity."

Sinclair Lewis made his stage debut with the South Shore Players in Cohasset.

Milton Berle to a heckler: "Wait a minute, Bud, I'll check my brains so we can start from scratch."

If you count the patterns in the rug or panes in the window you have arithmomania.

Answer to quiz: Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington.

What are the dimensions of 2x4's? Answer: 1½ x 3½.

I wouldn't want to take a Rohrshack test, either.

"It is the anecdote that best defines the personality"—Emil Ludwig.

If your girl friend toys with your engagement ring, slipping it on and off, she is thinking of jilting you.

"No wonder there is a lot of knowledge in colleges—the freshmen always bring a little in and the seniors never take any away."—Abbot Lawrence Lowell, when he was president of Harvard.

A Stone's Throw — by Paul Steven Stone

A new breed of politician (Part II)

He's a new breed of politician. You see that at once. Nothing nouveau Hollywood here, just a simple man who bears an uncanny resemblance to a pig.

He's Paul Steven Stone, a newspaper columnist who woke up one morning and decided to enter politics.

As he explains, "I looked at my alarm clock and realized I was tired of working for a living."

Such candid comments have marked Stone as possibly the first truly honest candidate in Massachusetts political history.

Asked if he fears his appearance will hurt his political career, Stone shouts out "Not by the hair of my chinny-chin-chin." Turning more serious, he adds, "I think people are ready to vote for a man who makes no pretense about what he is. I'm a greedy pig. I don't try to hide the fact."

It would be easy to assume that Stone takes a casual attitude towards his political career, but listen to him talk about the close friends and relatives he plans to put on the state payroll, and you hear honest emotion rising in his voice. "Some of them have never been able to hold a steady job," he says, and you can't help but believe him.

At present, no one can say how the electorate will respond to a politician who lists "owning a summer cottage on the Cape and sleeping to 10:30 most weekday mornings" as his two primary political objectives.

"I'm a greedy pig," Stone proudly declares, "and I want your vote."

This election day, we'll see if the voters of Massachusetts are prepared to reward such honesty at the ballot box. Which, if nothing else, should prove whether they prefer their ham on a plate or packaged like the old baloney.

Correspondent's note: owing to a mistake alluded to elsewhere, this report appears late. To bring things up to date, Paul Steven Stone failed in his bid to gain elective office, and is currently applying for a state civil service position.

AN APOLOGY

The Mariner — in particular the publisher — apologizes to our readers and Paul Steven Stone, for the graphic in last week's "A Stone's Throw" column.

The graphic — the pig head — was not and was never intended to be a part of that column. It is, however, very much a part of this week's column.

Again, our apology for the mix-up.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Appetizers, casserole for the holiday season

Welcome to our Kingston neighbors! Those of us who like to cook, collect recipes and cookbooks have the fun of sharing recipes through this column.

A morning in the kitchen is some persons' idea of a good time where drawers bulge with recipes cut from the evening paper and magazines often sport a gaping hole where there was once an interesting recipe. Your family's favorite recipe may be of misty origin, but please join our talented array of cooks and let us hear from you! Dishes you have served to family and company that have proved pleasing, good enough to swap with your neighbor, withstand the test of time. For instance, this one first appeared in the column in December, 1977 when Ginny Gill and Phyllis Dane got together for a little cooking demonstration for a luncheon program. I quickly swooped up the recipe and have used it time and time again as a quick and easy appetizer.

CHIPPED BEEF PIE

1/2 c. sour cream
1 8 oz. pkg. cream cheese
2 T milk
1 2 1/2 oz. jar dried beef finely chopped
2 T ea. instant minced onion, finely chopped green pepper
1/2 tsp. lemon pepper

Sprinkle with chopped walnuts or pecans. Mix together well and spread in an 8" pie plate. Bake at 350 for 20 min. Serve with melba toast or crax.

A gift from your kitchen can be stored in the freezer and just like money in the bank, handy to have when the need arises. Most of us feel that holiday baking should include a loaf or two of cranberry bread or a few cookies for gifts and no freezer should be without something tucked away for other occasions such as when a friend returns from the hospital, has a birthday, or a baby. It's also that time of year when you seem to be on everybody's list for a contribution to the baked goods table for the holiday fair your favorite group has planned. Foods that can be made ahead and frozen and that can be transported with ease are best. This snack made with bite-size cereal squares first appeared in the column in December '76 and was sent in by Penny Newton. It's perfect packaged in a decorated jar or can and if you double the recipe and freeze it, it makes a welcome teacher's gift, or hostess present.

PARTY MIX

6 T butter or margarine
1 tsp. seasoned salt
4 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
2 c. ea. Corn Chex, Rice Chex, Wheat Chex cereals
3/4 c. salted nuts

Melt butter in shallow pan over low heat. Stir in seasoned salt and Worcestershire. Add cereals and nuts. Mix until all pieces are coated. Heat in 250 oven, 45 min., stirring every 15 min. Spread on absorbent paper to cool. Makes 6 and 3/4 cups.

Here is a recipe that drew raves at a Community League luncheon prepared by Amy Prouty and her committee members: Lorrie Platt, Maureen Wallace, Sandy Hawes, Sara Fitch and Sue Norris. Each girl prepared a 9 x 11" casserole which served six easily, with seconds for those who couldn't resist. It's an old, familiar recipe, but with a few extra touches, was especially appealing.

CHICKEN OR TURKEY TETRAZZINI

1/2 lb. thin spaghetti
2 to 3 c. cooked chicken or turkey
Parmesan cheese grated, to taste
2 T butter
2 cans cream mushroom soup
1/2 c. grated, sharp cheddar cheese
2 whole mushrooms, sliced
1 soup can of milk
1/4 c. mayonnaise
1 1/2 tsp. mustard
2 dashes Worcestershire Sauce
1 1/4 c. grated mild cheddar cheese
Parsley to garnish

Cook spaghetti as directed. Add butter to drained spaghetti and top with parmesan. Place spaghetti in shallow casserole. Place chicken (or turkey) on top. Combine soup, milk, mayo, mustard, Worcestershire and sharp cheddar. Pour over spaghetti. Top with sliced mushrooms. Spread mild cheddar over top and sprinkle with parsley. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour. NOTE: Amy tells us that she has her aunt, Nancy Wilson, to thank for the recipe and we all know what a fabulous cook she is.

THE DRAGON'S DUNGEON — By CLAIRE McDONOUGH

The changing spirit of Halloween

"Halloween just isn't what it used to be." The Dragon sighed and turned off the porch light.

"Here it is, only 8:30 and the Trick or Treaters have already stopped coming.

"When our kids were little there was a steady stream until at least 10 p.m.

"And just look at the neighborhood. You'd never even know it was Halloween. No shaving cream on the cars. No toilet paper on the trees. No eggs on the houses. Just an orderly visitation by cute little kids in costume.

"What's the matter with kids today? No holiday spirit."

"I don't believe you said that," I told him. "You used to stand inside the door with a police whistle and swear you'd nail any little so-and-so who defaced your property. Once you even rigged up our pumpkin with a tape recorder so if anyone lifted it it would activate a tape of your voice saying 'Take your hands off that pumpkin, you thieving (expletive).' "

The Dragon shrugged. "So? That was my role. I had my job to do and the kids had theirs. All part of the scenario. It wasn't any fun for the kids unless some old goat like me scared them out of their wits.

"And it must have been even better in the olden days. You told me that when your father was a kid he and his friends moved some old guy's out house back a few feet so when he went to visit it during the night he fell in."

I also told you I thought it was gross and disgusting," I reminded him."

"Sure it was," he agreed. "Your dad and his chums deserved to spend the night cooling their heels at the station house. But at least they had some imagination. If they had turned their considerable creativity to activities that weren't gross and disgusting, they might have achieved a truly memorable Halloween."

He looked at me curiously. "Didn't you ever soap people's windshields? Or did you just trick or treat? Or did you go to parties?"

I shook my head. "None of the above. My friends and I used to put on costumes, then we'd go out and ring people's doorbells, then run away."

The Dragon looked blank. "That was it?"

"It was more exciting than it sounds. Most people, like my mother, just didn't bother answering the door on Halloween. But there were always a few old goats who had police whistles and threatened us with jail.

"And then there was The Challenge. The bravest among us would ring the convent doorbell and try to get away without being recognized."

He was clearly impressed. "That was courageous. Did you ever get caught?"

"Always. I think the nuns recognized the M.O. after the first year. We always had one day to think we might have pulled it off, because we didn't have school on All Saint's Day, but on November 2nd Sister Mary Francis would be waiting at the classroom door.

"She'd just look at me for a minute or two, then when she was pretty sure she had me reduced to a state of stammering idiocy she'd say,

" 'Well, Miss O'Hagerty. What punishment would you feel would be appropriate for someone who put on a pirate's costume and violated the privacy of a convent? And would you, by any chance, know who might have perpetrated such a sacrilege?' "

"I was always half convinced that nuns had a direct pipeline to the Lord and that she already knew who did it, and I was completely convinced that lying to a nun was a mortal sin, so I'd not only confess my own misdeed, I'd implicate all my accomplices. We always had to write 'I will respect holy places' one thousand times."

"That's rough," he sympathized. "Maybe things are better today after all. Nuns are heavy duty. But just look at all this leftover candy. It'll be at least a week before I can finish it all."

"You could give it to the kids and the grandkids," I suggested.

He shook his head virtuously. "And rot their teeth? No, never let it be said that I'm not able to adapt to changing times, changing scenarios. I've decided. From now on I'm no longer the old goat who blows the whistle. I'm the kindly senior citizen who finishes the candy."

VETERANS DAY NOTICE

Veterans Day will be celebrated Tuesday, Nov. 11.

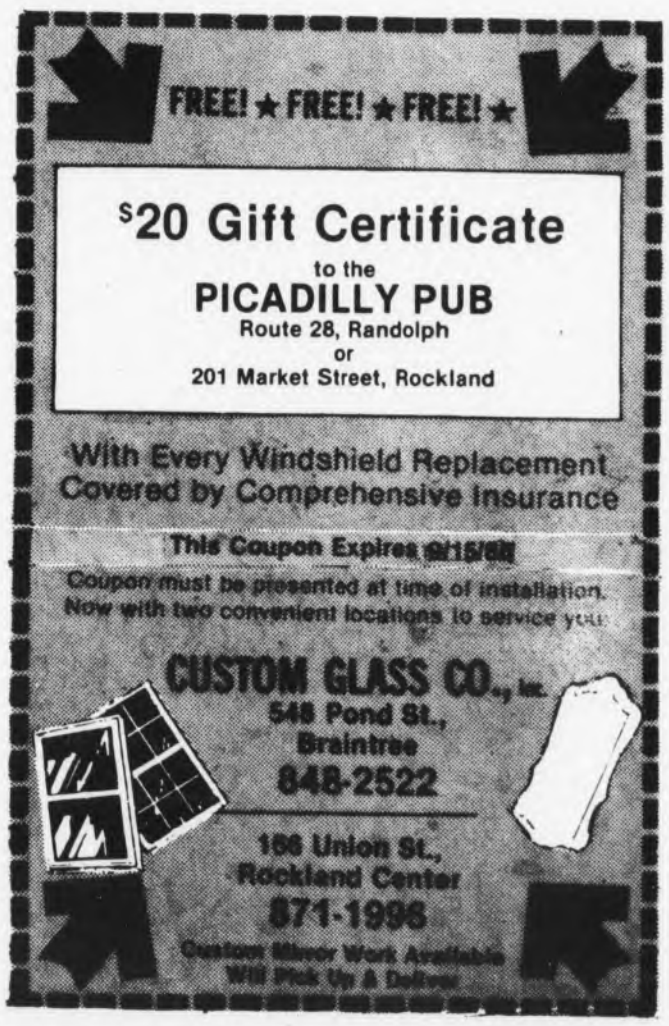
Open are: liquor stores, taverns and bars, and the Stock Market. Manufacturing and retail stores and supermarkets can open at 1 p.m.

Closed are banks, state, county and municipal offices and public meetings, schools, and libraries.

All post offices will be closed and there will be no regular mail delivery.

In keeping with postal policy, Express Mail and Special Delivery will be delivered on the holiday. Collection boxes in local areas will be picked up according to holiday collection schedules beginning at 2 p.m., as will collection boxes in the Downtown Boston area.

Postal customers are also reminded that 24-hour service, seven days a week, is available at the Self-Service Postal Center located in the lobby of the General Mail Facility, 25 Dorchester Avenue, Boston.



NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

'Just one more out'

The ball dribbled between Bill Buckner's legs and the game was over. As long as video tape exists, the moment wil be replayed, again and again, endlessly, during rainouts, during WGBH financial appeals.

It will become part of Boston's collective sports consciousness, like Havlicek's stealing the ball, like Slaughter's scoring from first, like Flutie's pass that calmed the Hurricanes. As Keats wrote of the figures on the Grecian urn: "When old age shall this generation waste, Thou shalt remain . . . "

When the bottom of the tenth inning began, with the Sox leading 5-3, I turned to my video companion and said, "Unless there really is some kind of Red Sox curse, it looks like they're gonna do it." Then, faster than one can say, or at least spell, Jose Santiago, it was over. The seventh game, for all its excitement, was merely denouement.

When asked about the mysterious forces that have kept the World's Championship from Boston since 1918, the current players, at least before the sixth game, expressed absolute rejection of the idea. It was a rejection, alas, born of innocence.

History is real, and impacts upon the present. Our world is not created anew every moment, it emerges only microscopically different from the moment before.

Nowhere in North America is this more apparent than New England. Our towns, our churches and other institutions regularly celebrate anniversaries of two-hundred, three hundred or three hundred and fifty years.

Even casual students of local history are fascinated at how our towns and institutions remain true to their origins, even as they change in their particulars.

My town of Scituate remains affixed to the commerce of the sea, for example, though the nature of that commerce changes.

Old Ship Church in Hingham, the oldest wooden structure in continual use for worship in America, is the Fenway Park of religion.

Harvard does not re-invent itself with each freshman class. The current underclassman may not know of past presidents like Charles Chauncey, any more than Rich Gedman remembers Tris Speaker, but the character and actions of those lond-dead heroes both limit and create the possibilities in which current events transpire.

Which brings us to Harry Frazee, the Red Sox owner who sold Babe Ruth to the Yankees to finance the Broadway musical production of "No, No Nannette." A complicated financial deal which included the Yankees, for a time, holding the mortgage to Fenway Park, it was the worst deal since the Egyptians traded Moses for seven plagues to be named later.

New England literature is rife with the sins of the parents visited upon future generations: "The House of Seven Gables," "The Late George Apley." Perhaps the Red Sox'. sin is played out by management's decades of seeking a slugger that might replace the long-departed Ruth: Jimmie Foxx, Ted Williams, Yaz, Rice.

None of them could do it. And even when they occasionally produced Ruthian performances, they could not bring World Series victory.

Such curses are lifted, in literature, at least, when awareness of the nature of the curse is received. A curse may seem to be supernatural, placed upon one from beyond, but it is maintained through the inability to recognize that the power to break it comes from one's own free will.

This year's Red Sox showed signs of new understanding. They did not depend upon the home run. They showed new appreciation of the importance of pitching and having a spirited dugout.

But they had not escaped completely, for in the sixth game they had a crippled man at first base. The curse remained to the extent that they overlooked the importance of defense. The Series dribbled away. The curse prevailed.

But will it prevail forever? One can sense an epiphany near, to be enacted by general manager Lou Gorman. He is not one of the "Yawkey family" and sees where they do not. Look for him to continue to attack the curse as he searches for qualities long absent from the Sox: relief pitching depth, infielders with range, baserunners who might steal. Then the ghost of Ruth may shadow the Fens no more.

One Sox fan tried his best to overcome history himself. Before the seventh game he drove to the park and touched the Wall. Knowing my vocation he asked me to consider divine intervention.

"You already got a day of rain," I said. "What more do you want?"

"Five good innings from Hurst," he said.

"You got it," I answered. But I thought, why does he ask for only five? The Sox bullpen is more in need of a miracle than Hurst. If only he had asked for a complete game, who knows? But the fear of asking for enough to win, that, too is part of the curse.

It is a curse that is passed down with the certainty of Lon Chaney's in "The Wolf Man." A friend of mine has a seven-year-old son, whose interest in baseball is currently eclipsed by his interest in Transformers and Rambo.

Yet my friend saw an opportunity. When the Sox got the second out in the tenth inning, he went to his son's bedroom and woke him from a sound sleep.

"Now son," he said. "I want you to watch this. One more strike and the Red Sox will win the World Series. I want you to remember this because all of your life you will be able to say that you saw it happen."

Gary Carter singled to center.

"Just one more out son, just one more out."

Another hit.

"Just one more out."

Of such stuff Red Sox fans are made.

"Just one more out . . . "

United Way approaches fundraising goal

The United Way of Massachusetts Bay, now in the final stretch of its 1986 fund-raising drive, has raised $30,396,147—70 percent of its record goal of $43.3 million.

United Way South Division Chairman John C. Hartnett, president of Shawmut Bank of Quincy, reported at a recent luncheon that $644,752 has been raised to date in 19 communities south of Boston. This figure represents 68 percent of the division's $944,000 goal.

"We're now entering the homestretch," General Campaign Chairman Gary L. Countryman, president of Liberty Mutual Life Insurance Co. told 600 local volunteers at the Sheraton Boston Hotel & Towers. "I know I can count on you just as the more than one million people in our community count on us. Homeless families, abused children, addicted teenagers—they all need us more than ever."

Braintree's Educational Loan Services, Inc., with a 540 percent increase in donations over last year, was among the organizations running outstanding campaigns.

The luncheon was co-hosted by Dick Albert, WCVB-TV Channel 5; Harvey Leonard, WNEV-TV Channel 7; Bruce Schwoegler, WBZ-TV Channel 4; and Steve Udelson, WLVI-TV Channel 56.

The United Way drive runs through November 25. The campaign's closing attraction—the Jordan Marsh Road Race—will be held for the fifth consecutive year on Thanksgiving morning at Boston's Downtown Crossing. For more information, contact Conventures, Inc. at 267-0055.

The United Way of Massachusetts Bay funds 190 health and human service agencies in 81 communities in eastern Massachusetts, providing such services as day care, home health care, food and shelter, and help for battered women and abused children. Of every dollar contributed to the United Way, 88 cents goes to member agencies for services.

Hospice to hold open house Nov. 9

The staff and volunteers of the Hospice of the South Shore will hold an open house Sunday afternoon, Nov. 9, for families who have been involved with the Hospice program. The event is an opportunity to renew contacts and share experiences.

The open house marks the observance of Hospice Month, recognized nationally to acknowledge this special kind of health care offered to patients with life-threatening illness.

The Hospice of the South Shore provides comprehensive home health and support services to patients and their families. Since 1979 the agency has served ten communities in the South Shore area, including Braintree, Weymouth, Quincy, Holbrook, Randolph, Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull.

Hospice care is based on the tenet that every person deserves to live life fully with optimum physical, spiritual and psychosocial well-being even until death comes. Hospice care emphasizes the comfort of the patient at home and support of the family, extending even to bereavement.

The Hospice open house will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. in the offices of the VNA Foundation of the South Shore, 400 Franklin St., Braintree Five Corners.

From the garden

by Joan Pinkham

Nature notes as autumn turns to winter

Now, as the trees bare their branches, it seems the stars surpass their summer glow. Early in the evening, the Big Dipper lies close to the northern horizon. Indian lore tells us that they called the constellation the "Great Bear," coming down to wash his paws in the northern lakes before they were sealed in by the winter's ice. The Beaver Moon, the Milky Way, Venus and brilliant meteors provide quite a show in our November skies.

A trip to the beach at this time of year insures a beachcomber's paradise. You can never tell what sort of booty you might pick up, so take along a bag. You can gather a year's supply of ash trays in one afternoon and the smaller shells make great scoops for flour and coffee. Colored beach glass in a glass container makes a handsome lamp base; kelp and seaweed are great fertilizers for your garden and burn beautifully in the fireplace. The beaches are quiet, too—almost like a mini-vacation.

We chuckled and looked a little skeptical as Susan Chapman told of having a bat house built for her back yard. However, the very next day, an article in the New York Times was headlined: "Conservationists Offer a Welcome to Bats." There was a picture of a bat house made of red cedar, 17" tall and a story of Bat Conservation International whose mission is to encourage a resident colony of bats. It is their belief that these creatures of the night are underappreciated and unfairly maligned. Our nation's 40-odd bat species are in jeopardy and these "gentle, clean and intelligent animals," are chief consumers of night-flying insects and a single gray bat can consume up to 3,000 bugs a night. Too bad we didn't know earlier, for they'd be nice to have around at Halloween.

Small comfort though it may be as we face the coming season; spring is only 112 wintry days away. Before we retreat indoors by the fire, there remains the task of raking leaves. Wet, matted leaves do horrible things to the lawns and gardens, but toted off to your compost pile, make a fine mulch. This fall's foliage has seemed much less vibrant than in years past and for that, we can blame the weather, for it has been a moist and warm fall. The warmth has caused the leaves to decay gradually and the excessive moisture has washed color out of some of the foliage.

Scientists are also blaming the weather for a bumper crop of acorns and where you find oak trees, squirrels thrive. Not satisfied with stashing nuts away for the winter, they feast on one's feeders, just as the winter birds are arriving. Beverly Litchfield tells of pine siskins reported in her home-town of Norwell, titmice, juncoes and white-throated sparrows are among the newcomers, as well as kinglets feeding on the cedar trees.

If you want to join with birders in some November field trips, the price you must pay is rising at the crack of dawn. "Early birds" will gather at 8 a.m. Nov. 9 for a trip to Lakeville's ponds and fields, meeting in Whitman at Rtes. 27 and 18 at Angelos. Nov. 15 at 9 a.m., birders will meet for a trip to Cape Ann, gathering at the rotary at the end of Rte. 128 in Gloucester, at Friendly's. On Nov. 22 there is a trip to Quabbin Reservoir, starting at 8 a.m. at the administration building in Belchertown.

Among the novel fall arrangements created by Lorraine Harte of Kennedy's Country Gardens was a handsome centerpiece using a large bread board as a base. The main color theme was purple, carried out by using kale tinged with lavendar, highly polished eggplants, lavendar mums, purple grapes and for contrast—two artichokes hollowed out to hold small, floating candles—hard to describe, but very impressive.

North Scituate was the place to be if you wanted to see some exceptional birds. Audubon reported: 85 red-throated loons, 22 mute swans, 40 American widgeons, 400 common eider, 45 surf scoters, 25 purple sandpipers and Bonaparte's gulls. The latter was not named for Napoleon, but for his nephew, Charles Lucien Jules Laurent Bonaparte, Prince of Canino, whom one may remember as a famous American naturalist in the period 1824 to 1833 when he lived in the U.S.

At long last we have a national flower, the rose. Thus ends a century of debate in Congress during which time members promoted a veritable bouquet of flowers for this lofty position: marigolds, daffodils, orange blossoms and even just plain grass. Those fortunate enough to have a rose garden may be interested in protecting their plants with the new rose collars. Hybrid roses consist of the roots from a well-established rose with the new, more delicate rose plant grafted to it. Here in the northeast, the top rose plant dies from being frozen during the winter if soil is not scooped up high around grafted knob. These collars snap on around the plant and are filled with dry leaves, grass clippings or mulch.

Members of the Brookline Bird Club followed in Warren Harrington's footsteps in mid-October and were rewarded by seeing 71 species of shore birds as they hiked along our beaches. Lots of what our expert calls "babbling ducks" were seen, but what was noticeable was the lack of land birds passing through. Ipswich Sparrows were greeted with excitement, for they are members of an endangered sub-species who come from Sable Island, a hundred miles off the coast of Nova Scotia.

From her breakfast table overlooking the North River marshes Ethel Rich spotted a Northern Harrier Hawk, also known as a Marsh Hawk. It was a timely first visit by the huge bird, for her daughter and husband were visiting from New Hampshire and it was a thrilling sight to see the slender graceful bird circle before landing among the reeds and grasses before continuing on his autumnal migration.

We are serious cash buyers of gold, silver & platinum; both old & new diamonds, estate & antique jewelry, sterling flatware, gold filled items, industrial precious metals, dental gold, old & rare coins, tokens & medals, postcards & collectables. Our evaluation & gold & silver assay tests are free & at no obligation while you wait. We will meet or beat any legitimate offer to buy published locally, nationally, or internationally. Many local dealers claim to be the "highest buyers" so shop around & see us last. We may be a little further away but the few extra miles are worth the effort. We also exchange all denominations of foreign currency & coin on the spot. Banks send their customers to us for just that purpose. We have the most competitive prices on new jewelry in New England & also do expert jewelry repair & appraisals.

ST. JUDE NOVENA. May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, help of the hopeless pray for us. Say this prayer 9 times a day and by the 8th day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail. Publication promised. Thank you St. Jude. My prayers have been answered. S.M.C. & D.M.C. (11/5)

O HOLY ST. JUDE, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor to all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg you to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance and help me in my present and urgent petition. In return, I promise to make your name known, and cause you to be invoked. Say Three Our Fathers, three Hail Marys and Glorias. Publication must be promised. St. Jude, pray for us and all who invoke your aid, Amen. This Novena has never been known to fail. I have had my request granted. Publication promised. (This Novena should be said on 9 consecutive days.) I.F. (11/5)

THANK YOU ST. JUDE, Blessed Mother and the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus for favors granted. I'm humbly grateful. G.V.M. (11/5)

Nature, architecture highlight Duxbury series

By Peggy Beals
FROM THE BOOKSHELF

A soft-spoken naturalist and a rapid fire critic of architecture were an inspired combination at October's Third Thursday author series in Duxbury.

Naturalist Robert Finch lives in Brewster on the Cape, although he is a "washed ashore" rather than a sixth generation native. He works at the Cape Cod Natural History Museum, observes, and writes essays which are very well reviewed. They have been gathered in Common Ground, Primal Earth, and his newest, Outlands.

Finch's 1981 title, Common Ground, is the same as that of J. Anthony Lukas's very successful new book. "I hoped this would result in people buying mine by mistake. I'm considering calling my next book, The Name Of The Rose."

"Titles are the last, and hardest part of the book." He was pleased when someone noticed his three all have earth words, for that is where he is, aptly "grounded." Outlands explores the outer physical limits of the Cape, where wildness lingers.

"You must forget what you're supposed to think, and just open yourself to what's there." Sometimes it is the lawless streak in nature. "It is the privilege of the essayist to give in, to swell on sudden moments when the universe tilts, when our tidy laws seem suspended and we experience the unexpected, wierd, sometimes frightening aspects of nature. They attract and repel us."

"People imagine writers tramp about alone, putting their observations on bits of birch bark, floating them downstream to a publisher," he notes. Because the observing and the writing are lonely occupations "in a closed room shared with spiders," he enjoys speaking to "real people," rather than the imagined he writes for, "people who not only read, but buy!" And quotes the Bard: "Oh, brave new world, that has such people in it!"

"Can Cape Cod be salvaged?" someone asks. Finch thinks it is worth attempting and works with conservationists. "The towns, the only ones who can salvage what wilderness areas remain, are beginning to feel their strength. We can learn to live with nature, without destroying it or being destroyed by it."

Jan Holtz Kay shares his concern for saving our physical assets and quotes Finch in her new book Preserving New England. Kay is a lively, impassioned critic of the preservation process. An early book, Lost Boston, "a three hanky book" laments the many gems lost to urban renewal, a process Robert Hale, whose Westwinds Bookshop sponsors these lectures, describes as bringing "instant ugly" to the little New York town where he grew up.

The new book is more positive, "a one hanky book" and deals with "the whole thing that is New England: the people, the landscape, the places."

Kay showed a series of slides about preservation and conservation, concepts she sees as finally coming together. It was contemporaries of Thoreau, including Ralph W. Emerson, who are credited with saving the Old South Church from the wrecker. And Thoreau, for all he had in his shack at Walden, came home each day "for his milk and cookies" and advised that "every town should have a common, a shared space." "We should," Kay says, "consider our towns Common Ground."

She prefers integration to the "little islands of history" local historic sites tend to be. "We must have planning, zoning, controls, community census, or there isn't going to be any kind of landscape. Controls produce laws such as limiting the height of buildings, keeping fast-food huts off the common." They can prevent some of the strange buildings architect Philip Johnson is putting up, "more like bad jokes." Her slides show some offenders: the Federal Reserve building in Boston "a washboard." An insurance building: "Two Philco radios in search of a melody." A slide shows a cartoon of one matron warning another, "They've taken down Boston and put up something else."

Another slide, showing a billboard Maine has put in downtown Boston, says "Leaf home to Maine." "Billboards," Kay says, "are prohibited in Maine." North Conway she describes as the "the alley of the valley."

Kay is a witty, persuasive Paul Revere. Her book is rich in catching the unique heritage New England has, and can keep.

Marshfield man to purchase Hugo's Restaurant

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Hugo's Lighthouse, a landmark among South Shore restaurants, is in the process of being sold to a 30 year-old Marshfield man.

The sale should be completed by Dec. 15, according to prospective owner Paul Logue of Marshfield. The passing date for the real estate transaction is set for Dec. 31, although Logue feels it will be two weeks earlier. The sale is contingent on several factors, he noted, including the successful transfer of the liquor license.

The current owners are Edward Guleserian, Joseph Tellier, and Charles Laverty Jr., all of Brighton.

Logue, president of Logue Family Restaurants, Inc., will be the sole proprietor.

The restaurant will retain the name used since the original ownership of the late John Carzis. The sale includes both the real estate and the building, he said, encompassing more than 65,000 square feet of property. He would not divulge the purchase price.

A 15-year resident of Marshfield, the new owner said he will make no major renovations to the restaurant. He plans only minor changes to the menu, including specialty entrees such as homemade fish chowder.

"The place was entirely renovated about five years ago, so there's no reason for me to make any big changes. I'd like to add a few things to the menu, but otherwise, there's no big changes planned," he said this week.

Logue was a former partner and co-owner of Pier 44 Restaurant in Scituate. When he sold his share of the business two and a half years ago, it was

No one is bored in artist's class

Wednesdays are special to the students in Shari Krantz's class at Deer Hill School.

Cohasset artist Nancy Connolly has been visiting the South Shore Collaborative Primary Language Class here for several weeks. So, every Wednesday brings a fun, new adventure in art.

"It's great to have somebody from the outside, somebody different come into the classroom to interact with the kids," Krantz commented. "They all love art and it's a very reinforcing activity for them."

A regular teacher at the South Shore Arts Center on Ripley Road, Connolly said she finds her work with Krantz's class especially rewarding.

"I enjoy this group very, very much," she said. "There's a nice feeling of response when I bring in work to show; I try to show pieces to stimulate thinking, and there's a freshness that comes out. Nobody is bored, ever."

She added, "The kids will stay with this for an hour-and-a-half easily, though their attention span isn't supposed to be more than a half-hour. That's partly what gets me excited."

Nurse fulfilling a promise to help

"I do it, because I know I can make a difference."

Eileen Mullaney is confident, but not boastful. Her efforts in behalf of the starving and diseased citizens of the third world have convinced her she is creating change.

Mullaney is a nurse whose work as a medical worker in the refugee camps of Ethiopia and Somalia have been well-documented. Now, she is back in the comfort of her Cohasset home. But once again, her thoughts have been left far behind in the barren deserts and mountains of these Asian countries.

She just recently returned from her latest sojourn, this time to the war-torn country of Pakistan. She has returned, filled with promise and ideas.

"Why do I do it?" she asked herself, sitting in the neat kitchen of her parents' home. Her eyes filled with tears which she quickly rubbed away with a sweep of her hands. She smiled. "I guess because I know what I can do, something to improve the quality of life. I know it can be done.

"I traveled to 14 Pakistani refugee camps. I was able to assess the situation quickly because of the contacts I had made through past associations. I don't mean to sound pompous, but because of my experiences, I am capable of providing a means of really helping these people. I'm good at that. I see results and that's wonderful. And everytime I see the situation there, I come back home and I'm even

It was a year of hopes & dreams

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner correspondent

(Lisa is a senior at CHS and is the goaltender for the varsity field hockey team).

Friday, under a threatening, cloudy ky, in front of a small, yet spirited crowd, the girls' field hockey team faced Bellingham for the second year in a row in the state tournament.

The game which was supposed to be played in Cohasset was being held in Hanover because of some far-fetched controversy over the condition of the Skippers' field.

Although Cohasset was missing the backbone of its defense, Sara Dickerman, because of an injury she suffered in the final regular season game, the girls refused to let their spirits get down. They vowed to avenge their only loss of the previous season by beating Bellingham.

At last, the Bellingham girls came thundering down the field and after much pounding away on Cohasset's net, the Hawks at last scored.

Being goalie, I could not help but think back to last year's game against Bellingham when a mere one goal won the game for the Hawks and propelled them to a state championship.

I could not help but wonder whether this year's game would be a repeat performance of last year's disappointing loss.

However, the Skippers refused to roll over and die, and they came back to score before the half was

Can you believe it? White Christmas time

A sign hangs in the window of a store. Only seven more weeks to Christmas.

With that reminder, could the Chamber of Commerce annual White Christmas in Cohasset be far behind?

Plans are in place and preparations are being completed for the third annual Christmas festivity, an event which succeeds the merchants' expectations each time.

White Christmas will be held Sunday, Nov. 30 throughout the town.

It will begin at 11 a.m. as Santa touches down aboard a helicoptor onto the Cushing Plaza parking lot. He will be available for photographs and conversation with the children who traditionally flood the Route 3A shopping center.

Lollipops, balloons and Santa's elves will greet the hundreds of children who flock to the plaza for their holiday visit with St. Nick.

From there he will travel aboard a Cohasset fire engine to the Tedeschi shopping plaza on Rte. 3A. Again, Santa will greet children for photographs and conversation.

Hopping aboard the fire engine once again, Santa will be driven through the town to the Common. There'll be more opportunity for photos with Santa, along with other activities such as a petting zoo, and amusement rides.

Town seal switch

It was brought to the attention of selectmen that the town seal currently used on the stationery of town officials and committees is an imitation.

Historical Commission Chairman Noel Ripley wrote to selectmen explaining that the proper town seal "is a very poor imitation. We urge you to use the original and true seal and to get rid of the dreadful imitation presently in use."

Selectmen discussed the matter at their Monday night meeting and said the inadvertent mistake will be taken care of as soon as the town clerk returns from vacation. All agreed the replacement seal is inferior to the official town seal, which is inscribed with an artistic version of Minot's Lighthouse, and scenes of the town hall and common.

Household hazardous waste day

Cohasset residents will have an opportunity to get rid of their unwanted household and garden hazardous products Saturday, November 22, from 9 to 2 p.m.

The towns of Cohasset and Hingham are holding joint household hazardous waste collection at the public parking area on Station Street, just off Rte. 3A in Hingham.

Residents are encouraged to bring their household hazardous wastes, including oil-based paints, pesticides, drain and oven cleaners, car waxes, antifreezes, pool chemicals, and other environmentally harmful products.

Improper disposal of these wastes-pouring them down a drain or throwing them out with regular household trash-can contaminate groundwater, polute the environment, and create health hazards for garbage collectors. Wastes brought to this household hazardous waste collection will be picked up by North East Solvents Corp., a licensed waste hauler, which will dispose of the wastes safely.

Residents are asked to bring their wastes in the original containers and are asked not to bring latex paints, aerosol cans, used motor oil, or pesticides with names such as Silvex, Ortho, Weed-B-Gone, or Toxaphene.

For additional information call Chartis Langmaid at 383-6433 after 4:30 p.m. or the Metropolitan Area Planning Council at 451-2770 during the day. Also Dr. Joseph Godzik, Cohasset Health Agent, may be reached during the day at 383-1664.

Land-taking hearing

The Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has scheduled a public hearing Nov. 13 in regard to the acquisition of land for public water supply purposes.

In response to a request made by the Cohasset Water Commission, DEQE has scheduled a public hearing at 10:30 a.m. at the office of the Metropolitan Boston/Northeast Region, 5 Commonwealth Ave., Woburn.

The commission requested the hearing to discuss a proposal to purchase 36 acres of land surrounding Lily Pond. Two developers have presented plans to subdivide and develop that land bordering the town's main water supply. An appraisal of the property is currently being conducted for the town.

Engineering expenses okayed

Selectmen supported a budget transfer request made Monday night by health board chairman Michael Bliss to fund an additional $5,000 in engineering expenses.

Dr. Bliss explained that Camp, Dresser and McKee signed a contract with the town last May for $10,000. Since that time, additional monitoring of the surface and groundwater wells at Cohasset Heights landfill have resulted in a budget overload. The engineering firm expects to spend about $15,000 in the monitoring procedures for the remainder of this fiscal year, he said.

Selectmen said they support the budget transfer, although some of the expenditures will be budgeted as unpaid bills for the previous fiscal year, which must be approved by town meeting in April.

"I hope CDM can go on with their work," Dr. Bliss explained. "We need their expertise to review these plans. I think they've been quite reasonable. It's very important to the town that they continue to interpret data from the landfill's wells."

Suicide prevention in jail

As part of a state-mandated and state-funded program, selectmen awarded a contract to Townsend Construction Inc. of Hingham to renovate the five cells in the police station jail. The basis of the work will be to prevent suicides by jail inmates.

The contract totaled $4,687 and will include the installation of fans, lights and security clocks. The project will be completed within seven days of its start, prior to the Dec. 31 deadline, according to Executive Secretary Donald Andrew.

Cheese and butter distribution

Government Surplus cheese and butter will be distributed by the Social Service League of Cohasset to Cohasset residents in November.

Recipients must show their participation in any of the following in order to qualify: food stamps, AFDC, Welfare, SSI Disability, Medicaid, Head Start, Fuel Assistance, WIC, Veterans' Aide, or unemployment, or they may declare that their family size and gross income fall within the current fuel assistance income guidelines (i.e. for 1 person—$7,875; for 2—$10,575; for 3—$13,275; for 4—$15,975.)

If you qualify, please call the office (8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.) to request the food items and arrange for pick up, 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Revised plans before ZBA

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Armed with revised plans and a court remand order, Andrea Merrill and Julie Galinas went before the Zoning Board of Apeals hunting for a special permit.

Merrill and Galinas, of Distinctive Homes Trust hope to add a second story to the residence at 51 Jerusalem Road.

The board denied the developers a special permit in July, 1985 because the proposed renovations violated setback requirements, making the non-conforming structure even more non-conforming to Cohasset's zoning requirements.

After the hearing Thursday night, the board seemed more inclined to grant the permit, considering the developers submitted plans for a scaled-down addition which more closely fits the "footprint" of the original house.

Furthermore, the remand order from Roger Donahue, Justice of the Superior Court argued the board's original decision applied criteria beyond the scope of applicable bylaws.

In the new plans, part of the second story was lopped off, in favor of a deck. The roof was lowered two-and-a-half feet.

Furthermore, there will be no overhang in the front, and the basement walls will be removed, leaving the hillside house standing on pillars.

Abutters voiced their concerns regarding the impact of a septic system near a tidal marsh.

But Walter Sullivan, an attorney representing Merrill and Galinas, said the Conservation Commission has approved the project.

The proposed addition has stirred the emotions of abutters, who said their view of Little Harbor would be obstructed by the addition.

John Roy commented, "Increasing the height of that building is detrimental to the neighborhood."

The board argued, it can't turn down a special permit for aesthetic purposes.

"While we're talking about vistas," Sullivan said, "you should note that we have done every conceivable thing to help work that out. This building already represents an accommodation.

"It isn't an illegal building," he added, "It was authorized by the selectmen when it was first built. And we have the right to add on to make it more commodious.

"In the last five years," Sullivan said, "60 special permits have been granted for renovations to non-conforming lots. A lot of time and money has been spent on this building and I can assure you, it will look better."

Susan Reardon of Red Gate Lane called the parking situation at 51 Jerusalem Road "dangerous."

She explained, "I'm the parent of four children and my neighbor has three children; I think the number of bedrooms in that house could be a big factor, with regard to the number of cars there.

"There's a dangerous blind curve there," she added, "and if they back out of that driveway, it's very dangerous!"

The parking area for the lot is a 27 foot by 30 foot rectangle by the street. The parking area is irregular because of the slope of the land.

The developers drew guffaws from abutters when they claimed they were able to park six cars in the parking area with the doors open at once.

George Haight, architect for the trust told Reardon and the board, "The second story will include a living room, dining room and kitchen. Because the number of bedrooms will not increase, the use will not change."

In deliberation, board member Mark DeGiacomo commented, "I'm bothered by the parking problem, but we would probably lose in Superior Court; the only way we could deny it would be on the basis of parking."

The board is expected to render its decision December 4. Most likely, the developers will get their permit.

Officials want environmental review of CHL

Town officials are unanimous in their opposition to Cohasset Heights Ltd.'s plans to expand the commercial landfill on Crocker Lane.

The landfill owners, Browning, Ferris, Inc., filed an application with the Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency to expand into Area Four. That land encompasses 5.5 acres of land on Crocker Lane, off Route 3A.

The application submitted by Cohasset Heights was filed with the state in late September. The estimated commencement of the expansion would be in April, 1987 with a projected date of April, 1991, according to the environmental notification form (ENF).

By law, town officials must review the business' ENF form and submit their comments to the state. All comments were to be prepared and submitted by Oct. 30.

Secretary of Environmental Affairs, James Hoyte, must now make a decision on the matter. Town officials, including the board of health, have yet to be notified of a decision.

According to Selectmen Chairman Diane Sullivan, the ENF was reviewed by the town's drainage advisory committee, watershed protection advisory committee, conservation commission, and board of health. The consensus of the boards was that the state reject the application in favor of a more intensive study.

The board of health's special counsel, Michael Leon, stated in a letter to Secretary Hoyte that a full Environmental Impact Report be conducted by the landfill operators. This would include a more intensive environmental review of the landfill, leachate and the materials being dumped into the commercial landfill.

"The Board (of Health) respectively requests that the Secretary refuse to consider CHL's premature and inadequate ENF unless and until the requisite local approvals for operation of the proposed project are obtained. At that time, the Secretary should require an EIR (Environmental Impact Report) addressing the full range of environmental and public health impacts associated with the proposed project," Atty. Leon stated in the Oct. 29 ENF response.

The town's special counsel noted in his letter to Secretary Hoyte, "the landfill's proximity to public drinking water supplies and significant surface and groundwater resources for the Town of Cohasset requires that the proposed project be thoroughly reviewed, especially in light of the likelihood that the waste and refuse proposed for disposal will contain "household" hazardous substances such as solvents, pesticides and herbicides, and waste oils." Board of health last spring ordered a shutdown of the commercial dump, citing several violations of the site assignment signed by the town and the landfill operators in 1976 and 1980. In order to avoid a prolonged cessation and possible lawsuit, the landfill owners and the board of health agreed to a modified site assignment in May, 1986.

In the meantime, the local zoning board alleges the landfill does not have a special permit for its sanitary landfill operation. The operators applied for the special permit last spring, which was denied by the local board.

The former building inspector issued a cease and desist order last May, stating the landfill could no longer accept sanitary waste. The ZBA approved the order. Cohasset Heights is appealing the order to Norfolk County Land Court.

"CHL's MEPA filing is thus particularly premature," according to Atty. Leon's letter, "as the proposed project's ability to operate under the Cohasset Zoning By-laws has not been demonstrated."

The landfill's first and second site assignments were approved in 1981, and area three was approved in 1985. CHL expects that area four will be filled by 1991.

Water commissioner Ronald Goodwin agreed the more intensive review is necessary before the state approves the landfill expansion. "We're due a response from Secretary Hoyte," he complained this week. "Every board in town that reviewed this ENF application agreed that the impact report is necessary. Now we want to know what the state thinks."

Goodwin said the state Environmental Affairs office was scheduled to make its determination on the landfill application by Friday, Nov. 7.

"Another thing that bothers me," he continued, "is that the landfill is supposed to be monitoring the ground and surface water wells there once each quarter. They're a month behind now and we haven't seen the results of the latest tests. They're asking to expand, and they aren't even complying with the agreement worked out with the board of health in May."

In the meantime, Goodwin explained, the water commission will request budget money to complete their own monitoring surveys. "We're trying to come up with some money of our own to do some of this sampling. It cost money to put in the wells and do the tests, but we feel it's a necessary expenditure," Goodwin explained.

Selectmans briefs . . .

Police, fire renovations

Selectmen voted this week to approve a $19,500 contract to begin architectural estimates for renovations to the police and fire station complex.

This will be the "medium phase" of the project, according to police and fire station renovation committee member Robert Stanzell. He told selectmen this contract would provide a "good picture" of the construction cost estimates. "We'll have a fairly good picture," Stanzell said, of what the project will encompass and how much it will cost.

Town meeting in April appropriated $20,000 for preliminary plans, so the bid from Putnam Associates of Allston was within that amount.

The renovation committee has worked since the spring, interviewing three final architectural firms and selecting Putnam as their unanimous recommendation. That company presented the most thorough plans and made a professional presentation to the committee members, he told selectmen.

Selectmen agreed with Stanzell that approximately seven committee meetings can be scheduled between now and the annual town meeting. At that time, the committee will present the architect's preliminary plans and proposed project costs to the voters.

Mooring rates increased

Selectmen voted Monday night to increase user fees for harbor moorings to $4 per foot.

Despite objections from Selectman Rocco Laugelle who said that Cohasset would again "be the leader of the pack - we're the most expensive," selectmen voted to support the harbormaster's recommendation.

According to Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, in fiscal 1986, the town spent $38,772 in harbor expenses including salaries, and took in about $25,000 in revenues.

"There's a great big gap between what that department brings in and being self-supporting," Selectmen Chairman Diane Sullivan said. The increased user fees would bring in an additional $8,300 in revenues. She argued the $1 increase would not be a hardship for the mooring users, particularly to those who earn a living as a commercial fisherman.

Selectman James Gallagher noted that for the services provided, the mooring user fees are "cheap."

The board approved the proposal by a 2-1 margin.

In a related matter, selectmen said the harbor study committee should review the issue of allowing boats to tie up to moorings not assigned to that particular vessel during the winter.

Harbormaster Ritter suggested he submit a written letter to the winter roosters, detailing the dates the boat will be allowed to use a mooring in the harbor. If the rooster fails to move, the harbormaster would then have proof that the boatowner previously agreed to the provisions of a written agreement.

Selectmen advised Ritter to discuss the proposal with the harbor study committee. Executive Secretary Andrew noted "you have to have regulations, a form you can legally enforce so the harbormaster can get them out without a court suit."

Selectmen complained that no user fees were collected from winter roosters last year. Harbormaster Ritter explained that with the written agreement, a specified amount would be included, which would be signed proof from the boatowner that he agrees to the terms of the legal contract.

Chamber plans a white Christmas, Nov. 30

Caroling will begin later that afternoon with the high school chorus. There will also be a Carillon concert from St. Stephen's Church.

And at 4 p.m., the white lights, signifying the official start of Cohasset's White Christmas, will be ignited. Trees lining the common, and store fronts throughout the downtown shopping area will be outlined with the white Christmas lights.

"The purpose of White Christmas," event chairman John Hagerty explained, "is to show that right here in Cohasset there are handcrafted gifts, gourmet foods, works of art, books, clothing, specialty items, toys and furniture all presented by Cohasset merchants, which are perfect for holiday gift-giving."

The Chamber also intends to demonstrate its interest in "doing something each year for the town which is a positive statement - our gift to the town," he added.

Another feature of the event will be the raffle. The grand prize this year is an all expense-paid weekend trip to New Orleans. Raffle tickets are available from Chamber of Commerce merchants.

"It's good for the Chamber to do something for the town," Hagerty continued. "and to remind people that there are nice things right here at competitive prices."

The downtown merchants will open their shops Nov. 30 throughout the White Christmas hours. Many of the local shopkeepers will provide Christmas shoppers with refreshments as they browse through their stores.

When asked how successful the event has proven, Hagerty explained, "if measured by the Chamber as doing something positive for the town, I'd say it's been very successful. Does White Christmas increase sales for the individual storeowners? That's difficult to say. I never heard a merchant say 'it's good for my individual business', but the Chamber members have nonetheless vigorously pursued this event. I think if we did it based solely on increasing sales, we wouldn't bother.

"I think," he continued, "this kind of event dispells that notion. It costs us a lot of money to do this, money we raise through our dues. The Chamber does a lot of other public service things, through our public meetings, scholarships and educational programs."

The philosophy is basic, according to the Chamber spokesman for White Christmas. "Business is good for Cohasset, and it is an integral part of this town. You have to understand that the vast majority of the people who own businesses in Cohasset, also live in this town. They appreciate the quality of life here and intend to contribute to it."

Each year, it's hoped that White Christmas attracts residents into its own commercial center. The Chamber's premise is that the merchants here provide the same, or better quality merchandise at competitive prices.

"And rather than having outside, part-time unknowledgeable help, our stores are staffed by your neighbors, people who care about you and will be there for you," Hagerty said.

Conservatively, between three and four thousand visitors participate in the White Christmas festivities.

The event was created to help dispell the notion that Cohasset is more expensive than the malls or national chain stores. "You wouldn't be a good businessperson if you didn't know what a competitive price was and respond to it. The Chamber is working to project this town as a viable business entity," according to the president of Cohasset Colonials.

Explaining the advantage to shopping locally, Hagerty said, "the merchant here cares about his customer. And they're probably a lot more knowledgeable than the staff you find in the mall stores. Particularly now, it makes sense to shop locally. You receive better service, better satisfaction, dealing with someone who is well trained and who cares."

Recreation programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for ski lessons Wednesday, and Thursday, November 19, and 20, from 2 to 4, and also Thursday, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Registrations will be accepted at the Recreation Office, first floor at the town hall.

The cost for the five week lessons to be held at the Blue Hills Ski School, will be $54 per person. There are five one and three-quarter hour sessions. Parents must register children, because a release form must be signed. Checks are to be made payable to the Town of Cohasset.

Lessons are scheduled to begin Thursday, January 8, 1987. The fee covers lessons and transportation to and from Blue Hills for the five weeks. Equipment rental is available at Blue Hills, and the cost for rental is $7 per session.

Classes are offered for all levels of instruction, however, participants must be seven years old at the start of classes.

Buses will leave from the Town Hall parking lot at about 3:15 p.m., and return at about 6:45 p.m. Parents who wish to go as volunteer chaperones may sign-up during registration.

Soccer Coaches

Many thanks should go to the 1986, soccer coaches who gave freely of their time and expertise, affording over 225 children the chance to play and learn the game. It would be impossible to conduct a program of this magnitude if it were not for the interest of parents.

Marshfield man in process of purchasing Hugo's

Logue's intent to be the sole proprietor of a restaurant.

"Once you've had a partner in any business, you realize you'd rather do things on your own. This is what I was looking for," Logue said, explaining that he approached the current corporate owners and made the initial offer to purchase the company. "I made an offer and they accepted," he explained. "It was never for sale on the market."

Hugo's board of directors and general manager Gary Elsmore refused comment on the pending sale. Elsmore confirmed last week that a purchase and sales agreement had been signed, but said the sale was contingent on several factors.

The current restaurant staff will remain, Logue emphasized. "It's not the way to do things, to come into a business and make changes. I'd like everyone to stay. We're a South Shore business, we're not in Boston. It makes a difference when a new owner comes in for the staff to stay on."

In order to retain the local clientele, Logue plans to make a few changes to the menu, particularly in the winter. "Maybe we could have a fireplace in the lounge during the winter, and add some interesting items to the menu," he said.

A graduate of Marshfield High School, Logue has a degree in finance from Western New England College. He was a trust officer for the Bank of New England before becoming a manager of the Rusty Scupper chain of restaurants.

"My priority in purchasing Hugo's was to buy a waterfront restaurant which served fresh seafood and also had a function room," Logue said. "The traffic along these coastal communities is terrific now and this is just the type of restaurant I've wanted to own."

Maserati license approved

Selectmen approved a Class II license to Luigia Masciarelli to sell not more than 20 used cars on his Route 3A property.

Masciarelli recently purchased the former Highway Motors property and plans to develop a Maserati dealership there. Although he told selectmen Monday night his principal business would be to sell new cars, board members decided to limit the used cars to 20. The license would run contiguous with his Class 1 license to sell new cars which selectmen approved last week.

"I am up to here with used cars on Route 3A," Selectman Sullivan said, pointing to her chin. "It is becoming nothing more than one big used auto lot. If you can sell Maserati's, more power to you. But there is no reason why you should get more than 20 used cars."

Masciarelli had argued that because his main business is Class I, selling new cars, the number of used cars on the lot should be unlimited. That is the way other businesses, including the dealership across the street on Route 3A, are allowed to operate, he argued. Masciarelli said he needed a minimum of 25 used cars to make the dealership successful.

Selectmen warned the new owner that the building inspector may be sent as frequently as once a week to inspect the premises and to count the number of used vehicles on the premises.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Norma Telesco
Home Center Realty

IT'S EASY TO FIND A BUYER!

You've decided to sell your home by yourself, and soon you find someone who appears to be willing and able to buy it. You agree on a price, shake hands, arrange another meeting to work out the details, and take your family out to dinner to celebrate! That was easy, wasn't it?

But now come the details. That's when you begin to appreciate how complex the sale of a home can be. Does the stationery shop contract form include the necessary disclosures for water quality, soil type, airport location or other information mandated by the state or local laws? What about closing costs, such as loan points or local taxes? How much will they be and how will they be shared by buyers and sellers? Do you have the addendums for FHA or VA loans? What about structural inspections? Agreeing to the crucial terms is just the beginning! Who will do the title search and settlement? How do you set up an escrow account for the good faith deposit, and who keeps the money if the sale falls through?

Some people can sell their homes without the assistance of a Realtor, but if you want to insure that the sale of your home runs smoothly without any unforeseen problems, we recommend using a professional Realtor. Contact one of the professionals at Home Center Realty. Call us at 749-8833; or stop by our office at 57 Water St., Hingham.

☐ Cohasset's loss is certainly Florida's gain as we hear this week that Chris Watters has made the big time . . . Chris has made the Varsity basketball team in his new location, and couldn't be happier in his new surroundings! We'll sure miss watching you in action this year Chris, be sure to keep us informed of your "action".

☐ Good news for Carolyn LaVange, she's doing real well and feeling ever so much better. Carolyn loved all the cards, flowers, and rememberances during her illness, they mean so much!

☐ The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers are looking for you if you are new to our town! They would like to invite new residents of Cohasset to attend an informal coffee, to enable you to meet other newcomers in your area. The coffee will be held Thursday, Nov. 20 at 10 a.m. in Scituate. Call 545-2814 for further information.

☐ Everyone in the case and crew is really excited about their hard work paying off . . . the cast and crew of the upcoming production of "Alice in Wonderland" that is! It is to be held on November 21st and 22nd at 8:00 p.m., and on the 23rd at 2:00. The invitational dress rehearsal will be held on the 20th. It is said that Kate Delima is outstanding as Alice, and that Sheldon Ripley is outdoing himself on the sets. More imaginative than ever, they will be painted to be like the illustrations in the original book! There are a lot of kids from Cohasset in the production (30 people in the cast). It certainly promises to be great entertainment for both children and adults, so make your plans now to be in the audience!

☐ A special salute to Army Spec. 4 David F. O'Connell, son of Mr. and Mrs. William O'Connell of 5 Oak Street. David has arrived for duty with the 1st Cavalry Division, Fort Hood, Texas. David is a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐ November 17th is a special day for Caroline Williams, she will be 95 years old! If you'd like to send her a card her address is Mediplex of Westport, 1 Burr Road, Westport, Ct. 06880.

Jean Manganaro (l), Mary Reardon (center) and Madeline Hargardon, work on the decorations which will be the finishing touch on the famous Village Fair wreaths. (Scot Langdon photo)

☐ It sure will be hard to picture the Historical Society without Connie Parker at the helm, but after all of her hard work, she deserves a little rest (we bet she won't). Congratulations to you on your long and successful reign, and best of luck to the new president, he or she will have large shoes to fill!

☐ A lot of "die-hard fans" showed their real spirit last Saturday, supporting the soccer and football games in the pouring rain! Both teams gave their best efforts, that's for sure. The soccer team continues to win in the States at this writing and we wish them well. The football team was "awesome", though the scoreboard didn't rule in their favor. The boys played their hearts out and had several "trick plays" that worked well for them. A grand team effort, hope you were there to see it!

☐ Wasn't it nice to see that postal worker Richard Leach was honored for his efforts to help Mr. Migliaccio when he smelled smoke and put out a fire for him last summer! The US Postal Service presented him with a grand citation last week, given to him by Postmaster James Hooley.

☐ The Social Service League is looking for you . . . volunteer for its New Friends Program, one where friends visit and aid those who are unable to get out. If you would like to either be a friend or help a friend, call 383-0771 or 383-0821 for information.

☐ Congratulations to the "grandfather of the week", Norman Swain. Norman and Joyce's daughter, Tracey, gave birth to a bouncing baby girl last week. We wish them all every happiness.

☐ Don't forget the Boosters Award dinners to be held next Wednesday (they are serving their famous tacos, sure to be a hit). All of the fall teams are honored, and the athletes certainly deserve the honors bestowed.

☐ Christian M. Sheppard of 579 Jerusalem Road is among 37 Boston College High School seniors to be named a commended student in the 32nd annual National Merit Scholarship competition.

Christian won commended status on the basis of his score on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude/ National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT) which he took when he was a junior. He was among 35,000 commended students nationwide from more than one million who took the test.

In addition to the 37 commended students, Boston College High School also had 10 students who were named semifinalists in the competition and will continue in the qualifying rounds for 6,000 Merit scholarships which will be awarded in the spring.

Christian is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sheppard and attended Cohasset Junior High.

☐ That's the news from here, be sure to let us know what's going on in your home!

It's a tie

Selectmen have formally notified the four candidates, there will be no appointment of a police patrolman at this time.

Although four were interviewed by selectmen, when it came time for a vote, the board was split. Two members sided with one candidate, and the other two favored another. There was no room for compromise, the board was deadlocked, and there will be no appointment.

That leaves the Cohasset Police Department short one officer. Because selectmen could not make a decision last week, the department is left with a gaping hole in its staff.

Police Chief Joseph Kealey refused to make a recommendation when asked by selectmen last week. Saying he never worked with any of the four, he only warned selectmen to choose someone from the top three of the Civil Service list. The fourth candidate was number four on the list, and had been interviewed later than the top three.

Chief Kealey said the state may question why the town went beyond the top three candidates, and without sufficient explanation, that could spell trouble for the town, he cautioned.

But two selectmen remained convinced that the fourth candidate was the best, and would side only with him as their sole selection.

Many argue it is the chief's responsibility to make a recommendation on the staffing of his department. We don't quarrel with that. A chief should be encouraged to make an administrative recommendation without fear of reprisal for his suggestion.

We wish Chief Kealey had made a strong recommendation for one of the candidates. But the fact is, he did not.

And many would not blame him. How many times has a department head gone out on the limb and publically declared a recommendation, only to have it rebuked by selectmen? And the fact is, likely, as he said last week, any of the top three would be a fine addition to his department.

The greater cause for concern is not why the police chief failed to make a recommendation, but that the four remaining members of the board could not reach an agreement.

When the fifth member, Mary Jane McArthur, resigned from the board last summer, people expected there may be situations when a vote would be tied. And to selectmens' credit, there have been few instances of a deadlock.

But this time, it hurts. The town is without a needed officer, because our town officials can not come to an agreement. And whom does it hurt? The residents of this town, who are not given their rightful number of public servants, and the other officers who must work to fill the staffing vacancy with overtime and shift changes.

The fact is, there are often two distinct philosophies and styles on this board. It is in fact, surprising that more tie votes have not occurred.

But last week, in this important decision, that separation of philosophy was clearly demonstrated by our four selectmen.

The vote is now history, and there will be no appointment in the near future. This is one to store in the back of your mind, as subsequent issues are discussed and voted in the months before the April election.

Cohasset to observe Constitution celebration

1987 will mark the 200th anniversary of the writing and signing of the American Constitution. Organizations of many types will be participating in the nationwide observance of the Constitution's Bicentennial. In Philadelphia during spring and summer of 1787 momentous events were going on which would shape the destiny of a new nation and its people. The United States is the oldest Constitutional republic in the world, and our Constitution has served as the model for other, newer nations.

As citizens of a free and democratic society, we are pleased to join Americans throughout our nation in observing the Bicentennial year of the Constitution. The Philadelphia Convention of 1787 produced, for generations yet to come, a remarkable document. Our Constitution is the written guarantee of our freedom as a people, and our bulwark against tyranny.

Of interest is the fact that when the Commonwealth of Massachusetts convened as Constitutional Convention to deal with our state's ratification of the newly proposed Constitution, two distinguished Hingham residents represented our area; General Benjamin Lincoln and Rev. Daniel Shute. Gen. Lincoln had been Cohasset's delegate to the Revolutionary councils before the Revolution and had been on General Washington's staff during the war.

At Yorktown, it was Benjamin Lincoln who had the honor to receive Gen. Cornwallis' sword at the culmination of the battle. Later, Lincoln was Cohasset's elected Representative to the Great and General Court of Massachusetts. During 1786 and 1787, Gen. Lincoln commanded the militia troops which ended Shay's Rebellion, the farmers' insurrection in western Massachusetts. Rev. Daniel Shute was pastor of Hingham's venerable First Parish Church, the parent church of Cohasset's early First Parish. At the Massachusetts convention called to ratify the Constitution, both Rev. Shute and General Lincoln voted in the affirmative.

Troop 38 Cub Scout news

Congratulations to our Cubs who earned their:

Webelo badge: Earle Bestick,Jr., Scott Herzog, Jay Nothnagle, Jason Whitman;

Bobcat badge: From Webelo Den; Jeremy Begley

From Den 1; Jarrod Batts, Mike Collins, David Burke, Ely Kahn, Jon Lacks, Peter O'Leary and Jeremy Williams;

From Den 3; Chad and Mark Whitman

The Webelos have had many den meetings during the summer months and have been working very diligently to achieve their advancements with the assistance of their leaders—Earle Bestick and Carol Bestick.

Cub Pack 38 and Boy Scout Troop 28 have completed the District Bowl-a-Rama fundraiser this week. Thank you to all the scouts who participated, to all the patrons and donors who supported them, and to the den leaders and moms, dads, grandparents who helped the cubs scoring at the Community Center. Thanks to George Brooke who helped the Cubs and Linda Farrag, chairperson for Cohasset Pack 38.

Pack 38 welcomes their new cub scouts:

Den 6: Jason Murphy

Den 9: Alice McWilliams—Den Leader; Paul Snow, Eric Snow, Michel Gobes, Nicholas Curran, Ryan McWilliams.

Our next pack meeting will be Nov. 19 (Wed) at the Deer Hill School 7-8 p.m. All the scouts are asked to bring a non-perishable food item to the meeting. This will be placed in a Thanksgiving food basket to be given to a deserving family in need.

Christmas is around the corner and annually Pack 38 cubs can make or buy a decoration (one per scout) for the Pack's Christmas tree. The tree will be donated to a local nursing home. We also can make or bake a donation for the Cohasset Church Fair.

Each den leader can decide what they would like their den to give. (Last year we had delicious fudge, cookies, brownies as well as gingerbread houses and decorations.)

If anyone has any extra cub scout shirts, scarfs or hats and would like to donate them to Pack 38, it would be greatly appreciated. Please call Linday Farrag, 383-9519 or Jane Long, 383-1281.

Art Center elects new officers for 1987

At the annual meeting of the South Shore Art Center members, new officers and board members were elected.

The newly elected officers are Ralph Lawson of Duxbury, treasurer, and Ali Swedock of Scituate, corresponding secretary and the new board members are Jacqueline Dormitzer and Shirley Neer, both of Cohasset, and Margery Atherton of Norwell.

Continuing their terms of office are Claffy Williams of Cohasset, president; F. Allen Weisenfluh of Cohasset, vice president, and Anita Franks of North Scituate, recording secretary. Serving on the board are Thomas Hamiton, Richard Henderson, Julie Guild and Sheldon Ripley, all of Cohasset; Don Lettis, Stan Nikkel and Chris Rifkin, all of Hingham. Sheldon Ripley has also served as a past president and an adivsor.

The board of directors and its officers lends its leadership to directing the Center in terms of growth and span of influence on the arts in the communities of the South Shore.

'Alice in Wonderland' to be presented at town hall

The magic of author Lewis Carroll's classic tale "Alice In Wonderland" will come to life on the Cohasset Town Hall stage this holiday season when the Cohasset Dramatic Club presents its first play of the 1986-1987 community theater season.

Playdates of "Alice In Wonderland" will be Friday and Saturday, Nov. 21 and 22 with curtain time at 8 p.m., and Sunday, Nov. 23, a matinee at 2 p.m.

Directing "Alice" will be Ellen Kelley, a teacher of dramatics at the South Shore Conservatory and Director of the Dramatic Club's productions of "Scenes From American Life" and "Scapino". Ellen also has appeared in Cohasset productions, notably in "A Man For All Seasons". She often can be seen in production aspects of Dramatic Club shows, working behind the scenes. Production Manager for the Cohasset presentation of "Alice In Wonderland" is Helen Ketcham, and Scene Designer is Sheldon Ripley.

In the role of Alice will be Cohasset's Kate DeLima, backed by a talented cast of actors and actresses of diverse ages. "Alice In Wonderland" is a play designed to be performed by a combination of youth and age, and appeals to the young and young-at-heart of any age. Veterans of numerous Cohasset Town Hall productions can be seen in the forthcoming "Alice", and newcomers to the Dramatic Club will be equally well represented in a cast numbering more than thirty.

Lewis Carroll's delightful characters will abound in this stage version of "Alice", from the Mad Hatter to the March Hare, the Cheshire Cat, and White Rabbit, the King of Hearts (and a veritable "deck" of playing cards), the Red and White Queens, the Queen of Hearts, Tweedledum and Tweedledee, the Duchess, the Dormouse, the White Knight, Humpty Dumpty, the Mock Turtle and a host of other ingenious characters will appear, as they do in Carroll's original tale.

Alice, portrayed by Cohasset's Kate deLima, is a bit perplexed as she confronts a very strange caterpillar in the fantasy world of Wonderland. The Dramatic Club presentation is set for Nov. 21, 22 and 23.

Tickets for the Cohasset production of "Alice In Wonderland" will be $4, available at the door at times of the performance, and will be available in advance prior to playweek, at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

A special Dress Rehearsal of "Alice" Thursday, Nov. 20 at 8 p.m. will welcome Senior Citizens as guests of the Club, without charge.

Local nurse fulfills promise to help others

Recalling her experiences as part of an international medical evaluation team in Ethiopia and Afghanistan, Mullaney said, "in Ethiopia, 20,000 kids survived because of my help. They went from being malnourished and dying, to healthy, active kids. I've seen the beauty of life, and the fact that we all can make a difference. I'm doing everything on my part to make that change."

The 31 year-old Cohasset native is now bound for more accomplishment as she begins a new venture. The organization she initiated last year after her final trip to Afghanistan, World Emergency Life Line, received federal tax exempt status in September. Now is she readying for the real work.

"It's exciting to be a new organization," Mullaney said. "The reason I became a new organization, was that after returning from Ethiopia and Somalia, I realized the various organizations in the third world were spending money inappropriately, and people who donated this money really didn't understand that."

WELL will be different, she guaranteed.

Mullaney returned last week from a month's tour, scanning the 380 Pakistan refugee camps. There, she saw more than three million refugees and transit camp residents from Afghanistan.

"I visited the various campsites," she explained, "and stayed with the international organizations. I looked at 14 camps and narrowed down the priority to two project proposals."

WELL will fund these two selected proposals - projects Mullaney has determined will prove "economically sufficient while improving the quality of life for the most people."

The organization will concentrate its funding efforts on training programs, particularly community health projects. As Mullaney explained, when someone sends a donation to most international relief organizations, they have no idea what the funds accomplish.

She personally guarantees that every dollar donated to WELL is used toward a specific goal, to teach the residents of these third world countries how to survive.

"Let me explain," she said matter-of-factly, elbows resting comfortably atop the table. "If some other organization receives $25,000, that money is often used to purchase something like Pedialite (a liquid formula used to reverse dehydration in children). For only $5,000, I would initiate an oral rehydration program at a refugee camp, where the residents would learn how to prevent dehydration.

"If you gave me $1,000, every dollar will be used to fund the rehydration program. You're donating to the program, not to overhead or administrative costs."

Mullaney is keeping it simple. Her office is non existent. The kitchen on South Main Street serves her well.

"The money sent to WELL will be immediately earmarked to one project, not 300," she added. "I can tell you, for instance, that your money is going to a training program in Pakistan, training midwives because so many babies are born with tetanus. It's caused by the use of non sterile instruments during birth. It's not technical. It's a simple training program, yet so many babies will survive because of it. Right now, most Pakistan mothers have 9 or ten children and maybe three survive. With simple training, that number will be much greater."

Eileen Mullaney

An experienced teacher, Mullaney said the refugees in Pakistan are a particularly 'captive' audience. "They are there because of a situation they can not control. They are eager to be accepted, to survive and they'll listen to you."

WELL, according to its pretty, petite administrator, is based on the philosphy of preventative health care for third world citizens.

While back home, Mullaney will take on a second assignment - chief fundraiser. Thursday, Nov. 13, she is scheduled to speak to the Hingham Rotary. She has slated several more talks throughout the state, in schools and to private companies, requesting funds for her mission.

She explained her current goal.

Right now, Mullaney explained in a brief geography lesson, it is winter in northern Pakistan. The Hindu Kush Mountains near the Himalayas separate the country from the scourged nation of Afghanistan. As the sophisticated war machinery of the Soviets do battle with the poorly-equipped natives, the only rescue for these simple people is through the mountain range.

Currently, there's a foot of snow covering those mountains, she said, which includes the second highest mountain in the world, K2.

"These natives are trying to make the pass from Pakistan into Afghanistan, and their greatest problem is not clothing or food or water. It's frostbite. For the past five years, the medical teams in Pakistan have been doing more amputees because of frostbite, than any other procedure," she said.

The refugees, she noted, are not in need of expensive clothing or a tonnage of food. "What we need for these people are snowshoes. And I'm also asking for a snowmobile. It's a 27-mile drive in Northern Pakistan. All we'd need is about ten pairs of boots and snowshoes, and they could keep sending them back once they completed the journey," Mullaney said.

Cohasset Rotary has already donated $500 to Mullaney which paid her hotel bill during the month's stay in Pakistan.

"The problems in these countries is an untold story," she continued. "I don't think anyone can understand the devastation caused by this political situation. It's a very political war in the minds of the Soviets that's seen in a religious context by the Afghanistans."

The 31 year-old nurse said she thought long before deciding to develop her own relief organization. "This (fundraising) is very difficult for me," she admitted. "Especially after the media coverage of the famine last year, knowing how some people gave their last pennies to help the people there. I know a lot of people are skeptical now, wondering if their money really ever got to the people.

"My goal is to convince everyone that their money will be followed from A to Z. I'll show you slides of what we're doing with your money," she noted, displaying some of the award-winning black and white photographs of the famine victims. "I'll tell you, I don't feel great asking for money, but seeing the situation I have seen and now being amongst such abundance, I'm trying my best to strike a happy medium. I'll do anything to improve their quality of life.

"It's horrible to see their pain, and they're begging us not to ignore them. Don't deny this sitiuation, they say. These people are homeless, dying and sick, and it's all because of war . . . "

If anyone would like to contribute to World Emergency Life Line, or would like to have Mullaney speak to an organization or school, you may contact her at 383-9499.

Local artist enters a very special classroom

Connolly has brought with her a range of different materials and ideas for the kids to work with. Last week, they had a ball with clay and glitter.

"I talk about imagination and imaginary things," she said, "things that don't have to look real. They talked about houses that had arms and legs and faces, and they did a fantastic job.

"It was the most logical thing in the world," Connolly said. "It sounds funny, but it was an idea that went beautifully. It generated a lot of talking."

Krantz explained, "With art always comes the use of language, which is what we do here. We teach kids how to use language and we encourage their language use, both verbally and expressively."

The youngsters can learn how to follow directions by listening to Connolly and seeing what she wants them to do, as well as by requesting things from her, she added.

"This reinforces everything else that's going on here during the day; our projects require a lot of attention and motor skills. I see it as a real positive thing for the kids."

Connolly agreed, "There's a running dialogue while we work on things. It's nice to be able to bring in pieces of work and talk about them and talk about the ideas and not have somebody say, 'That's silly.'"

She explained, "We can have a logical discussion without being overly intellectual. We can talk about the ideas, about the colors.

"The response in the children, going back and using those ideas, is wonderful. They usually pick right up on what the artist is doing with the piece.

"There's a sensitivity that's there," Connolly added, "that doesn't require you to know a lot about it. They tend to feel things, I think."

While Connolly has not received special training in working with special needs kids, her arts background has garnered her plenty of experience teaching.

"I had done workshops at shows, where you talk about a piece while you work on it," she said. "With kids, I've done what's called a hands-on workshop, where they make something and you make something.

"I've worked for the South Shore Arts Center on and off for the past six years and now teach five classes for them on a full-time basis. So, the teaching came out of being an artist, not out of being a teacher."

Connolly also cited her experience working with the children's librarians at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, and her experience working with her son's kindergarten teacher as "teacher training."

The "Very Special Arts" program in Boston paved Connolly's way to working with special needs youngsters.

"They put on an arts festival once or twice per year for special needs and handicapped kids," she said, "because art and music aren't required in their curriculum. I didn't know that when I did those workshops."

Connolly explained, her friend Syma Komarin, also an artist, enlisted her for a similar project here.

"We worked with different groups of special needs kids in town," she said, "and some of the teachers commented, the kids loved making things, but usually didn't get to do it."

Connolly went to Judy Volungis, the children's program coordinator at the South Shore Arts Center and Cohasset Community Center and initiated her work with Krantz's class.

Volungis explained, a grant from the DROWN Foundation made the program's trial run possible.

The program will run again in the spring, she said, and will continue until the grant runs out. Then, a proposal for the program's backing by the school department "is our next step."

How the school committee reacts to such a proposal, may depend the results of Connolly's endeavors with the youngsters at Deer Hill School.

Krantz said she would like to see the program extended.

"I think it's great," she commented. "It's a great opportunity for all the kids to work together. This is an activity that's non-threatening for the lower-functioning kids and it can be challenging for the higher-functioning kids.

"Everybody can feel good about what they're doing," she said. "I just think it's wonderful."

At least for a while, Wednesdays will continue to be special to the kids in Shari Krantz's class.

Republican Club meeting

The South Shore Republican Club will hold a Christmas boutique at its next meeting Monday, Nov. 17, at the First Parish Church hall, off Route 123, Norwell Center.

Speaker at the 12:30 p.m. meeting will be Deborah Anderson, publisher of the weekly newspaper, Bridgewater Independent. Hostesses for the noon social will be members from Pembroke.

The boutique, under the direction of Elsie Akscyn of Brockton and Marie MacLeod of Whitman, will be held before and after the meeting. Members are asked to bring articles for sale-handcrafts, baked goods and white elephants in good condition. The boutique, which will also be held at the Dec. 15 meeting, is the club's major fund-raiser.

CHS Book Fair

The Library at the Jr./Sr. High School will be sponsoring a Book Fair of paperback books for grades 7, 8 and 9 November 17 and 18 in celebration of American Education Week and Children's Book Week.

Parents are welcome to shop for some great stocking stuffers. Come visit the CHS Library on the 17th or 18th!

Nursery School Startup

The CHS Home Economics Department announces the opening of this year's preschool program. We seek the participation of children from the community. This program operates four days a week from 8:45 to 10 a.m. To become part of the program, the children must be a minimum of 2 1/2 years old and toilet trained. The program will begin on November 17th.

Anyone interested in having their children participate in this program, please call and leave your name and phone number with the CHS school secretary (383-6100) and you will be contacted.

High School book sale

The library at the Junior/Senior High School will be sponsoring a book fair of paperback books for grades 7, 8 and 9.

The sale will take place Nov. 17 and 18 in celebration of American Education Week/Children's Book Week.

Parents are welcome. Books make great gifts.

High School art club update

The Art Club is in full swing!

The club began the season with a trip to the Duxbury Museum Complex; students enjoyed two wonderful shows.

The second meeting featured Jenna Emmons in full Japanese costume presenting her slide show on Japan. Students also enjoyed Japanese music and food.

The next meeting will take place on Nov. 12, a trip to the Brockton Art Museum.

Student Government delegates

Joe Mazza was elected Tuesday, Nov. 4 as Cohasset High School's delegate to Student Government Day.

Another junior, Jay Marsac was chosen as alternate delegate. The election was run by the Student Council with president Philip Mahoney and vice president Bob Durkin in charge.

Both Joe and Jay will now attend several seminars in state government at the State House in Boston during the next five months. Joe's name will be picked to replace an important state government official during student goverment day proceedings at the State House on Friday, April 4. Coordinator for the program at Cohasset High School is Social Studies Department Chairman Edward F. Sheehan.

Joe, a member of the Alternative School at Cohasset High School, is very active in drama presentations. Recently he was a member of the cast in the very popular play, "Take Her — She's Mine." For the past three months Joe has worked as an intern in the State House Office of Representative Mary Jeanette Murray.

The alternative delegate, Jay Marsac, is presently serving as president of the junior class. He also is a member of the State Student Advisory Committee. A member of the very successful school soccer team, Jay has also been a member of the basketball and tennis teams.

Science—Sailing Around the World

Joseph Beckers Science classes at the Deer Hill School are participating in a unique activity, the SOC (Student Ocean Challenge) which coincides with the ongoing BOC (British Oxygen Co.) Around-the-World race of single sailors in Class I (59-foot maximum sailboats) and Class II (39' maximum sailboats).

The boats left Newport, R.I., August 30, 1986 and are expected to finish back in Newport in June, 1987.

Mr. Becker's curriculum makes use of maps and charts, instructing Deer Hill sixth graders in the specifics of geography—wind, tides, ports, climate, etc. The boats port at Capetown, Sydney and Rio before the return to Newport.

The students have each adopted a particular boat to follow—plotting longitude and latitudes and reporting the progress of the race. The children have written to several of the skippers of the boats.

The record for this Around the World race is 159 days. Watch this paper for further reports of the race. In the meantime, what a fun way to learn geography. Right, sixth graders?

Osgood donations

We are looking for a donation . . . The first grade classrooms are in need of Rabbit Ear Antennae for their audio visual equipment. Anyone who might have this item may contact the school office. Thank you.

JOSPEH OSGOOD PARENTS' MEETING The PSO will host a general meeting for the Joseph Osgood Parents on Wednesday morning, November 19 at the Unitarian Parish House. Coffee will be served at 9:15 a.m. From 9:30-11:15 a.m. a round table discussion will include a wide range of issues pertinent to Osgood School. Mary Benbow, elementary school occupational therapist, will discuss the developmental handwriting program which she has designed for use throughout the state. Dorothy Wondolowski, curriculum enrichment coordinator, will provide an update on her work with students and teachers. Principal Jack Creamer will report on the successful teachers' workshop on the creative writing process and on how to make the most of the parent/teacher conferences.

Babysitting will be available, free of charge, upstairs at the Parish House. No reservations necessary. Parents not available for daytime meetings, please contact PSO Reps. Karen Devine and Sue McNamara or your room mothers for information on the above issues. Hope to see you there! Karen Devine (-1929) or Sue McNamara (-6945)

Money needed for shipment

The Cohasset School Libraries will soon be sending a shipment of books we no longer need to Fiji where Katherine Whitly was serving as a Peace Corps volunteer.

We are asking for donations from towns people to help defray shipping expenses. Checks may be made out to Cohasset High School Library and should be brought to the school. Thanks in advance for your help.

Uncle is no bore

My Uncle Dennis is never a bore. He lives with us and he is 23. Dennis always tells me funny stories about when he was my age and at school. Uncle Dennis told me some funny names like Danny Drimple Hock, Rogmelia Rat Musin, and Peter Zarnt. He takes me for subs and candy very often. Dennis takes me fishing and to Provincetown. Do you think that he is a bore? If you do, he always takes me out on the Ski-Do in the winter. Sometime you might like to go with us on one of our trips to find out how much fun we have together. Now if you don't think that that is fun, I don't know what is fun for you!

Vo-Tech open house Nov. 19

The students and faculty of South Shore Vocational Technical high school will be holding the annual open house on Wednesday, Nov. 19, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Both campuses will be open and shuttle busses will be available to transport visitors between campuses. The Hanover campus is located at 476 Webster Street, and the Abington campus is located at Ralph Hamlin Lane.

The open house will allow prospective students, their parents and the general public to view the facilities, investigate the programs and speak with members of the teaching, administrative and guidance staff. Students in each shop will present demonstrations and examples of the type of quality work produced by the students of the school.

The display in the machine packaging maintenance shop will include a recently donated robotic piece of equipment valued at more than a quarter of a million dollars. The robot was donated to South Shore by the Proctor and Gamble company.

Academic teachers will be available to discuss courses and extracurricular activities. The members of the physical education department will also be available to answer questions regarding the varsity, junior varsity and intramural sports program.

The Hanover Campus offers training in the career fields of automotive, auto body, heating/ventilation and air conditioning, welding, precision metal fabrication, machineshop, drafting, carpentry and electronics.

League commuter rail forum

On Thursday, Nov. 20 the Hingham League of Women Voters will present a lunchtime forum on the issue of the proposed South Shore commuter rail service from noon to 1:00 p.m. at the Second Parish Church, 685 Main St., Hingham.

Panel members for the discussion will be Richard Cook of the Hingham Planning Board, State Senator William Golden, William Grimes of the Hingham Transportation Committee and Holly Welch of S.T.O.P., a Hingham Citizen Organization.

Box lunches are available for $3.50 or bring your own bag lunch. Babysitting is also available. Doors will open at 11:30 a.m.

To reserve a box lunch and/or sitter space please call 749-6040 or 749-3927 by Nov. 17.

The Hingham League does not have a stated position on this issue and supports no side in the discussion.

Holiday fair Nov. 22

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will hold its annual holiday bazaar on Saturday, Nov. 22, at the V.F.W. Hall, Route 3A in Scituate.

Grand prize once again will be a beautiful blue and white handmade quilt.

Live poinsettia plants will be on sale along with tree trimmings, Thanksgiving and seasonal holiday items. Admission is free.

The holiday boutique is one of the club's chief fundraisers for its scholarship fund. Join us for your adventure in shopping and browsing, and you may be the lucky person who will take home a beautiful quilt.

The monthly meeting of the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will be held on Monday, Nov. 17, at 9:30 at the Unitarian Church Parish House, 23 North Main St., Cohasset.

The month's guest speaker, Kathleen Laidlaw, who will be speaking on the history of Scituate, Mrs. Laidlaw is the president of the Scituate Historical Society.

If you are a new resident of the Scituate or Cohasset area, you are welcome to join the monthly meeting and meet other newcomers to your area.

For information on the club, call Liz in Cohasset at 383-9865 or Christiane at 545-2814 in Scituate.

Seahawks Dance

The Seahawks Youth Hockey, which includes the towns of Scituate, Norwell, Cohasset, Hull and Marshfield in its youth hockey program, will be sponsoring it's annual get-together dance.

The dance will be held Nov. 15, at St. Francis Cabrini Hall, Hood St., in Scituate at 8 p.m. Tickets in advance will be $15.00 a couple, admission at the door will be $20.00 a couple.

For further information or advance tickets see your team administrator or call Linda Graves at 383-6924.

Amateur gardeners to meet

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet on Tuesday, November 18, at 1:00 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Edith Quigley.

The program, "Flowers by Jan", will be presented by Jan Lydon from North Marshfield.

Annual dinner meeting

Tuesday, Nov. 18 is the date of the Society's Annual Meeting with catered dinner and a special evening program. The location will be Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House, the time of the dinner will be 6:30 p.m. There will be a short "social hour" starting at 6 p.m. with wine available for a $1 donation. Caterer will be Jessica, and the menu will feature the popular sherried beef with wild rice, salad, vegetables and dessert.

The special guest speaker for the evening is Eugene Baril, official historian of the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles, whose subject will be "early automobiles and automobiling." Mr. Baril is a student of early automobiles and automobiling in Massachusetts, and has gathered extensive information about this fascinating aspect of the late 19th and early 20th century scene.

Advance reservations for the special evening are $10, and must be made by Tuesday, Nov. 11. Checks payable to Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, MA 02025. Phone reservations taken at 383-6930 or 383-1351. Please remember, advance reservations are a must.

Historical Society meeting

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its Annual Meeting with a catered dinner and special guest speaker at the Unitarian Parish House Hall, Tuesday, November 18 at 6:30 p.m.

There will be a brief social hour preceding at 6 p.m. Catering the sherried-beef dinner will be Jessica's.

A short business meeting will follow, with election of Officers and Directors for the coming year.

The evening's special guest speaker will be Eugene Baril, historian of the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles and retired Registry Officer. Mr. Baril's topic will be a fascinating look at early automobiles and automobiling.

Advance reservations are needed for the dinner; call the Society at 383-6930 or mail reservations to the Society at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset 02025. Cost of the dinner is $10 per reservation.

Sixty Plus Club meeting

There will not be any sandwiches served at the November meeting of the 60 Plus Club. There will be coffee only. Bingo will be enjoyed after the meeting.

The annual Christmas dinner will be held at Hugo's Lighthouse Wed., Dec. 10. There will be a choice of schrod or roast beef for $9 per person. Please send checks to Mary Donovan

A special room for kids only at Village Fair

Responding to runaway popularity that saw swarms of youngsters crowding on small quarters, the exciting "Secret Room" of Cohasset's Village Fair, Dec. 6, is moving this year to St. Stephen's Church where children will find hundreds of reasonably-priced items to purchase for family and friends.

The Secret Room quickly outgrew a room in the Congregational Church, moved to a larger room in the annex, only to find last year that it was virtually impossible to handle the throngs waiting to shop.

"Our new quarters in St. Stephen's in the 'Watermelon Room' will provide much more space to display the items and also has ample room for those waiting to go in," explains Ann Delaney, chairman of the popular Fair feature.

The concept of providing a place where children could shop in secret to buy affordable presents for their parents and family was an instant hit with youngsters. Parents are not admitted to the room and guides help the purchasers select appropriate items. Once selected and paid for, the item is gift wrapped and tagged so that the child has the present all ready to deposit under the Christmas tree.

The route from the Town Hall area along Highland Avenue to St. Stephen's will be marked with signs to make clear the way to the new location.

Preparation of sale items in the Secret Room has been under way for weeks. The committee expects to have more than 1000 items priced between 25 cents and $3, when it opens at 10 a.m. December 6.

Each of the five partipating churches have set a goal of contributing 300 of the gift items so that the total could reach 1500 if the goals are achieved. Among the items will be ornaments, toys, decorations, novelties of all kinds to appeal to mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters and friends.

Working with Ms. Delaney of St. Stephen's Church are Lillian Ketchum of the Congregational Church, Kathy Pratt of St. Anthony's, Pat Baird of the Unitarian, and Georgia Verginis of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church.

The Secret Room feature is another example of the joint effort of the five participating churches in raising funds for their individual church programs.

St. Stephen's services

Nominating Committee Formed: A committee consisting of Dick Avery, Bill Broe, Betty May, Dawn Vivian, and chaired by Joyce Sturdy, is now soliciting names and suggestions from the parish of people to serve on the Vestry (the "governing body of the church"), the Junior Warden (an administrative aide to the Rector), Treasurer, Assistant Treasurer, Clerk (secretary to the Vestry and Parish Meeting), Representative to the District (the association of South Shore Episcopal Churches of which St. Stephen's is a part), and Representative to Diocesan Convention (the "governing body of the diocese"). Any parishioner who is interested in suggesting a candidate for the committee's consideration may contact Joyce at 383-6610.

A Calling Process: Though the actual process remains basically unchanged from years past, the Nominating Committee this year is being asked to think of its work in terms of a process of calling—who is it that God is calling to serve on the Vestry.

This is a prayerful, reflective process of discernment. It is a bit different from an electoral process that results in State House elections, for instance. A calling arises out of a community, not individually. And so all the parish is asked to help in this discernment. The Committee will finish its work by January in time for the annual parish meeting.

Since the process is one of discernment and calling, it is open-ended from the beginning. Your names and suggestions are very valuable to the Committee now. Additional names will not be solicited from the floor of the annual meeting, where all the parish will vote for those called to serve.

Second Congregational Church

Search committee—Save the date—November 16th! Having reached a unanimous agreement, the committee will present its candidate for new minister of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. He will preach at the regular worship service on Sunday, November 16. The service will be followed by a special reception. Please join us to hear and meet the candidate and his family.

Church School—If there is anyone with a child under three years of age who would like to attend the worship service on Sunday mornings but is unclear about child care, please call Gail at 383-0350 and I'll be glad to discuss any questions or concerns you may have.

Confirmation class—There has been an excellent response to the offering of confirmation this year. Eleven youth have enrolled and participated eagerly in the first class. The curriculum being used is the book My Confirmation published by United Church Press. It presents the fundamentals of Christian faith in a straight-forward way. Stop by the minister's office and look it over if you like. Our next class will be at 11:05 a.m., November 16.

First Parish Services

Wednesday Night Potlucks continue through November 19th. Attendance was small at the first potluck, but the foot was delicious. Come join us for these informal meals. No reservation required. Just bring food of your choosing.

Music and Worship Committee will meet at 8 p.m., Thursday, November 13 in the Parish House.

Care Circle: Please return your card to the church office or call in your information.

Greek Orthodox youth activities

The GOYA group of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church of Cohasset consisting of parish youth for 12 to 18 years of age is involved in a program of religious, cultural and social activities.

The newly elected officers of the group for the 1986-1987 year was sworn in October 19 at a ceremony after the conclusion of the Sunday Liturgy service.

The new officers are: president, Michael Lelecas; vice president, Kim Costas; recording secretary, Jennifer Costas; corresponding secretary, Aspasia Maheras; treasurer, Nicholas Lelecas. The advisors of GOYA are Father Maheras, Sharon and Chuck Costas.

Meetings are held at the Parish house on the first and third Sunday of the month at 7 p.m.

Anyone interested in participating in the GOYA program should call the church office at 383-6388 or the Costas' at 545-4463.

Art Center blue ribbon exhibit

The opening of the South Shore Art Center's annual member's Blue Ribbon Exhibit will usher in the 1986 holiday season.

Works by gallery artists will hang in the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, from November 12 through Christmas Eve Day, December 24. A formal reception along with a preview of the "Holiday Shoppe" crafts will be on Sunday, November 23 from 4-6 p.m. The exhibit reception will feature music by Joni Jensen, noted South Shore musician, performing on the virginal, a keyboard instrument much like a harpsichord.

Jensen has a master's in music from the New England Conservatory, as well as extensive training in Europe and the United States as a singer. She performs with the Unicorn Singers and teachers piano and voice on the South Shore.

The annual Blue Ribbon exhibit represents a variety of media and style with blue ribbons awarded in various categories. This exhibit gives gallery artists and members a chance to show their work in a comprehensive exhibit and for the general public an opportunity to see the quality of work created by Center artists.

A requested donation of $3 at the opening is to benefit the MacIvor Reddie Scholarship Fund awarded in the spring to a deserving high school senior from the South Shore who plans to pursue a career in the visual arts. MacIvor Reddie, himself, was a well known watercolorist from Cohasset who was responsible for painting the murals that are in the rotunda of the Cohasset Paul Pratt Public Library. He was one of the original founders of the South Shore Art Center and he was the head of the painting department of the Art Institute of Boston.

Hours for viewing the exhibit are Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information, please call the Center, 383-9548. The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

START PLANNING YOUR CHRISTMAS PARTIES NOW!!!

The PSO Monte Carlo Night held last weekend was a huge success and a bountiful fundraiser for the schools.

Monte Carlo Night a success

The PSO's Monte Carlo Night, held last Saturday at the Cohasset Golf Club, was a resounding fun-filled success.

Thanks to the support of many Cohasset residents and the hard work of dozens of volunteers, the money made will enable the Parent School Organization to continue to provide educational programs and curriculum enrichment to the Cohasset schools.

Dick Caefer and Ralph Kidder, fund-raising co-chairmen and committee members Jame Kyrieos and Diana Rousseau made the evening exciting for all "Monte Carlo-ites." Others who assisted included: casino tellers, Rita Kirk and Trish Jordan; dealers, Jack McNamara, Brian McKerney, Jim Kirk, Jim Story, Bob Jordan, Karen Devine, Russ Reidy, Barbara Meehan, Dan Volungis, Patience Towle, Rick Towle and Jayne Nussdorfer. Publicity: Merlyn Corcoran, Alice McWilliams, Carol Reilly, Monica McKenney and music provided by Chris Kyrieos.

Local resident promoted

Judith A. Bieniek of Cohasset has been promoted to manager in the tax department of the Boston office of Peat Marwick, the international accounting firm. She is a specialist in employee benefits taxation.

Prior to joining the Firm's Boston office in 1985, Bieniek held positions with Gould, Inc. and Aetna Life & Casualty. She received her B.S. degree in accounting from Arizona State University in 1980.

A native of Naperville, Illinois, she currently resides in Cohasset with her husband Thomas.

Rep. Murray co-sponsors proposal

Legislation which would grant immunity from lawsuits to those who volunteer their time to organized sports for youths has been co-sponsored by Representative Kevin Poirier (R-3rd Plymouth District). Representative Mary Jeanette Murray has co-sponsored this legislation.

"This Good Samaritan bill will protect volunteers and their organizations against the type of lawsuits that could discourage civic-minded individuals and organizations from making a wide variety of sports activities available to our children," Rep. Murray said.

The proposal would cover volunteer managers, coaches, umpires and referees as well as the organizations which sponsor the sports.

"Having been involved in little league baseball for 11 years as secretary and in charge of the canteen and coaching basketball, I know the importance of these sports activities for young girls and boys," Rep. Murray said.

Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, the three towns which Rep. Murray represents, all have volunteer youth athletic programs.

Rep. Murray's concern stems from a lawsuit filed in New Jersey by the parents of a little league player who misjudged a fly ball and was struck in the face. The parents sued and in July reached an out-of-court settlement. The terms of the settlement were not made public. The president of the association which sponsored the team said he probably would not pursue the matter because he could not afford the legal fees. The bill would not extend immunity to cover gross negligence or intentional acts which harm a person.

The bill would cover sports programs in general, including baseball, softball, football, basketball, soccer or any other competitive and formally recognized sport conducted primarily for players under the age of 18.

The legislation is currently being reviewed by the Judiciary Committee.

Nuclear drill planned

Boston Edison is planning an emergency plan exercise at Pilgrim Nuclear Power Station on Dec. 10, which supercedes the earlier announced date of Oct. 23.

The Dec. 10 date will allow the Federal Emergency Agency to participate in the exercise. The agency had been unable to be part of the earlier scheduled drill. The new date will also make possible expanded participation for state and local officials.

Senior Citizens news. . .

Selectmen unanimously voted to proclaim Tuesday, Nov. 18, Drug and Alcohol Awareness Day.

Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard H. Rowland urges elders and their families to become aware of health problems created by mismanagement of medications taken by elders.

"The problem ranges from accidental overmedication to complications due to an increased susceptibility to drug effects resulting from the aging process itself," explained by Secretary Rowland.

"As people age and experience more ailments, the number of different medications prescribed to them can increase in proportion," Secretary Rowland added. "The more medications an elder takes, the more possible interaction and side effects he or she will be exposed to. As dosage schedules become more complicated, the chance of making a mistake also occasionally goes up."

"Medications, used appropriately and carefully, can dramatically improve the quality of life for an older person. But they have the potential to be a serious detriment. Asking the right questions at the right time can lead to a healthier lifestyle for elders," concluded Secretary Rowland.

The Cohasset Council on Aging Senior Center, with cooperation from South Shore Hospital Department of Pharmacy Services, is sponsoring a Prescription Evaluation Program on Tuesday, Nov. 18 from 1 to 3 p.m. Area residents are invited to meet with SSH's registered pharmacists at the Senior Center to ask questions about their prescription medicines during this program.

Everyone who takes a prescription drug should find out what the medication is for; how much to take and how long to take it (with meals? at prescribed intervals?); and what, if anything, he or she needs to avoid while taking the drug (alcohol? other drugs? certain food?). SSH's pharmacists will answer these and other questions about medication. It is important to health professionals and consumers that all patients get the facts they need.

Persons interested in attending South Shore Hospital's Prescription Evaluation Program should call 383-9112, Monday through Friday, 1 to 3 p.m. to make reservations. Complimentary refreshments will be served and educational information will be available.

WALKING YOUR WAY TO BETTER HEALTH The Cohasset Council on Aging "Strutters" will be hosting Good Health Walk Tuesday, Nov. 18 at 10 a.m. from the town hall. Anyone 40 or older is welcome to join the group for a two mile walk for good health. For more information on this program call 383-9112.

LAWSON ESTATE SHOW — November 25 at 11:30 a.m. at the First Parish House, 23 No. Main Street. Chub and Jane Chessia will show the Thomas Lawson Estate slides. Free to all seniors. Call to make reservations for lunch and slides by calling 383-1100 before Nov. 24 at noon.

NEW PROGRAM - HOLIDAY SPECIAL — The Diet Workshop is offering an exciting eight week weight-loss program at the Cohasset Senior Center in the Community Center, beginning Tuesday, Nov. 18 from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. The program will focus on current nutrition concepts, the importance of regular exercise and safe, healthy weight loss. The cost will be $36 for six weeks of classes.

Give yourself a special holiday gift, join us for the first step in changing you for the new year! A new You!

Helen Emmett, a Diet Workshop instructor for seven years, will conduct the program. All are welcome. Please call Kathy Bryanton at the Cohasset Senior Center to register, 383-9112. November 20, 1986, Books for Listening with Marion Waddell.

Remember when you were a child, and enjoyed being read to? When you looked forward to another chapter of Robinson Crusoe, of how he survived and escaped danger several times, as a cast-away on a desert island?

Well, now you can recapture that delightful feeling of being read to by a loved one. Please join us for a fun filled hour on Nov. 20, at 1 p.m. for Books for Listening over; this goal told Bellingham and everybody watching that Cohasset was indeed a team with character and pride.

TRIPS — Boston Ballet presents The Nutcracker on Dec. 14 at 2 p.m. at the Wang Center. Ticket and bus from the Town Hall is $30. Call the Senior Center before Nov. 20. Hurry! Tickets will go fast! Give someone special a Christmas gift early and enjoy the day with someone special. Call 383-9112. All are welcome to come.

Field hockey . . .

Bellingham heated up in the second half and put tremendous pressure on Cohasset's defense. But, the Skippers hung tough and forced the game into a 10 minute overtime.

Three minutes into the overtime Bellingham finally scored, but the Hawks did not walk away with the win.

Cohasset still refused to yield to Bellingham and put pressure on Bellingham's goal. Even with mere seconds remaining in the game, the Skippers continued to bang away at Bellingham's net in hopes of keeping their successful season alive. However, time ran out along with Cohasset's dream of becoming state champions, and the season ended with a 2-1 loss to Bellingham.

Through the midst of postgame tears and sniffles one could hear my sobs above all else. Yes, I was upset about losing the game, but I was even more upset at the fact that this was my last high school field hockey game. After playing four years of varsity field hockey, I could not help but reflect over these many seasons and see how much my team has grown.

Four years ago we were the laughing stock of the field hockey league when our record stood at an amazing 2-5-11. The two wins were certainly not amazing, nor were the five losses; what was amazing about this season was the 11 ties. Many people thought we were the nicest team in the league because we did not want to beat anybody, when in fact we were the luckiest team in the league because we could have just as easily lost all 11 of those games.

However, legend has it that if we had won just four of those 11 ties we would have made the tournament; and thus, Cohasset saw its first faint glimmer of success that very unusual year.

After graduating a multitude of seniors the following year, Cohasset started with a clean slate. This season was probably the most important year for Cohasset in terms of the team's growth and development. For it was this season that this year's seniors (who were then sophomores) began to play together and gelled into a single unit.

What was supposed to be a building year for Cohasset turned out to be its most successful season in years, as the Skippers qualified for the state tournament. Although the girls were knocked out in the first round of the tournament, Cohasset got a taste of success and wanted more. In this pivotal season Maria Cahill and Maureen Farren emerged as two young stars who would soon become seasoned and talented veterans.

Finally, last year the team enjoyed greater success than ever imagined. Not only did Cohasset win the league title and reach the semi-finals of the state tournament, but we also had an undefeated season until Bellingham finally broke the winning streak and ended the Cinderella season for us. This season also marked the last year in which Gino DiGirolamo would coach. Mr. Di served as a coach, as a cheerleader and most of all as a friend and would be sorely missed this season.

However, Clare Brady who had coached junior varsity field hockey for about 13 years came in this year and took over the reigns of coaching beautifully. Although she was nervous about how the girls would react to her new position, Brady was pleasantly surprised to see how easily the team accepted her as head coach, and she appreciated how hard the girls worked all season long.

Senior co-captain Maria Cahill was also very pleased with this season and felt the team really came together which made the year alot of fun for everybody. Maria had a great season this year and would like to continue playing field hockey for fun next year.

I was the other senior co-captain of the team, and it is with a heavy heart that I write this article.

I have been with the team a long time, and I have seen the team improve phenomenally over the years. I only wish I could continue to play for the team, but I know I must move on and make room for other goalies to take my place.

I just hope that I have given half as much to the Cohasset field hockey program as it has given me.

Community leaders plan drug awareness

Several town and community leaders met last week to discuss how the town can "make an ongoing commitment towards our goal of a strong and healthy community." They have met twice to plan future events "in an effort to raise all citizens' awareness of the threat posed by substance abuse."

Nov. 17, Cohasset officials will join neighboring towns on local cable TV to discuss drug and alcohol abuse at 8 p.m.; Nov. 18, there will be a S.A.D.D. rally for all grades at the junior/senior high school.

In March, health education director Michael Gill will arrange a program entitled "Turning on-Turning Off." He is also arranging a program in which students will visit a prison and see and hear firsthand the tragic results of drug and alcohol abuse and crimes committed under the influence of either."

The PSO will provide notations to be included on menus sent home with students at the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools to remind parents to communicate with their children regarding the awareness day of substance abuse. Nov. 19 at 1 p.m., a program will be presented at Kimball's By The Sea for all liquor license holders, their managers and staff on liquor liability.

Nov. 18 at 10 a.m., seniors will gather at 10 a.m. at Town Hall in a walk for substance abuse awareness. At 1 p.m., a program will be presented by the pharmacy department of the South Shore Hospital entitled "Medication and You." Anyone attending is encouraged to bring their prescription medicines for an evaluation to determine if the prescription, when combined, may produce an undesired side effect. The fire department will be present to help explain certain physical appearances that may be present when a medical emergency may be occurring.

April 8, will be Health Awareness Day at the Town Hall from noon to 4 p.m. Displays will be supplemented with information dealing with substance abuse. The fire and police departments will be available to talk with the public.

That same day, from 7 to 9 p.m., the board of health will present a program at town hall to further extend coverage of Health Day.

The Social Service League has offered to donate assistance and money to promote these planned activities. In addition, each year the League sponsors one entire page in the Rotary Club's telephone directory in which various hotlines and human resource services are listed. Page 123 is traditionally the next to last page in the telephone directory which is sponsored by the League as one of its services to the community.

Selectmen stated, "all ages of our school population will be reminded of our community involvement in the solution to this very real problem as will the seniors of our community, our business leaders and our parents. Without exception all persons contacted have willingly participated in this combined effort-won't you join this effort within your homes?

Seat belt debate continues despite voter repeal

by Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

For the law's proponents, the fight to save the seat belt legislation didn't have a happy ending. But two local residents involved in that struggle are at least pleased the issues were brought to the public's attention and discussed with vigor.

Inta Hall of Hingham has for years been a vocal and tireless advocate of mandatory seat belt legislation.

And Joseph Nedrow of Cohasset was active in the passage of last year's law as a member of the board of directors of the Seat Belt Coalition, along with Hall.

In last week's election, both Hingham and Cohasset voted to retain the mandate.

"I think that even though it was repealed, proponents of the law are glad that the issues were discussed and that people were made aware of those issues. The statistics show that of the 48 percent who voted for the law, only 38 percent actually use seat belts. The other ten percent were those people who listened to the issues and decided the law was proper. I think that's interesting," Nedrow stated.

Hall began her involvement in the seat belt debate on a community level, talking to local organizations, clubs and schools about the need to use safety restraints and seat belts in motor vehicles.

Her impact is more widely felt now. She was recently appointed executive director of the Massachusetts Passenger Safety Association. It is a private, non-profit organization designed to develop community education programs throughout the state.

"My directive," she explained, "is to provide information and education on the seat belt issue."

She has taken her program, initiated in Hingham and surrounding communities, expanded it, and is now proposing its use in the curriculum of schools systems throughout the state.

"It's a little different, working in Boston than in Hingham," she said with a smile. "But if we get people interested in the subject, then they will understand the necessity of this program."

Hall became involved in the fight for seat belt enforcement several years ago after her son, Billy, was killed in an auto accident and a second son, Greg, was head-injured in a separate accident.

She is convinced that continuing education, together with the mandatory seat belt legislation, are the tools necessary to reduce deaths from motor vehicle accidents.

"Greg had no chance. But Billy would be alive today if he had used the seat belt," Hall said, explaining that the restraint would have prevented Billy from being thrown from his vehicle. "All the studies have shown you can educate people 'til you're blue in the face. But if you add a mandate with that, it's much more effective than a law by itself, or education alone."

The familiar, but incorrect assumption made by most drivers, Hall noted, is that motor vehicle accidents will occur to someone else. "But in Hingham alone last year there were 542 injuries from accidents," she stated.

Hall, who is traveling extensively in behalf of the seat belt cause, cites statistics from memory. She seldom refers to notes for verification.

Despite last Tuesday's demise of the year-old legislation, Hall said she will continue her efforts. "I'll just keep going," she said this week. "My focus is on educating the public and that's what I'll continue to do. The day after the election I was talking to the Federation of Women's Clubs. That's what I have to keep doing - talking, educating and keeping this issue in front of the public."

The longtime Hingham resident continued, "after last week, I was naturally disappointed. For whatever reason, we could not convince enough people it was not a rights issue, but a matter of preventing injuries. I'm just delighted that Hingham and Cohasset did understand that. Whatever work I did accomplish in Hingham got through, I guess."

Hall is driven in her quest to enforce the use of car restraints and seat belts. "How is this possibly a civil rights issue?" she asked. "When someone hits you with their car, and hurts you, what rights do you have, what choice is there then? Driving is a public activity not a personal right."

She is personally familiar with another statistic. There are more than 1,500 head injuries each day in this country. More than half of those injuries occurred in a vehicular accident.

"And I know from experience with my son," she said, "after a head injury, that person is never the same. I talk about that to audiences across the state. Seat belts can prevent some of those head injuries.

"Did you know," she continued, "that in this country we lose 10 million workdays a year to employees involved in car accidents? Add that to the cost of doing business, and the expense of car accidents rises into the billions. And those costs are carried onto the consumer."

Some companies, including New England Telephone, have conducted in-house studies on the cost of operating their business. "They found out that their greatest problem was car accidents. They lost about 15 employees in one year to car accidents. Now they have implemented a seat belt policy for all employees. It's an incentive program, which states that the company will not cover disability payments if an employee was injured on the job and was not wearing a seat belt."

Speaking about the lame-duck legislation, Hall noted, "I just wish now we could get our own radio show and talk about our side of this issue.

"I'm really glad we got the issue out into the open. But I think the public was persuaded by the opposition which hammered out their message four hours a day, saying, 'don't tell me what to do.' That voice was obviously stronger than ours. But the entire focus of that argument is incorrect. Enforcing the use of seat belts is not an invasion of civil rights, it's method to save lives and prevent serious injuries," she added.

"I think," Hall stated, "it will be interesting to see what the seat belt usage ratio will be in December when the state conducts its next survey. It'll be curious to see if people will continue to use them as a result of the discussions the past few months.

"Hopefully, more people will have gotten into the habit of wearing a seat belt, and won't stop just because the law has been repealed. We'll have to wait and see," she said.

Nedrow, an executive at General Motors, noted that the death of the legislation will have an unsettling affect on car insurance in this state. "It's inevitable," he said, "because with use of the seat belts, it was proven that fatalities and severe injuries were down. The insurance companies will pass the costs of increased injuries onto the consumer."

He continued, "it's a sad thing. But this will really hit home when a loved one of someone who voted against the law, is hurt or killed in an accident.

"Everyone thought the auto industry had some sort of hidden agenda. But if the public didn't believe us, then they should have seen the sincerity of the medical community who, being involved in a first-hand way, fought for this law."

Nedrow confirmed that in addition to higher insurance costs, Massachusetts' repeal will affect the status of pending legislation in neighboring states. "Last week's vote will definitely be a setback to a mandate in Rhode Island and Maine. All I can say is that the Coalition will keeping working, and emphasizing how important it is that seat belts are used.

"Nothing works as effectively, however, until the issue is brought home. And that's really a sad commentary," he added.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Election '86: a grain or two of trend amid the boredom

By all reputable and measurable standards this was a boring election, as insignificant and unexciting a political event as transpired in any of our lifetimes. Of course, one man's boredom is another man's watershed. If 1986 should turn out to be the highwater mark of the Republicans nationally, or of the Democrats locally, this much abused election will be scrutinized by posterity for every nuance.

I'm inclined to go with the crowd that says this election didn't mean much. Nevertheless, no election means nothing. 1986 did bring a few developments that deserve to be recorded...

First, as has been duly recorded by greater eminences than me, 1986 was the year of the "negative spot." That is the 30-second television commerical in which the same gravelly male voice that normally peddles footwear and fertilizer disparages the heart, soul, brain, and ethics of this or that overfinanced candidate's opponent.

This trend transpired nationally in 1986, but nowhere in America was it more blatantly practiced than in Massachusetts by our own (or is it New Hampshire's own?) Joyce Hampers. Her campaign for state treasurer against Robert Crane was, except for a few t.v. spots at the beginning of the campaign, totally negative. She had nothing positive to say about herself or her aspirations for public office. Moreover, in disparaging Crane she went overboard—a hard thing to do in the case of the less than exemplary Crane. Hampers' advertisements suggested that Crane was responsible for bribery—an allegation she did not substantiate. Morally therefore, her performance was reprehensible.

The significance of the election was that the electorate took a look at her, then spat her out. Crane's overwhelming victory was partly a reward for the good cheer with which he took Hampers' abuse, but mainly it was a repudiation of Hampers in particular and of the negative spot in general.

That is heartening, for negative campaigning has been overdone to the point of calls for undesirable legislative action to somehow put limits on the bad things one sleaze in a $400 suit can say about another. Far better, I think, that our people put an end to the negative spot with their electoral repudiation of its practicioners. That is what they did in the case of Hampers. It is significant, and it is good. It's a pity Crane got away this time, but if his resignation (which I expect before 1990) isn't forthcoming, the Republicans will have at him again.

The Hampers-Crane brouhaha bespeaks another 1986 trend, one that is also significant, but isn't good. That is the inability of the press to effectively focus on more than one race at a time. In the Primary it was the Joe Kennedy versus All Otherfellows in the eighth Congressional district. In the Final Election it was Hampers versus Crane.

Television, which gave us the 30-second spot, is what also gives us the news condensed to 22-second segments in which the producer must decide whether it is more important to tell us that George Bachrach broke wind or that Sheila Kennedy wore blue.

That's about all television can do as it is presently constituted in America. Moreover, since television makes news in the news it reports, print journalism, which is capable of doing much more, tends to follow television's lead: we, too, tend to focus on one race at a time.

This is a pity, for there were far more significant races this year than either Kennedy-Others fight or the Hampers-Crane one. What probably should have been the most publicized race was the campaign for attorney general, one in which both candidates (Harrington and Shannon) have ability that Hampers, Crane and Kennedy can't hold a candle to. Moreover, attorney general is a far more influential position than either state treasurer or 1/11 of the Massachusetts Congressional delegation.

The significance here is plain and simple: the people are not being informed by their press. By focusing only on what is in some way titillating (a personal attack or the rise of a new member of the Massachusetts Royal Family) the press keeps our people ignorant on the issues and candidates affecting the very future of the state and nation.

One example of the ignorance with which we enter the voting booth will illustrate. The campaign to repudiate the state's seat belt law succeeded with ease. Yet not until after the election was it duly noted that the repeal of the seatbelt law would cause our automobile insurance rates to rise. I wasn't aware of it myself—and I spend my life following political issues. Thus, for your ignorance and mine we have picked our own pockets! But the real failure, and the real trend, is a press that isn't doing its job.

Finally, a brief comment on the national significance of the election. In the short run I believe the Democrats, by dint of their retaking the U.S. Senate, were the winners. Ideology aside, their victory was heartening in that their incumbent Republican opposition was so corpulently funded. I would like to think that the American people saw the Republicans in control of the White House, the Senate and most of the political money, and concluded that 'twas time for the pendulum to swing in the other direction.

On the other hand, I believe that in the longer run the Republican position was strengthened in 1986. The shift to the Democrats was moderate by historic standards of the "six-year-inch." (That's the usual trend against a president's party in the midterm election of his second term.) Moreover, the Republicans took more governorships in 1986, and from these governors will come future Senators and Presidential candidates. All in all, I would guess that the Republicans are in a good position to retain the Presidency in 1988.

Free statewide winter calendars available

A free 1986-1987 Spirit of Massachusetts Winter Calendar of Events is now available from the Massachusetts Division of Tourism.

The December through March calendar presents more than 250 fairs, festivals and celebrations in the cities, countryside and seashore of Massachusetts: from Christmas shopper's strolls on Cape Cod and the islands, to First Night celebrations in Boston, Springfield and Worcester, to winter festivals in the Berkshires and Pioneer Valley. Events include holiday craft fairs, Christmas parades, holiday lighting ceremonies, tours of historic homes decorated for the season, and holiday concerts, ballets and theatre.

A free Spirit Calendar is available at state tourist information centers, by calling toll-free in Massachusetts: 1-800-632-8038; other northeast states, 1-800-343-9072; or by writing: Massachusetts Division of Tourism, 100 Cambridge St., 13th Fl., Boston, MA 02202.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Time to begin planning for holiday dinners

To most of us, Thanksgiving represents the most delicious of all holidays. Our celebration of the harvest begins at summer's end when cranberries, squash and apples are stored away for the upcoming festivities. Although two weeks away, it's none too soon to start planning and baking for Thanksgiving. A nice way to start the day would be with a slice of Brenda Walker's

CRANBERRY RING

2 c. cranberries, rinsed and picked over
1 c. sugar
1/2 tsp. grated nutmeg
1/2 stick unsalted butter, softened
1 large egg, beaten
2 c. self-rising flour sifted with
1/2 tsp. salt
1 c. milk

Chop together coarsely the berries, sugar and nutmeg. Cook in a saucepan over low heat, stirring, for 5 min., or until berries give off some juice. Cool while creaming together in a bowl the butter and 1/4 c. sugar. When mixture is light and fluffy, add the egg. Add flour mixture alternately with milk, stirring until mixture is just combined. Stir in the cranberry mixture and spoon batter into a well-buttered 2-quart bundt pan. Bake in 375 oven for 20 min., reduce the heat to 325 and bake for 10 to 20 min. more, or until a cake tester comes out clean. Cool in pan on a rack for 10 min., turn it out onto the rack and cool completely. May be frozen until needed.

When I went to the market to decide on the treats to be doled out for Halloween, hanging outside in the yellow October afternoon was a jolly Santa decoration. Panic set in for I had just recovered from the shock of having received our first Christmas mail-order catalogue containing dire warning of things to come if I ignored their "last-minute gift ideas." And here I was wondering what to give the trick-or-treaters expected that evening! Time was when we never gave Christmas a fleeting thought until Thanksgiving was over and done with, but shopping by mail has apparently become a way of life, expecially for those working women who never have to leave home to shop, fight crowds or waste precious time standing in line to be waited on. Another bonus is that some of these catalogues contain recipes for the holidays such as these

FRUIT CAKE MINIATURES

6 T. butter
1 c. firmly packed brown sugar
2 eggs
1/4 c. dairy sour cream
1 c. all-purpose flour
1/2 tsp. ea. salt and cloves
1/4 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/8 tsp. ea. allspice and nutmeg
1 c. ea. halved candied cherries, golden raisins, candied fruit and chopped nuts

Cream butter, adding sugar. Beat until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs one at a time. Add sour cream. Combine flour, salt, baking soda and spices. Add to creamed mixture. Reserve 24 cherry halves to decorate top of cake. Stir in remaining cherries, raisins, fruit and nuts. Fill buttered 2" diameter muffin cups 3/4 full. Decorate with cherry half on each. Bake 25 to 30 min. at 350. Remove and cool completely on wire racks. Yield: 2 doz.

Now that cauliflower is just about as low in price as it gets, we don't have to wait until the holidays to make Anita Wyn's

BROILED CAULIFLOWER

Break cauliflower into florets and steam 'til just tender. Arrange on broiler pan and brush generously with melted butter. Top with a thick layer of grated parmesan cheese and generous dusting of paprika. Broil until the cheese bubbles and begins to brown. Serve right away.

And if you're asked to bring a vegetable for the holiday feast, why not

FRESH CARROTS WITH APRICOTS

1 lb. fresh carrots, shredded
6 dried apricots sliced into fine strips
2 T. ea. water & butter
1 T. ea. sugar and wine vinegar

Heat butter and water in large skillet. Add carrots and apricots. Saute 2 to 3 min. Sprinkle with sugar. Add vinegar. Stir and cook rapidly until nicely glazed for 1 min. and serve.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Never trust a smiling cat

"Thank heaven," I told the Dragon, "we have the cat situation under control.

"It's one thing when the children start having pets. It's quite another when the pets start having children.

The Dragon looked curious. "I've always wondered—why didn't you have Athena spayed when we got her?"

I signed. "Because I wanted to teach our son responsibilty. I agreed to let him have a cat only on the condition that he take care of it himself and that he arrange for the spaying.

"That was six years ago. He never did have her spayed, and she had lots of litters. The kittens we couldn't give away we kept, and they had kittens. But I still insisted that it was his responsibility, only he had to have four cats spayed instead of one. He never did that, either. So finally I had them all altered."

"Boy," Breida interjected, "you really taught him, didn't you?"

I shrugged, "I've learned. And now we're down to two cats. And Athena spends most of her time at Lane's. And Roxanne isn't any trouble, really. And they're both spayed. And now the kids are into collecting cars instead of cats. It's a glorious moment. Finally."

The Dragon looked slightly uncomfortable. "Right. Glorious." He looked toward the living room then looked away quickly.

With dawning unease I looked toward the living room. A tiny kitten, white except for a gray smear on her forehead, sat serenely in the center of the carpet. She licked her paw with a delicate pink tongue, then wrapped her tail neatly around her body and looked up at us. The sound of purring—disproportionately loud, considering her size—permeated the house.

"What, " I asked rhetorically, "is that?"

"It's a cat," Skip replied helpfully.

"Don't get upset," the Dragon said quickly. "It's just visiting. Skip asked if it could stay here for two days. Then it's going to live with Leslie."

"It's just going to stay for two days," I repeated happily. "How long has it been here?"

The Dragon looked very uncomfortable. "About a week," he muttered.

I sat down and tried to ignore the soft body that was rubbing against my ankles. "Would someone please tell me why, if it was going to go and live with Leslie in two days, this animal has been here for a week."

"Leslie's mother said she can't have it," Skip admitted, shooting an apologetic look at his father.

He thrust the kitten in my face, and I pushed his hand away.

"I don't want to look at that animal," I told him. "Take it away. Far away."

Clearly no dummy, the kitten had figured out the lay of the land. She rubbed her head against my hand and purred louder.

"Look, Ma," Skip said. "She's smiling at you."

I pushed him away again. "I've learned never to trust a smiling cat," I told him. "Furthermore, you're planning on going into the Army. Do you think it would be fair to leave me with a kitten barely old enough to use a litter box? She has been using a litter box, hasn't she?"

Skip smiled ingratiatingly. "Of course she has. And see how much she loves you already. She wants to sit in your lap."

"Well, I don't want her there," I said crossly. "Take that Ash Wednesday cat out of here."

Skip and Breida exchanged triumphant glances. "She's in!" Skip whispered. "Ma called her Ash Wednesday. Once she names an animal we're home free."

Well, maybe. But this is my chance to teach Skip responsiblity. He's going to get that cat spayed. I really mean it.

Secretary Johnston to head Great American Smokeout

The American Cancer Society has announced that Philip W. Johnston, Secretary of Human Services for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, will serve as State Chairman of the Society's tenth Great American Smokeout.

The Smokeout, a day when millions of smokers nationwide attempt to give up cigarettes for 24 hours while receiving support from family, friends, and co-workers, will be observed on Thurs. November 20. To celebrate the Smokeout's tenth anniversary, the American Cancer Society is sponsoring special community events and giving out buttons to recognize the millions of people who stopped smoking for good during the past decade.

According to David S. Rosenthal, M.D., President of the American Cancer Society's Massachusetts Division, Secretary Philip Johnston ended his own 20-year cigarette habit on the Great American Smokeout in 1981.

"Although the Smokeout is known as a 'fun' event, its very serious purpose is to convince smokers that quitting is the best thing they can do for themselves and their loved ones," Dr. Rosenthal said. "Secretary Johnston took advantage of the increased public awareness surrounding the Smokeout to stop smoking for good."

Secretary Johnston, a former four-term State Representative from Marshfield, decided that his two-packs-a-day cigarette habit was incompatible with his appointment in 1981 by Michael Dukakis to the position of health advisor for the Dukakis campaign.

"I am convinced that smoking will kill you," Secretary Johnston said. "It's not easy to give up cigarettes—they're powerfully addictive—but it can be done with the support of friends and relatives. The Smokeout did the trick for me five years ago, and I know now that I will never go back to the habit."

Secretary Johnston, who had tried unsuccessfully to quit smoking several times before he finally succeeded, said the Great American Smokeout gave him the opportunity to plan his quitting strategy.

"I was aware that other people had quit successfully during Great American Smokeouts," he said. "I knew that the third Thrusday of November, 1981, was going to be the day I would quit. I decided to be nice to myself for the first month I was off cigarettes, to relax and have fun and reward myself for quitting. I gained some weight at first, but I dealt with that as a separate issue. I found that I had more energy to exercise and eventually lose that weight and more."

Secretary Johnston noted that the benefits of quitting will be highlighted in this tenth anniversary year of the Great American Smokeout.

"Through the American Cancer Society's 'Star Quest' campaign, hundreds of Massachusetts 'stars'–people who have quit smoking during the last ten years—have been located," he said. "We're honoring these quitter-winners with special 'I'm A Star—I've Quit Smoking' buttons, and tips to help them adopt a smoker this year. As far as we're concerned, anyone who has managed to quit smoking is a star."

As part of the tenth anniversary celebration, Secretary Johnston announced that four Massachusetts ex-smokers were selected as winners of the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout Star Quest photo contest. Lionel Correa of New Bedford, Nova B. Govoni of Fairhaven, Sheila Sandler of Brockton, and Sue Simmons of Rockland were chosen from more than 60 entries by a panel of judges. Each winner quit smoking since the first Great American Smokeout in 1977, and sent in a photo showing how they could "do something better" since they stopped smoking. The winners will appear in an upcoming American Cancer Society television spot.

The American Cancer Society's 1985 Great American Smokeout set an all-time record for participation in the day-long event. More than 23 million of American's 54 million smokers tried to kick the habit for the day. According to a Gallup survey conducted after last year's Smokeout, approximately seven million participants actually made it through the day without smoking, and 3.7 million were still not smoking a week after the Smokeout.

To receive a free "I'm a Star" button, ex-smokers may send their request to their local American Cancer Society office. Smokeout materials for hospitals, companies, and schools are also available free of charge. For more information, contact the Society's headquarters toll-free at 1-800-952-7664.

We are serious cash buyers of gold, silver & platinum; both old & new diamonds, estate & antique jewelry, sterling flatware, gold filled items, industrial precious metals, dental gold, old & rare coins, tokens & medals, postcards & collectables. Our evaluation & gold & silver assay tests are free & at no obligation while you wait. We will meet or beat any legitimate offer to buy published locally, nationally, or internationally. Many local dealers claim to be the "highest buyers" so shop around & see us last. We may be a little further away but the few extra miles are worth the effort. We also exchange all denominations of foreign currency & coin on the spot. Banks send their customers to us for just that purpose. We have the most competitive prices on new jewelry in New England & also do expert jewelry repair & appraisals.

Ghitalla to teach Conservatory brass instrument clinic

Armando Ghitalla, former principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony, will give a master class/clinic for brass players at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham on Thursday Nov. 20 from 7 to 9 p.m.

This is a rare opportunity for students of brass instruments, particularly trumpet, to hear this noted teacher and professional artist. He will listen to several pre-selected students play, and give them his criticism and suggestions. Those attending the clinic, which will be offered free of charge, will benefit from the expertise of this dynamic teacher. SSCM sponsors this clinic with the help of Yamaha Music Products, Osmond Brass Instruments, and Rayburn Musical Instruments.

Ghitalla is in Boston for the opening of the Boston Classical Orchestra season. He will perform with the Orchestra, conducted by Harry Ellis Dickson, Nov. 19 at Faneuil Hall, Boston at 8 p.m. and again on Nov. 21. Students who attend the SSCM master class will be able to buy tickets for either the Nov. 19 or 21 Classical Orchestra concerts at a special reduced price.

Ghitalla graduated from Wesleyan College and New York University and then attended the Julliard School. He has performed with some of the world's leading orchestras. Before coming to Boston, he was principal trumpet with the New York City Opera and Ballet.

He joined the BSO in 1951, eventually becoming principal trumpet. He was a favorite concert artist in Boston and at Tanglewood and one the most respected teachers on the East Coast. James Simpson, director of the Conservatory, came to Boston as a young student for the express purpose of studying with Ghitalla at Boston University. Due to the combination of Ghitalla's teaching and Jim Simpson's natural talent, he now plays with the BSO, the Boston Pops and other prestigious musical groups.

In 1979 Ghitalla retired from the Boston Symphony to accept the position of Professor of Trumpet at the University of Michigan. The last time he visited the South Shore Conservatory was for the dedication of the new wing and Cox Recital Hall in 1981. He played a concert at that time with a group of his students, who are now professionals, including Jim Simpson.

Although the master class is free of charge, the Conservatory requires students to make a reservation; they are also asked to indicate whether they want tickets for the Friday Ghitalla concert at Faneuil Hall.

The Conservatory is located off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham and the phone number is 749-7565.

Armando Ghitalia will give a master class for brass students at the South Shore Conservatory on Thursday, Nov. 20 from 7 to 9 p.m.

No surprise — Cohasset scores big in tests

Cohasset received high marks in the state's first attempt to evaluate curriculum in the public school systems.

Students in grades 3, 7 and 11 participated last spring in the Massachusetts Educational Assessment Program. The test was administered to every public school in the state as part of Chapter 188, the education reform legislation passed last year.

Although there was some confusion by area school administrators as to when to release the test data, Cohasset's results were made public at Monday night's school committee meeting. The results were favorable, Supt. Stephen Hart explained, and indicated that Cohasset students are performing at a higher level than students throughout the state and in communities of a similar socio-economic background.

"We're pleased with these scores. They indicate we're scoring where we should be. But there's always a lot we can do to improve the curriculum on an on-going level."

Supt. Stephen Hart

The students were tested in various categories under the main topics of reading, mathematics and science. In all categories, Cohasset scored higher than the state average. And when compared to similar communities, Cohasset students again maintained a higher average than their peers.

"This was not a contest," the superintendent emphasized in his presentation Monday night. The test, he said, could be used as a valuable tool to identify areas of strength and weakness in various curriculum at certain grade levels.

"We'll look at all this data while we're studying our curriculum," he said. Adding, "We're pleased with these scores. They indicate we're scoring where we should be. I'd be concerned if we weren't at these levels. But there's always a lot we can do to improve the curriculum on an on-going level. We have a lot of information here, and it should be helpful to us.

"The real public concern may occur in other communities," he said, "where there are several schools. This test will indicate the scores of each individual school within a town. Results on a per pupil basis are not available."

Cohasset, according to the state's determination, is called a residential suburb. That is the category in which Cohasset is included, in comparison to other similar communities such as Dover, Hanover, Marshfield, Scituate, Hingham, Norwell and several others. Apparently, Supt. Hart estimated, industry

Captain John Reidy and Coach Dan Magner have a lot to be smiling about. They're on the way to a state championship. That's quite a send-off for Reidy, the only senior on the team.

Get ready for Saturday when Cohasset sets sights on crown

The flowers are in full bloom.

Cohasset captured the soccer crown of eastern Massachusetts Tuesday, with a 2-1 sudden-death overtime win against East Boston.

On Saturday, the Skippers will play the central/western Massachusetts champs for all the marbles, the Division 3 state championship.

This was supposed to be a rebuilding year for the Skippers. They have only one senior starter, Captain John Reidy. And they're under the direction of a new coach, Dan Magner.

Certainly the skill was there, with four league all-stars: Ian Smart; John Reidy; Jimmy Reidy and Todd Fitzpatrick. But there must have been something else that helped raise the Skippers to the summit.

Call it savvy, savoir-faire; call it flowers. Flower power?

"I call us the flower children because everyone is so laid-back," said John Reidy with a laugh. "It's funny because you never know what we're thinking, which is good. I think that helps us against other teams."

He explained, "Other teams get to the games and they're all screaming and yelling. We're just sitting around or passing the ball and laughing, having a good time."

"They think, 'Oh, these guys aren't ready for the game," he said; "and we go out and take it to 'em during the first five minutes of the game -They're in shock!"

If flower power is their secret, then passing is their style.

"We pass the ball very well," commented Captain Reidy. "People have commented on that. It goes back to the junior varsity program and back to the town's program.

We've been playing together on town teams and j.v. teams and we can anticipate each other's moves," he said. "It's a credit to the town itself, and everything Dan has done."

The coach chronicled his squad's drive to the top.

"We started out the season very slow," Magner said. "We're a young team, but we improved and improved during the season. The line-up I had at the beginning of the season changed around a lot."

Town's Civil War hero receives national honor

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Cohasset veterans honored a hometown hero Sunday.

Members of the George H. Mealey American Legion Post and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146 paraded to the Central Cemetery gravesite of Sgt. Levi B. Gaylord, to pay tribute.

Gaylord's grave was marked with a white marble headstone emblazoned with the image of the Congressional Medal of Honor, which he received in 1896.

David Wadsworth, of the Cohasset Historical Society recounted Gaylord's act of gallantry, which earned him the high commendation.

"In the Spring of 1985," he began, "General Ulysses S. Grant's Union Army was slowly but surely fighting its way across the state of Virginia; the end of the Civil War was but a short time away.

"Grant's objectives in Virginia," he said, "were the cities of Petersburg and Richmond. One of the preliminary battles on the road to Petersburg and Richmond was the battle of Fort Stedman.

"The fighting at Fort Stedman," he explained, "produced an act of gallantry by Sgt. Gaylord of Company A, 29th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, for which he received the Medal of Honor.

"On March 25, 1865," he added, "Gaylord along with other Massachusetts men, manned an abandonned gun and stemmed a Confederate attack, until reinforcements arrived to rout or capture the attackers."

The memorial dedication was organized by Raymond Collins of Virginia and Charles MacGillivray of Braintree, themselves both recipients of the award.

MacGillivray, a former president of the U.S. Congressional Medal of Honor Society explained, the tribute to Gaylord was part of an effort to memorialize all such specially decorated veterans.

Collins, who was unable to attend the ceremony, researched records dating back to the French-and-Indian War, he said.

Meanwhile, "I got after Congress; I told them that if Great Britain could put the Victoria Cross on their stones, I think we could put the Medal of Honor on ours."

MacGillivray said, "This man we honor today, if we don't do anything else, we should remember what he went through and what he did for this great nation of ours."

As Larry Sousa, Commander of Cohasset's American Legion placed a wreath by the marker, an honor guard fired a 21-gun salute and John Atkinson trumpeted taps from a wooded hillside.

Cohasset's week . . .

Conservation appointment

Selectmen apologized to the conservation commission for the lack of communication between the two boards, but an appointment made this month to the commission will remain.

Conservation chairman Merle Brown stated in a letter to selectmen that the appointment of Dean Harrold was made without their input. Commission members had previously discussed the need to appoint an attorney to their board.

Brown said a local attorney had attended commission meetings and expressed an interest in an appointment. He notified selectmen Monday, Nov. 3 that the attorney was willing to serve on the commission. The next day commission members read that another appointment had been made to the commission.

The chairman emphasized the need for improved communication between the two boards.

Selectman Chairman Diane Sullivan said she apologized for the board, explaining that Harrold's appointment had been discussed some time ago with the commission. Despite the mix-up, the appointment will stand, she added.

Thanks to EMT's

Edward Cochran, whose son was injured during a recent junior varsity football game, praised the work of local EMT's in assisting the CHS student.

In a letter to selectmen, Cochran stated that his son's knee was severely sprained during a Nov. 3 game. He thanked Cohasset EMT's Tom Finnigan, Tom Hernan, and Peter Trask for their work.

"Their care and concern for my son greatly impressed me. Also, the equipment and professionalism displayed certainly reflects the training and leadership of the Cohasset Fire Department," he noted in the letter.

Car dealers special permit

Two local car dealerships have applied to the zoning board of appeals for a special permit to expand their businesses.

A crowd gathered Tuesday morning to observe the state's official Drug/Alcohol Awareness Day. Cohasset residents many of whom walk from the Senior Center each week, joined in the town's fight against drug abuse. They include: (front row, l to r): Bill Ripley, Margaret Taylor, Kathy Bryanton, Betty Grassie, Ann Leonard; (second row, l to r): Jeanne Sullivan, Tilly Nardo, Pat Hanlon, Peggy Niland, Helen Murphy, Virginia Anderson, Mary Migliacio, Jane Tilden; (back row, l to r): Fred Howe, Olga Sawchuk, Jacqueline Moores, Diane Sullivan, Louise Bowker, Elaine Sestito, Jane Hamilton and Maura Ditmar.

Building Inspector and Zoning Enforcement Officer Donald Robbins notified Autohaus and Spensley Chevrolet that they have expanded their Class I license. Regarding Autohaus, Robbins said the license does not include the use of 742 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, the property next door. For the past few months, Autohaus has used the vacant Bergeson's property to store additional vehicles.

Spensley has expanded its storage area onto land adjacent to the Rte. 3A business.

Both businesses have applied to the zoning board for a special permit. Autohaus has a hearing scheduled in December, and Spensley's application will be reviewed by the board in January.

VoTech student's waiver supported

The school committee voted Monday night to support a waiver request which would allow a South Shore Vo-Tech student to participate in Cohasset sports. The student is a Cohasset resident.

Despite an argument presented by committee member Richard Conley against it, the remaining four members voted to request a waiver from the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA). Conley argued that a student who decides to attend the alternative school must abide by that choice and forfeit an opportunity to participate on his hometown athletic teams.

The request was made by an unnamed Cohasset parent who asked that the Cohasset school committee support his petition for a waiver to the MIAA. His son, a student at South Shore Vo-Tech, would like to play football for the Cohasset High School team.

Supt. Stephen Hart said he supported the request, solely because the vocational school does not have a football team. "I would not be comfortable if it was a sport that both schools offered," he explained, adding that the logistics must be worked out between the two schools.

High school principal Mary Ellen Gallagher saw both sides of the issues. If the student was suspended from Vo-Tech, would he then be unable to play for Cohasset, she questioned. But, Gallagher added, "I would have trouble taxing a student now for a situation that may or may not happen in the future."

She suggested that good communications be established between the administrators of both schools to avoid any possible problems.

As committee member Diana Kornet noted, the vocational school is an extension of the academics offered Cohasset students. "We're not saying this boy would automatically be on the team, but we should let him try out for it," she stated.

Chairman Joseph Nedrow viewed the proposal as a way to allow the Vo-Tech student to interact with his Cohasset High School peers. "It's a hard enough choice to decide to go there, but to be totally divorced from your peers is terrible," he said.

Committee member Conley offered a rebuttal to the committee members. "A student makes that choice, but now he wants to play football. Sometimes you have to make a choice and live with it," he said, adding that he objected to the way the parents' proposal was sent to the committee without complete background information. Conley noted that until questions are answered, the committee should not support the waiver request.

"A hundred and one questions should be answered before we say yes," he said, offering an example. "How is he supposed to get to Middleboro (for games)?"

Conley also objected to a Vo-Tech student bumping a CHS student for a slot on the team. "We're not an advocate of him (the Vo-Tech student), that's a separate unit. We should do everything for the students who come here, not Vo-Tech."

Nancy Sandell, president of the PSO noted that other students who are not Cohasset residents currently participate in CHS sports teams, including METCO, and AFS students.

Supt. Hart stated, "for years, we have tried to encourage students to participate at South Shore Vo Tech. The town had to vote to be a part of that region. I feel it's wrong not to give a student the opportunity to participate, provided that sport is not offered there, and that the student make a commitment that he will be here for the games.

"We shouldn't put roadblocks in his way," Hart continued. "If their administration is willing to work out an agreement, then I see this as possible."

Asst. Supt. Streeter explained that the MIAA has specific academic criteria for all students participating on school teams. The regulations must be adhered to by all players.

He added that if there are several waivers requested by MIAA regarding a similar circumstance, the state agency may decide to review its policy.

Student representative to the school committee, Michele Casolora, said she would not object to the proposal. "If that student is better than someone else (trying out for a team) then that's the way it should be. He's a resident of Cohasset and we should support him."

Cohasset state test scores . . .

is one factor which determines the Kind of Community (KOC) category in which a town is included.

Other factors which determine a town's KOC is the educational background of the students' parents, and how long they have lived in that town.

In his presentation to the school committee, Supt. Hart explained that each of the three categories of reading, mathematics and science were broken down into sub-categories. And those sub categories, he noted, were broken down further into sub-sub-categories. By defining the areas so minutely, he explained, it was easier to identify specific areas of curriculum strengths and weaknesses.

For instance, in the seventh grade science category, the average for Cohasset was 1440, far above the state average of 1300 and the KOC average of 1380. But within that category, Cohasset seventh graders scored a perfect 1600 in a sub-sub-category of ecology and environment. "I doubt there were a lot of perfect average scores in the state," he said, noting that information such as that will be helpful in reviewing the science curriculum.

The superintendent explained that the exam will be administered to the same grade levels once every two years as a measurement of the system's curriculum development.

This is not the same test, he noted, as the one taken by grades 3,6, and 9 each fall. That is the state-mandated basic skills test in which individual scores are compiled, and reviewed in order to identify remedial student needs. Those tests, Supt. Hart explained, include reading, mathematics and writing categories.

According to the superintendent, 64 third graders participated in the curriculum assessment exam, along with 74 seventh graders and 96 eleventh grade students.

He noted that the state has spent more than $2 million in devising and processing the 1986 assessment test, and previous and upcoming basic skills test.

"A lot of the information obtained through this assessment test should be quite helpful for us," he told the committee Monday night.

The state average is an "artificial" number, according to Supt. Hart. It was devised as an average by which all communities and school systems will be evaluated. The state standard was 1300 in all categories. In no grade level or category did Cohasset obtain lower grades than the state average.

In fact, Cohasset scores remained in the top 16 percent in all areas of the exam.

The only slightly reduced score for Cohasset was at the seventh grade reading level, he explained. "This ties into our SRA scores, which is the only area of relative weakness," Supt. Hart stated. "That may be because we have no formal reading program in that grade at the junior/senior high level. So now we are looking into incorporating some sort of program, about three times a week in addition to our English classes."

But the 11th grade reading levels rebound again, he noted, with an average of 1480, far above the 1300 state standard.

In his remarks to the school committee Supt. Hart noted that the curriculum leaders in each school will carefully review all sub-categories of these tests. "We'll get a very good feeling on all areas -some we should be concerned with, or others where we've had good results," he stated.

Newcomers Club holds holiday bazaar

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will hold its annual holiday bazaar on Saturday, Nov. 22, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall, in Scituate on Route 3A.

The fair is one of the chief fund raisers the club sponsors for its Scholarship Fund which enables the club to award each spring a scholarship to a deserving student of Scituate High School and Cohasset High School.

Spring 1986 recipients of the scholarship award were Thomas Edwards of Scituate High, $850 and Chad Blain of Cohasset $850.

The club also awards donations to the Scituate town library and the Cohasset High School Library.

This year once again the very popular quilt raffle will be offered. The quilt is queen size, a beautiful blue and white. This lovely art form is the creation of the club's quilters .

You may also take a chance on a truly lovely basket arrangement of Silk Vegetables.

The weekly workshops held by the club members have produced so many lovely items reflecting the various ethnic and geographically influenced backgrounds of its membership.

The floral table will feature live plants of poinsettias and mums and traditional greenery.

The white elephant table will also raffle a grand stuffed elephant. Refreshments will be available and admission is free. Hope to see you on Saturday, Nov. 22. Happy and Healthy Holidays to each and every one of you.

For information about the club, call Liz in Cohasset at 383-9865 and Christianne in Scituate at 545-2814.

Advisors limit increases to three percent

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The Advisory Committee Tuesday passed the word to Department Heads, budget increases for fiscal year 1988 should be no more than three percent.

Chairman Fred Koed explained, because of federal cutbacks, the town will no longer receive federal revenue sharing, a $95,000 stipend Cohasset had grown accustomed to over the past few years.

He added, the revenue loss coupled with projections for slow growth in Cohasset contributed to the slim increase allowance.

"The three percent was based on the money we expect to have," he said. "It's derived from the levy limit, proposition 2 1/2 and the percentage of estimated new construction, leaving a little room for some special town budget articles."

Department heads must submit their budgets for the committee's perusal by December 15.

"Any budget increase over our guidelines should be substantiated," Koed said. "We will go over them very thoroughly."

Stephen Hart, Superintendent of Schools asked if the town will have any money left over from paying off its long-term debts.

Jo-Ann Whittemore, Town Accountant explained, the town retired its principal debt of $140,000, but will not have extra spending money, because the money has been bonded for additional borrowing.

Richard Hayes, who is in charge of the Pratt Memorial Library, queried whether the Advisory Committee's three percent will take into account the five percent step increases town employees will receive, even before cost of living increases are figured in.

As a result of a survey performed by Caleb Marsh, the personnel board put town employees in a step-increase format. The committee expressed a willingness to be flexible.

Whittemore explained, the three percent maximum is the committee's "best guesstimate" for fiscal responsibility.

She added, the election year and Question 3 on the ballot have obscured the projections of state aid.

Committee member William Lean commented, the three percent budget increase falls within the revenue intake under Proposition 2 1/2.

"Over the past 12 months," he added, "the inflation rate has been about 1.8, so the three percent figure is over the inflation rate."

Aside from the revenues generated under Proposition 2 1/2, about $1 million, or 10 percent of the total budget is raised from sources such as fees, permits and taxes.

Executive Secretary Don Andrew noted such increases have experienced good growth in the past, but there won't be a giant leap this year.

Andrew added, compared to other towns in user fee revenues and the like, Cohasset is below the state average. Other towns are taking in more on user fees.

Lean responded, the property values in Cohasset outweigh those in other towns, therefore the percentage of revenues collected in property taxes is higher.

"Services are a lot better off here than in a lot of other towns," Whittemore commented.

Andrew added, "I'll be asking department heads to look and see if their services are comparable to other towns."

Various departments have tried to raise user fees, Andrew said, but only a few have been allowed.

The town's departments will have their budgets reviewed by subcommittees, before they are approved by the Advisory Committee for recommendation at Town Meeting.

Koed told the department leaders, the committee will take into account the amount of revenue each department has generated through fees.

"The committee," Whittemore said, "wants to strengthen the town's infrastructure by putting together a solid, strong five-year plan."

For now, they'll worry about FY88.

☐ Bob Donahue of Cohasset is a member of the varsity football team at Bates College, which has one of the nation's oldest traditions in the sport.

The son of Robert and Barbara Donahue of 185 Jerusalem Road, he is a senior linebacker and team captain for the Bobcats. He graduated from Cohasset High School.

☐ Jay Contis of Cohasset is a member of the varsity football team at Bates College, which has one of the nation's oldest traditions in the sport.

The son of James and Carolyn Contis of 5 Windsor Road, he is a sophmore linebacker for the Bobcats. He graduated from Cohasset High School.

☐ Harold and Ruth Goodwin had a super time last weekend, all of their family was there for a reunion. Their daughter, Ruthie, arrived from Palos Verdes Estates in California for the gala; son Brad was home with his wife Dee and his children Gabrielle, B.J., and Ben; and their son Ronnie and his wife Mary made the celebration complete. A wonderful time was had by all, and they are waiting for the next one, hope its soon.

☐ Here's your chance, CHS alumnae: all of you gals that were cheerleaders when you were in your "prime" can be one again. The cheerleading squad is issuing an invitation (or is it a challenge?) for all of you to cheer on Thanksgiving Day, so here's your chance to lead our team to victory. We can think of a few prominent ladies that would fit the bill, and hope to see them on the field . . . be at the High School at 9:00 on Thanksgiving morning and meet in the gym behind the school, then go out and do your thing . . . be sure to bring your woolies, remember how cold you were on Thanksgiving? And, plan dinner way ahead, you might be a little sore after the game!

☐ It's with a lot of sadness that we must report the death of Walter Sweeney's brother, John. John and his family lived in Manchester, but there aren't many from Cohasset that don't remember him with warmth and love. That wonderful smile that was always present will surely be missed.

☐ Last Saturday sure had to be a difficult one for Coach Pisano! CHS played Hanover, the team that his son Matt is the quarterback and starting defenseman for! Just imagine trying to watch your team playing against your son! Just one more aspect in the life of a coach . . .

☐ The weekend that everyone has waited for is finally here, Alice in Wonderland will be underway . . . just take a look at all of the Cohasset contingency that will appear - Denise Ripley, Jeanne Armin, Bob Julian, Don Massa, Donna Williams, Dawn Faith Massa Williams, Tamsyn Elliot and David Wadsworth are the adults listed. Doug Moe, Veronica DeVoss, Karen Marx, Nora McCarthy, Jennifer O'Leary, Christine Rooney, Michelle Massa, Suzanne De Cruz, Caroline deLima, Erin O'Leary, Marnie DeMichele, Karen Kristenson, Emily Henderson, Elizabeth Devany, Grace Devany, Jessica Sammon, Jill DuMoulin, Kate deLima and Celeste Preble represent the children in the cast. Out of that length list, everyone must know someone, why not go and see your favorite star hard at work. It promises to be a wonderful show, don't miss it.

☐ As this goes to press, the Skippers are still winning the Soccer game at a heart-stopping rate. Saturday's win came after five overtimes and penalty shots by Todd Fitzpatrick, Jason Marsac and David Shultz. Jim Gallagher on defense left everyone still talking . . . goalie Joel Reidy put forth an outstanding effort (he was taken to the hospital at game's end with what were thought to be broken ribs, luckily the x-rays proved negative). Jim and John Reidy were outstanding, and both sides talked about the plays by Ian Smart. Steve Meyers, Kostas Roukanasis, John Linsley, Dan Pompeo, Ned Chase all played their hearts out to contribute to the win! As you can see, it was truly a team effort and Coach Dan Magner sure is a happy man! With efforts like that, the team is sure to go all the way, and we sure do wish them luck in their efforts!

☐ This is a busy time for all, but also a most newsy one, be sure to let me know lots about your news.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Norma Telesco
Home Center Realty

PREPARING YOUR HOME TO SELL

Elbow grease is worth many times its weight in gold when it's put into a home that is listed for sale. Start with the outside, then go through the entire house a room at a time looking for peeling paint, clutter and grime. Then get out your paint brush and scrub brush.

Buyers react emotionally to houses, and it's important for you to set the stage for them to fall in love with your home. If you have strong decorating tastes, they may find it hard to imagine their furniture in your rooms. It's a good idea to repaint boldly-colored rooms or replace old wallpaper with something more neutral. Remember that cracked plaster and stained ceilings can make buyers wary of your roof or the structural condition of the house, even though the damage may be purely cosmetic. Cleanliness is important, too. That buyer's heart may skip a beat if dirty laundry, yesterday's dishes, bathtub rings and dust balls get in the way. Before you allow agents to show your house, make it shine, inside and out.

One of Home Center Realty's professional Realtors would be glad to arrange a pre-listing inspection of your property and give you some fresh ideas about ways to make your house look its best. Just call us at 749-8833, or stop by our office at 57 Water St., Hingham

Good grades

The state's curriculum assessment test scores were released to the public last week. Some school systems, those with the least to hide and with the most to boast, made the results public soon after they were notified by the state.

Cohasset was one of the first communities in this area to make the results known to the public. Supt. Stephen Hart, eager to first share the results with members of the school committee, waited until the members had reviewed them in preparation for Monday night's committee meeting.

Cohasset had little to hide, he noted, but it was a matter of allowing the committee members to review them before they read about it in the local newspapers.

We can imagine some people were interested in the results, and many were not. Residents here have come to expect excellency in our schools. We pay for that privilege.

We are not stingy in our payment to local education. And rightly so, we expect a return for our investment.

This latest study, mandated through the state education reform act of last year, reinforces that we are not being cheated. And more importantly, neither are our children.

Cohasset compares highly with other communities of similar socio-economic backgrounds. That means, compared to towns of similar characteristics, regarding the population, its educational background, and the economic base, Cohasset received high grades in education.

But, Supt. Hart emphasized, this test is not merely a competition between communities. It is a valuable tool in which weaknesses and needs can be more specifically outlined within a town's education system. So while Cohasset may have a basically sound system, there are certainly areas for improvement. This is where the state assessment testing will be helpful.

Why do the seventh grade reading scores dip after the third grade scores, and then rise again in the 11th grade? Supt. Hart said this may point out the need to build a stronger reading program in that grade, something that has been passed over in both curriculum and budget.

Parents are likely confused with this particular state test, because there are a variety of examinations each year with a myriad of numbers and results. This specific test was required by the state after passage of Chapter 188, the education reform act. It was designed to compare every school system in the state, with the aim of equalizing systems —reinforcing weaker ones to the level of higher-rated systems.

This may be just one more test to participating students, and just one more set of complicated numbers to many parents.

But the bottom line is, Cohasset remains a strong school system. Now we have the numbers to back up that statement.

Members of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce unravel the decorations that will surround the Common and downtown area for the Nov. 30th White Christmas in Cohasset. Festivities will take place throughout the day, as Santa travels from Cushing Plaza to the Common on this fire engine. Merchants will be open while children's activities are held at the Common.

Constitution celebration planned

Letters

To the Editor:

Cohasset's Constitutional Bicentennial Committee, consisting of citizens appointed by the town's Board of Selectmen, is the local organization dedicated to the observance, in Cohasset, of the forthcoming nationwide celebration of the 200th year of the United States Constitution. Committee members are David Wadsworth, Chairman; David Chittim, Secretary; Barbara Dillon, Mary Jane McArthur, Frank Smith, Agnes McCann and Maxwell Pounder.

The local Committee will be seeking to encourage Cohasset municipal and community participation in the national Bicentennial Year marking the Philadelphia Convention of 1787 which drafted and signed the American Constitution.

In order to become a fully accredited "Bicentennial Community", with the right to use officially the various Bicentennial symbols and the national logo design, Cohasset's application for participation must be accepted by both the Massachusetts State Bicentennial Committee and the National Commission. The local Committee has received notification from the state committee of the town's acceptance at the state level, and Cohasset's application has been sent to the National Commission for final acceptance.

The Cohasset Constitutional Bicentennial Committee will remain active throughout the coming nationwide observance of the birth of our nation's remarkable founding document, and we sincerely hope that all citizens will join us in noting this most significant event.

David H. Wadsworth
Committee Chairman

Murray thanks voters

To the Editor:

The people of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull have always been most kind to my candidacy over the last five elections.

The voters of the 3rd Plymouth District have always been active, involved and very well informed on state issues.

The support which these voters have been given to me, even unopposed, has always been very humbling and greatly appreciated by me.

Thank you to the voters in my district.

Sincerely,
Mary Jeanette Murray

Resident charges board violated law

To the Editor:

In response to your excellent editorial featured in the November 13, 1986 Cohasset Mariner "It's a Tie," I would like to advise your readers of two extremely important facts.

You are objective, and rightly so, in editorializing the events of appointing a patrolman to fill the vacancy in the Cohasset Police Department.

However, I think your readers should be aware that on Monday, November 3, 1986 at approximately 7:25 p.m., I entered the second floor outer office (formerly the meeting place of the Board of Selectmen — presently the Executive Secretary's office) at the Cohasset Town Hall.

I heard the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen discussing and actively seeking support for the fourth candidate of the Civil Service list. The chairman mentioned him by name and noted his address. Statements were made by the Chairman regarding the applicant's recent promotion in the Marine Reserves and "that tells you something about him and the kind of person we want." She describes him as "exemplary" and commented further "This is the kind of person we want."

Someone present in the room alerted the Chairman that other people were in the doorway. The Chairman then went to her desk shuffling the papers in her hands with other papers and started to put the material on her desk in order. She apologized for being disorganized saying that she was usually more organized than this, then proceeded to call the meeting to order.

Present in the room with the Chairman prior to the official calling of the meeting to order were: Selectmen: Clifford Mitman, James Gallagher and Rocco Laugelle; Police Chief Joseph Kealey and Executive Secretary Donald Andrews.

According to Chapter 39 - Sections 23A, 23B and 23C of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts General Laws, there appears to be a violation of the Open Meeting Law, and such a complaint is being field by me with the District Attorney of Norfolk County, who is the enforcer of the provisions of this section.

Furthermore, there is a very serious violation of Rule 9 of the Civil Service Personnel Rules, which, in essence, state that an appointment must be made from one of the top three (highest scoring) names on the list, and the fourth name cannot be considered, discussed or interviewed until the first three candidates have been notified in writing, which as of this date, has not been done.

Because of the seriousness of the above violations, and the importance of serving in the best interest of all the residents in the Town of Cohasset, I respectfully request that Diane C. Sullivan resign as Chairperson and Member of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen. . . .immediately.!!!

South Shore VoTech budget presented

The South Shore Regional School Committee heard budget presentations from several departments at the South Shore Vocational Technical High School last week.

Staff representatives from several departments presented the estimated supply cost needed to achieve 'state of the art' training for next year's students.

Ed Smith, representing the auto body division, made his bid for new diagnostic equipment saying it would cost approximately $34,000.

"We drastically need to upgrade and replace most of our shop equipment." Smith appealed. "Our trade is changing very fast, to the point where we are no longer called auto repairmen but collision technicians. We've got to move out of the dark ages."

The electrical department, represented by Bill Laidler, requested $16,000 for equipment for next year.

"I realize that our department spends more money on supplies than anyone else, but as you all know, nothing ever goes to waste.

"We need the supplies to show these kids the right way to do everything, down to splicing a wire," said Laidler. "We don't want them to make a mistake on the job and maybe cause a fire."

George Hoyt, from the graphic arts department, asked for funds to purchase a new photo typesetter.

Only Elmer Gorham, from the carpentry department was content with his budget as it is. When half-jokingly asked by the committee if he did not want a new 'state of the art' air hammer, Gorham quipped, "I'm happy if they can use a regular hammer and saw by the time they get out of here."

Since these were the preliminary budget hearings, no final decisions were made Wednesday night. The hearings will continue at the next regularly scheduled school committee meeting, Nov. 26.

In other business, sub-committee member Paul Babcock updated the school board on the capital improvement project pertaining to the front of the school. Grading, seeding, paving, painting of lines for the walk and parking in front of the building has been completed by South Shore Paving Company. Installation of the flagpole, base and lights has also been completed.

The committee voted to re-instate a health and safety co-ordinator at the school. The co-ordinator would be in charge of developing an overall safety program for the school. John J. Doyle, of Rockland, was the only member opposed to reinstating the program.

Two trustees elected at Derby Academy

Two new members have been elected to Derby Academy, effective immediately.

Junemarie Verrochi holds a B.S. from Bridgewater State College, a Masters in Counseling/ Psychology from Boston University, and a Certificate in Advanced Graduate Studies from Northeastern University.

A former teacher in Hingham public schools, she is currently a member of the Board of Directors of The Coastal Community Counseling Center.

A graduate of Princeton University, William W. Scott is Senior Vice President and Director of Marketing for Massachusetts Financial Services.

In addition, he is a member of the school's Long Range Planning Committee, and has been a parent representative on the Headmaster Search Committee formed last spring.

School news

Deer Hill

November will be seeing something new at Deer Hill! A group of ambitious young entrepeneurs (there's a word to look up!) are planning to open a school store.

They have been planning this venture since last May. These youngsters are all part of the sixth grade Talent Pool. They have formed a board of directors and are in the process of electing officers. They became interested in this project when Mrs. Adams, an entrepeneur, came to visit their class. She got them curious about starting a business. Sparks began to fly as they built on their idea of a school store.

They interviewed Mr. Williams who operates a school store in the Hatherly School in Scituate. He told them about the "hottest" items and the"not-so-hot" items. For instance, "glue sticks" really didn't sell. Finding credit and a vendor were the next problems. The PSO loaned them capital with all the professionalism of a bank. The board evaluated each vendor and chose the one with the qualities they were looking for.

Two experienced businessmen, John Thompson and Thomas Fiore, came to the Talent Pool to share practical advice. A real helping hand came from Frank Deakin. He led the kids in role playing. Mr. Deakin took the role of the mall owner, and the Talent pool was trying to open a business in his mall. "It really gives us a sense of the whole thing," said Katie O'Sullivan, board member. Thanks a lot, gentlemen, but especially you, Mr. Deakin!

The Talent Pool is now almost ready to go. They have named their store "Deals on Wheels." They have sent their order form to their vendor, and are "crossing their fingers."

The grand opening of "Deals on Wheels" will be Wednesday, November 15.

by Kate deLima

Election of officers

Nov. 6, a group of ambitious sixth grade entrepreneurs elected officers to their Board of Directors. The Board has been working hard to open a school store, "Deals on Wheels."

Each member of the sixth grade Talent Pool entered the voting booth to cast their ballots. Waiting for the official tally was a nerve-wracking experience for all the candidates. A tie for president between Katie O'Sullivan and Nathan Fiore heightened the tension.

The board decided they needed to hear more from the candidates. "How would you handle the problem of theft? Do you have enough time to devote after school?" asked John Maynard. After the question and answer period, a run off was held.

The officers elected are: Nathan Fiore, president; Marc Mercurio, vice president; Kate de Lima, secretary; and Matt Gramada, treasurer.

Congratulations to all!

Art Club update

The Art Club visited the Brockton Art Museum Nov. 12. On exhibit were contemporary crafts as well as photographs and Greek Sculptures. It was a fun educational experience.

American studies lecture

Professor Michael B. Chesson, a member of the History Department at the Harbor Campus of the University of Massachusetts - Boston, will be a guest lecturer at Cohasset High School Wednesday morning Dec. 3. Speaking on the topic of the Confederate Raid on Saint Albans, Vermont in Oct. of 1864, he will appear before Mr. Edward F. Sheehan's advanced section in American Studies.

A member of the University of Massachusetts faculty speakers program, Professor Chesson visits eastern Massachusetts secondary schools to lecture on his area of expertise.

Real estate talk

Denis Lilla, Director of Education for the Jack Conway Corp. recently spoke to the Business Management class at the high school. His topics included: property management, personnel, and a discussion of running a real estate business.

He discussed various forms of business organization-sole proprietorship, partnership and corporations.

'Godspell' returns to CHS Dec. 5, 6

The second show of the Cohasset High School Drama Workshop's '86-87 season will be a return engagement of the group's most successful show —" Godspell".

First performed 10 years ago, the timeless quality of the story and music, and fresh spontaneity of each cast, has made "Godspell" a sell-out. Performances will begin at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 5 and Saturday, Dec. 6 at Cohasset High School.

Students appearing in "Godspell" being a variety of experience to the show, including past performaces in prior productions. Returning to CHS from the '76 show is Stewart Replogle, and Michelle Meagher who while in eighth grade appeared in an earlier production, will be back on stage.

Karin Anglin has appeared in "Flowers for Algernon", "Take Her, She's Mine", "Voices from the High School", and last year's award-winning "Candid". Also from the cast of "Take Her" is Cindy Bell. Returning from "Algernon" is Liz Buckley. A veteran of two state final shows ("Candid" and "Voices") as well as "Algernon", "Snoopy", and "Take Her" is Jenna Emmons. Peter Kasperowicz performed in "Algernon" and "Take Her", as did Laura Kuhn, who also appeared in "Voices" and in "Snoopy".

Making her debut with the Drama Workshop is Holly Ludlow. Leaving the football field behind for the stage is Philip Mahoney, who previously performed in "Voices", "Take Her", and "Algernon". Joe Mazza appears in his second show after making his debut in "Take Her". New to Cohasset as well as to the Drama Workshop is Samantha Platt, who debuted in "Take Her". An all-star field hockey goalie, Lisa Shumaker will perform next on stage, and Katie Tolini, who appeared in "Flowers", completes the cast.

Tickets are on sale both at the school and via mail order. To order by mail send a note indicating date of performance, a check, and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Cohasset Drama Workshop, Cohasset High School, 143 Pond Street, Cohasset, MA. 02025. Tickets are $4 in advance and $5 at the door.

GOURMET BOX DINNERS

The Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, which supports all fine and performing arts at CHS, will provide Gourmet Box Dinners (prepared by "Something Nice" of Hingham) before each "Godspell" performance, from 6:30-7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Cafe Library Gourment Grille at CHS. The price is a mere $6 per box, including beverage.

Box dinners must be reserved in advance (by December 1) by sending a check to the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, 48 Sohier St., Cohasset, MA 02025 (please indicate the night of the performance you are attending), or you may call 383-0572 or 383-6772.

PATRONS

The Arts Boosters are seeking patrons for the "Godspell" program and in support of their work. Donations received are used towards study awards, field trips, the CHS Literary Arts Magazine, Arts Recognition Night and the promotion of all musical, fine and literary arts, and the dramatic activities at CHS. Donations must be received by Dec. 1 in order to be listed in the "Godspell" program. Patrons who contribute $50 or more will be entitled to two box dinners at no extra charge. Send check to The Cohasset Arts Boosters, 48 Sohier St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Alice in Wonderland

Don't miss Alice In Wonderland in Cohasset this weekend! Ellen Kelly, director, is well-known to Hingham as the popular and redoutable drama coach at the South Shore Conservatory and there are, besides, some of Hingham's biggest theatrical guns in the cast.

Alice Duffy, one of South Shore's most favorite performers is hilarious as the baby/pig wielding Duchess.

Judy Holmes, is the multi-talented founder of Hingham's Elizabethan Companie, is marvelously regal as the White Queen.

Michelle Leaman, Little Miss Massachusetts, is delightful as Little Alice.

And, last but not least, Carter Hill, comic actor and inveterate scene stealer will bring down the house as the Dormouse. As a fellow actor once said of Carter: "No one should ever get on the stage with a dog, a child, or Carter Hiii . . . "

If these Hingham greats aren't enough to lure you, the set alone, designed by Sheldon Ripley (South Shore Art Center's former president) is worth the price of admission.

DATES AND TIME: November 21, 8 p.m.; November 22 at 8 p.m.; November 23 at 2 p.m.

TICKET PRICE: $4.

TICKETS MAY BE PURCHASED AT: Hingham Square Bookstore, Hingham Public Library, South Shore Conservatory, or at the door.

Holiday fair Nov. 22

The Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club will hold its annual holiday bazaar on Saturday, Nov. 22, at the V.F.W. Hall, Route 3A in Scituate.

Grand prize once again will be a beautiful blue and white handmade quilt.

Live poinsettia plants will be on sale along with tree trimmings, Thanksgiving and seasonal holiday items. Admission is free.

The holiday boutique is one of the club's chief fundraisers for its scholarship fund. Join us for your adventure in shopping and browsing, and you may be the lucky person who will take home a beautiful quilt.

The monthly meeting of the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will be held on Monday, Nov. 17, at 9:30 at the Unitarian Church Parish House, 23 North Main St., Cohasset.

The month's guest speaker, Kathleen Laidlaw, who will be speaking on the history of Scituate, Mrs. Laidlaw is the president of the Scituate Historical Society.

If you are a new resident of the Scituate or Cohasset area, you are welcome to join the monthly meeting and meet other newcomers to your area.

For information on the club, call Liz in Cohasset at 383-9865 or Christiane at 545-2814 in Scituate.

Ridge Hill School donation

The Ridge School of Norwell recently received a generous donation, used to purchase equipment for the outdoor play area. Because the school is a tax-exempt, non-profit corporation, donations are tax deductible.

In celebrating Halloween this year, the children, with the assistance of teachers and parents, made their own costumes! In keeping with the school's philosophy of child-centered programming, the school worked with families to de-commercialize the holiday.

The Ridge Hill School offers part-time and full-time programs for children aged 2 to 5, as well as an after school program for elementary aged children. The school has a program for financial assistance for income-eligible families. For further information, call 871-4440.

Montessori holiday auction

The 12th annual Scituate Montessori holiday auction will take place Saturday, Nov. 22, at 7:30 p.m., at the Hanover Elks Lodge, Route 53, Hanover, just north of Route 139.

Local favorite Joan Caddigan will again take up the auctioneer's gavel to keep the bids and the items moving briskly.

The big story this year is the range and scope of the items to be auctioned. Big items and small will be placed on the block, some of them very unusual. In addition to antiques, jewelry and furniture, Caddigan will be taking bids on sailboat charters, Celtics tickets, Caribbean vacation packages, ski weekends, a 1986 Yamaha motor scooter, a VCR video camera, rugs, quilts, computer software and many other unique offerings.

Items may be previewed from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. All purchases at the auction are considered tax-deductible and are sold without an added buyers premium.

Proceeds from the auction will be used by the Scituate Montessori School for cultural enrichment programs, new computers, playground equipment and the expansion of the existing gym.

The Montessori Community School of Scituate is a tax-exempt organization providing an educational experience for children age 18 months through grade 3. The school serves families from many towns in the surrounding area, including Scituate, Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield, Norwell, Hanover, Weymouth, Cohasset, Hull, Pembroke and Kingston.

For further information and advance tickets, call 545-5544. The holiday auction is sponsored by the Parent Advisory Board of the Montessori Community School of Scituate.

Thanksgiving Eve service

A Thanksgiving Eve Service will be held Wednesday, November 26 at 8 p.m., for all of the Cohasset community at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Avenue.

Participating churches in addition to St. Stephen's are the Second Congregational, the Panagia Greek Orthodox, St. Anthony's, First Parish and the Vedanta Centre.

Traditional Thanksgiving hymns will be sung. The choirs from all the churches will join together for two anthems: "Now Thank We All Our God" by J.S. Bach, and "O How Amiable" by R. Vaughn Williams. The organist will be Mr. Stephen Lee of St. Stephen's Parish. The choirs will be directed by Sister Mary Hurld of St. Anthony's Parish.

This year's "President's Proclamation" will be read and the Thanksgiving offering taken up at the service will be donated to Oxfam America to help relieve the earthquake victims of El Salvador.

Legion Christmas party

December 13, the American Legion Auxiliary invites its members' children and grandchildren 10 and under, to their annual Children's Xmas party.

All members of the Auxiliary and Post are asked to call Jill at 383-0372 with the names and ages of the children.

The party will be held at the Legion function room from 1-3 p.m. A strict deadline date will be Dec. 5.

Hazardous waste collection Nov. 22

Saturday, Nov. 22, there will be a household hazardous waste collection, from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m.

It will be held in Hingham, at the Station Street parking lot off Water Street. Only Cohasset and Hingham residents may participate, and a maximum of five gallons (or 45 pounds) of waste can be accepted per household.

The following wastes may be brought for disposal:

From the house: drain cleaners, oven cleaners, furniture polish, metal polish, batteries, pharmaceuticals, arts and crafts supplies, photo chemicals, floor cleaners, window cleaners, dry cleaning fluids, radiator cleaners.

From the garage: gasoline, antifreeze, brake fluid, wax polish, engine and radiator flushes, transmission fluid.

From the workbench: rust preventative, wood preservatives (not Penta), wood strippers, oil-based paints, paint thinner, solvents, degreasers, sealents.

From the yard/garden: pesticides, herbicides (not Silvex and Weed-be Gone), insect sprays (not aerosol), rodent killers, pool chemicals, muriatic acid, no-pest strips, cesspool cleaners.

If you have material which you think may be hazardous and it is not listed above, please call the Health Agent, Dr. Joseph Godzik, to find out what to do with it.

The following cannot be accepted at the collection: aerosol cans; latex paints (these may be disposed of with your regular rubbish); gas cylinders; ammunition; water reactive, biologically active, radioactive, or explosive materials; tires; dioxin (2,4-D and 2, 4, 5-T); Silvex and Weed-be-Gone; Penta wood preservative; or PCBs. Car batteries can be returned where purchased or used as a trade-in for a new one. Used motor oil is accepted, free of charge, year round, at Leo's Exxon Service Station at the corner of Rt. 3A and Beechwood St.

If you have household hazardous wastes and have no way of getting them to the collection site, the Cohasset Water Dept. will come by on Friday, Nov. 21 to pick up. Please call the Water Dept. (383-0057) or the Health Dept. (383-1664) Thursday until 8 p.m. or Friday until 1 p.m. to arrange.

All wastes should be brought to the collection site in well marked, non-leaking containers. The original container is best. All participants will be asked a few questions to allow the state to improve its household hazardous waste collection procedures. You should plan to arrive early, but not before 9 a.m. The amount of waste which can be accepted is limited by funds, and the hauler, North East Solvents, will not be able to accept wastes once our funding limit has been reached. Approximately $8000 from the state and $22,000 from the two towns is available to fund this program.

Proper disposal of your wastes will help ensure a safe drinking water supply and a chemically hazard-free environment. Remember to arrive early, be aware of what can and cannot be accepted, have your wastes labeled and packaged securely to ensure a safe and successful clean-up operation.

Residents will be able to bring their toxic household wastes to Hingham's Station Street parking lot this Saturday, Nov. 22.

Dramatic Club to present 'Alice In Wonderland'

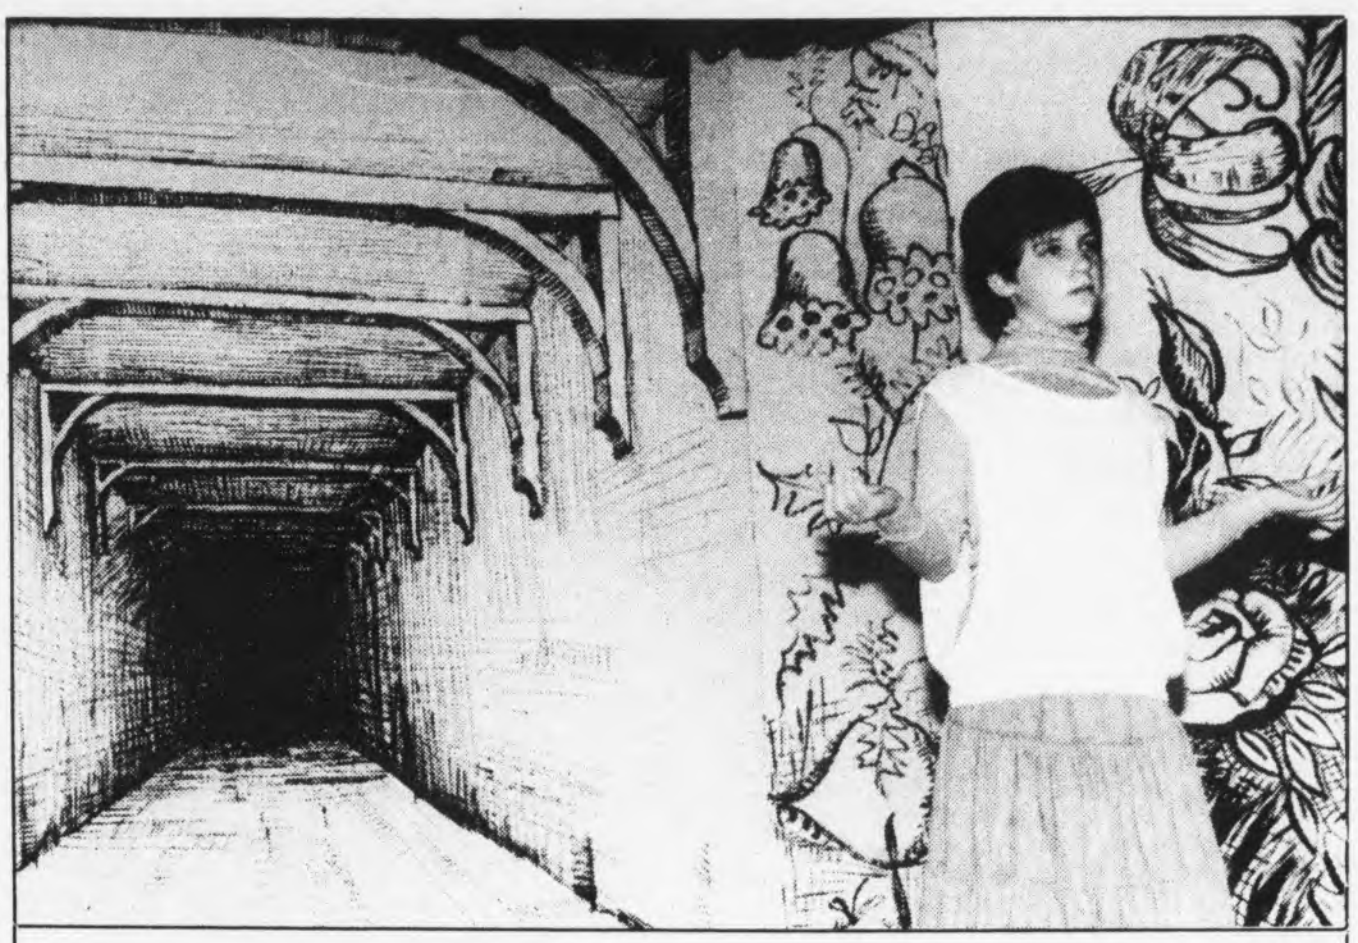
The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present the stage version of Lewis Carroll's 19th century tale of "Alice In Wonderland" as the first show of its 65th season on the historic Cohasset Town Hall stage.

Lewis's "dream adventure" has been adapted for theater by the actress Eva LeGallienne and collaborator Florida Friebus. The first New York performances of the LeGallienne adaptation opened in the year 1932, and the revised version being presented in Cohasset played there in 1947, directed by LeGallienee herself.

The director for the Dramatic Club's production is Ellen Kelley; producer is Helen Ketcham, stage design is by Sheldon Ripley, lighting by Arthur Paquette and Clark Young, sound effects will be by George Hamacher, and Stage Manager is Don Freiter.

In the Cohasset production, set designer Sheldon Ripley pointed out, "the setting will duplicate, as far as possible, the original illustrations for Lewis Carrol's book drawn by John Tenniel." The colorful costumes of Carroll's imaginitive characters also will closely replicate the original illustrations, and have been brought together from many sources for this production. The stage setting itself has been the result of hours of work by almost a dozen Cohasset and South Shore artista, including several whose artworks have graced museum shows.

As for "Alice In Wonderland" itself, the cast features Kate DeLima as Alice in a role which calls for her to remain on stage from the raising of the curtain in Act 1 to the closing curtain at the end. A talented company of Dramatic Club newcomers and veterans will assume the identities of Lewis Carroll's unique characters. Of interest is adapter LaGallienne's observation that all dialogue in the play is taken from the original book. There will be music and singing in this production of "Alice In Wonderland", and Mary Burns Reilly will be the music director and accompanist.



Kate de Lima as Alice, is perplexed as she's about to enter a new, exciting adventure.

Queen of Spades, Jennifer O'Leary, takes a break during rehearsals for this weekend's performance.

"Curiouser and curiouser" says Lewis Carroll's Alice of the kaliedoscopic progression of strange events in her dream adventure. Adaptor LeGallienne has followed the progression faithfully, as has the Dramatic Club's production. The cast itself, too numerous to list entirely, will feature Harry Heineman as the White Rabbit, Alice Duffy as the Duchess, Rebecca McCarthy as the Cheshire Cat.

Don Massa as the Mad Hatter, Donna Williams as the March Hare, Carter Hill as the Dormouse, Jeanne Armin as the Mock Turtle, Bonnie Haley as the Queen of Hearts, Bob Julian as the King of Hearts, Denise Ripley and Judy Holmes as the Red and White Queens, Michelle Massa and Suzanne DeCruz as Tweedledum and Tweedledee, John Rice as the White Knight, and David Wadsworth as the voice of Humpty Dumpty. In addition, a gaggle of small animals, a veritable pack of playing cards, a pantomime horse and other equally entrancing characters will appear during Alice's amazing travels through Lewis Carroll's Wonderland.

Performances of "Alice In Wonderland" will be Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., November 21 and 22; with a matinee show at 2 p.m. on Sunday, November 23.

Tickets will be $4, available at the door at time of performances or in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center. Also at the Hingham Bookstore & Hingham Public Library. A special dress rehearsal on Thursday evening, November 20 will be open to senior citizens at no charge; curtain time 8 p.m.

Be sure to include the Cohasset Dramatic Club's holiday season production of "Alice In Wonderland" as one of the things you must see this November. It will be a show for the whole family, appealing, as it does, to every age.

Cohasset worship . . .

St. Stephen's

Roman Catholic, Unitarian, Congregational, Orthodox, and Episcopalian churches as well as the Vedanta Centre of Cohasset will gather at St. Stephen's Wednesday, Nov. 26, at 8 p.m. for a service of Thanksgiving. This will be the third year that the town churches have gathered together to give thanks.

Diocesan Convention: Betsy Stevenson is our parish delegate, and Pam Earle is the alternate to the Diocesan Convention. The delegates will discuss and vote upon such issues as renewing the companion relationship with Zimbabwe, supporting women's ministries in the diocese, and endorsing habitable, affordable housing as a right for all.

Licensed Lay Readers: Bobbie Fowle and John Vivian will begin their service as lay readers in Advent. Betsy Stevenson and John Seavey have finished their three-year terms.

Licensed by the Bishop, lay readers lead Morning Prayer, offer meditations during Quiet Days, help plan worship, and serve with others in administering the chalice and reading the lessons for Sunday worship.

In Our Parish Family: Billie and Skip Berents have returned from an eight-day cycling trip through the Bordeaux and Dordogne River valley region of France, "a beautiful, unspoiled area known for its prehistoric caves as well as its famous vineyards."

Betty and Peter Pearce have also just returned from France where they visited Souppes sur Loing, a town whose relationship with Cohasset goes back to World War II. Wherever the Pearces went, the French people extended them every courtesy and kindness, and made their trip a memorable event.

Joe Tierney is now recuperating well at home after a week's hospitalization.

Please pray for Sam Wakeman, who is now home from the hospital, and for his family.

Village Fair Notes: Children's Grab Bags—If anyone has any Halloween candy left, I rely on donations to go along with the other contents of the grab bags. Please let me know if you can contribute. We will be starting to make the packages very soon. The Village Fair date is Dec. 6. It opens at 10 a.m. at the Town Hall. Thank you! Dawn Vivian, 383-6732.

Children's Table—for the Fair will be holding workshops at the Second Congregational Church each Wednesday afternoon from 12:00—2:30. For information, call Claudia Story, 383-6976, or Jane Bishop, 383-6772. Lots of hands are needed—no experience necessary.

Book Table—The Book Table would like contributions. These may be left at St. Anthony's Rectory in the basement on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays from 10 a.m. - noon. No Reader's Digest Condensed Books, National Geographic, or school books.

Wreath Workshop—We will be wiring cones and making bows every Wednesday from 9:30 until 11:30 a.m. at Carmen Schramms, 28 Atlantic Ave., 383-1076, Nov. 5, 12, and 19. COME ONE, COME ALL, bring your clippers and enjoy good coffee, delicious snacks!

Bargain Bazaar—Here's your chance to find a welcome for many things useful and usable that you no longer need. Bring them to St. Anthony's Rectory (rear) Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays, 10-12, where they will be gratefully received by members of the Bargain Bazaar Committee and readied for sale at the Fair. We're in the market for tools, gadgets, small appliances (in working order), toys, sports gear . . .whatever!

House of Prayer Church

Sunday, Nov. 23, House of Prayer Lutheran Church, 916 Main St., Hingham, will celebrate Christ the King Sunday with worship service at 9:15 a.m.

On this last Sunday of the church year Christ is acclaimed as eternal King of creation. Pastor Alan Grant will conduct the service and preside over holy communion. Pastor Grant's sermon topic will be "Pattern and Power." Greg Duvall will be cantor. Special music will be provided by the Children's Choir and trumpet accompaniment to the hymns. Coffee will be served following the service. Sunday School and Adult Forum will begin at 10:40 a.m.

The community is invited to participate in a Hunger Dinner at House of Prayer at 6:15 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 26. After the dinner everyone will attend the 8 p.m. Community Thanksgiving Service at Old Ship Church.

We're in the market for tools, gadgets, small appliances (in working order), toys, sports gear....whatever!

Second Congregational

From the Finance Committee—The presentation of a candidate for call as the next minister of our church is an exciting and important event. The Search Committee has arranged to have our candidate preach November 16. So that we can do justice to hearing him and to our annual stewardship campaign, pledge Sunday will be November 23. Rev. Wheeler will deliver a stewardship sermon on that day.

Village Fair Supper Tickets—may be purchased by calling Tish Jordan, 383-0195, or at the church. There is a limited number, so buy yours soon.!

In the Family—Carolyn LaVange expresses her thanks and appreciation for all the cards, flowers, phone calls and encouraging words during her recuperation. She is doing very well now.

Eleanor Kennedy is recuperating at home from a broken collar-bone. We send our best wishes for a speedy recovery from all your church friends. Eleanor!

Congratulations and best wishes to Caroline Williams who will be celebrating her 95th birthday on November 17! Caroline's address is: Mediplex of Westport, 1 Burr Road, Westport, Ct. 06880.

Village Fair—Children's Table will be holding workshops at the Second Congregational Church afternoon from 12:00-2:30. For information, call Claudia Story, 383-6976, or Jane Bishop, 383-6772. Lots of hands are needed—no experience necessary.

Cohasset's history book is now available

Cohasset's early history, from its first beginnings to the start of the 20th century, was written down in book form by the Reverend E. Victor Bigelow in the year 1898.

The publication in that year of the "Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, Massachusetts" marked the culmination of a project undertaken by Cohasset's Committee on Town History, a group of leading citizens chosen at the Town Meeting of 1894. The "Narrative History" is a compilation of what was known or remembered of the town's earlier years.

Cohasset originated as part of its parent town, neighboring Hingham, and had become a separate town of its own in the year 1770. "Conahasset", as it was called by the first settlers, had its first farmhouses and homesteads in the 1670's, soon after the division of the uplands among Hingham landowners. Until 1770, Cohasset was the 2nd Precinct and Parish of Hingham, populated by second and third generation Hingham families. Just before the Revolution, the fast growing community received an admixture of Cape Cod seafaring families who settled here to become part of Cohasset's thriving fishing and mercantile industry. Not until the mid years of the 19th century was there another sizeable influx of population from elsewhere, as Portugal and its Western Islands contributed more seafarers to man the town's fishing schooners and its mercantile sailships.

For most of its early years Cohasset was an agricultural and maritime community. Mackerel schooner fleets and their allied businesses flourished at the harbor called "Ship Cove", and small shipyards turned out wooden vessels in quantity of various sizes and useages. The mackerel fleets and their support industries were gone from Cohasset by 1900, and the last generation of Cohasset's sailing seafarers had nearly passed from the scene when Rev. Bigelow undertook to record a vanishing way of life. From seafaring town to summer colony was a giant step for the town in the latter 19th century, as Bostonians of wealth came to Cohasset to enjoy the relaxing ocean breezes and refreshing atmosphere away from the sun-baked city. The shore road "cottages" and estates of Cohasset were part of Rev. Bigelow's town, and he wrote of them.

But long before the town began, before the human race existed at all, came the town's most durable landmark, its granite rock ledges. The granite is many millions of years old and dates from an earlier time in Earth's history. In "Narrative History" Bigelow wrote of the forming of our granite ledges and rockbound coast with all the newfound knowledge of late 19th century science. He then moved on to a more recent geological occurence which gave Cohasset its present topography, the great glaciers of the Pleistocene era which covered the northern reaches of the continent. It was the ice which formed our landscape, scouring away the land, smoothing the granite rock beneath it, and leaving behind layers of clay, gravel and stones so much in evidence today. After the retreat of the glaciers, new fauna and flora reclaimed the land, and Rev. Bigelow has catalogued the plants found here.

"From seafaring town to summer colony was a giant step for the town in the latter 19th century, as Bostonians of wealth came to Cohasset to enjoy the relaxing ocean breezes. . . ."

Sometime later the early Indian tribes moved into this area, and it was the last of them which were found here by Capt. John Smith in 1614, Cohasset's name comes from the Algonquin word "Quonahasset", meaning "Long Rocky Place". From the town's pre-history to its recorded history takes Bigelow a matter of several chapters, each written in flowing narrative style both elegant and informative. The first settlers of the 1600's he calls "The 'Quonahasset' Pioneers". From those few families of older Hingham a town and community developed. Churches, schools, libraries, businesses and trades proliferated to construct a thriving, if still small, center of activity, a place where generations of villagers could live and prosper.

The "Narrative History" was written during transitional years, when the town was losing its old ways and new and different ways loomed ever closer. For in 1898 Cohasset was on the verge of becoming a suburb and the 20th century was only a short step into the future.

The Reverend E. Victory Bigelow's "Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset" is a remarkable collection of factual knowledge about this old New England seacoast village. It also is the definitive history of the town written in a unique manner. Illustrations of old Cohasset are numerous and several important maps are included, including one of the original 1670 Land Division.

The 561-page "Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset" recently was reprinted in a comemmorative edition by the Cohasset Historical Society. This marks the second reprinting of the history; the 1970 reissue having been sold out some time ago.

Copies of the Bigelow "Narrative History" can be obtained from the Historical Society, or purchased at Flemings, Elm Street, Cohasset Center. The price is $20 plus $1 tax.

This fascinating and uniquely written story of Cohasset's early history makes a thoughtful and discerning gift for the coming holiday season, or at almost any other time of the year.

For further information about obtaining the book please call the Society at 383-6930.

Derby Academy elects student leaders

Upper School students at Hingham's Derby Academy recently elected student leaders for the 1986-87 school year.

Student government at Derby is run by an eleven-member Student Council composed of three Ninth Grade officers and two representatives from each Upper School grade, Five through Eight. Latin teacher Michael Connelly serves as faculty adviser to the Council, which conducts Wednesday Chapel services and plans student social and philanthropic activities for the year. This year's Council President is Ann Chase of Marshfield. Elizabeth Kilmartin of Hingham is Secretary; Cary Bazley of Duxbury is Treasurer. Eighth Grade representatives are Daniel Cohen of Hull, and Danielle Coutu of Hingham. Seventh Grade representatives Michael Frates and Amy Forker, are both of Hingham. Josiah Winslow and Krissy Kelleher, also of Hingham, will represent Grade Six. James Llewellyn and Britt Soderberg of Hingham will represent Grade Five.

Interscholastic athletic teams have chosen captains for fall season sports. Ninth grader Meg Spenlinhauer of Hingham is captain of the girls' Varsity field hockey team; eighth grader Martha Maher of Boston is captain of the junior varsity field hockey team. Girls have also elected their intramural captains. Derby captains are ninth grader Ann Chase of Marshfield and sixth grader Alison Schram of Hingham. Opposing Topper team captains are ninth grader Nicole Egger of Plymouth and Caroline Arbury of Cohasset.

Boys' interscholastic captain for the Varsity A soccer team is Daniel Cohen; for Varsity B soccer, seventh grader Andrew Cahalane of Duxbury. John Sargent and Kyle Cetrulo, both Hingham sixth graders, are co-captains of the Junior Varsity A team.

Young People's Summer Theatre plans

The Young People's Summer Theatre directors recently met to discuss the future of YPST, and, specifically, next summer.

Plans are underway for YPST to begin its second decade of educational theatre. In August, the group celebrated its 10th anniversary summer with a gala musical revue that presented highlights from past seasons. The revue marked the group's 18th musical production.

Don Capen, director, announced that the administration will "proceed with caution" regarding YPST's growth in the next couple of years. Capen noted that last year a five-year suspension plan was announced, but it will take longer than anticipated in order for the current structure of the organization to handle the growth.

Capen and his two assistants, Kim Karlberg and Peter Law, said there would be some staff and scheduling changes for 1987. It is anticipated the group will operate on a four-evening-a-week basis, rather than a five or six-evening-a-week basis as it has been since 1983. Also, Capen is attempting to expand his paid support staff. In addition, a new music director and technical supervisor will be hired.

Also under serious discussion is a "two level" operation in which the younger aged youths will participate in one program, and the older youths participating in another, in addition to a combined effort.

Capen would like to see some of the younger kids showcased at an earlier age instead of being lost in the crowd. It is likely that this type of program will go into effect in 1988.

Finally, Capen himself is planning to reduce his own workload, hire additional artistic directors, and work on new, experimental YPST projects.

"We're trying to keep up with our growth," Capen said. "In the last three years our cost and budget have tripled, and last summer we saw the largest group of youths we've ever had involved. But our staff is the same size now as it was when we began 10 years ago."

Capen said the parent-member committee assembled last winter was an asset. They were instrumental in coordinating a successful auction last July, and plans are in the works for an off-season fundraiser in the spring.

"We have a fundraising disadvantage, since we operate full-time from June through August," Capen added. "It means that all our revenue must be raised within a 12-week period, the same 12 weeks we are rehearsing an 80-member cast musical. Since we don't have the same kids every year, it's difficult to begin earlier than June."

Regarding next summer's show choice, it is expected to be chosen by mid-winter. "I'm sure it'll be something unusual, we wouldn't want to break tradition." Some of the titles under consideration are My One and Only a George Gershwin show; High Spirits, based on Noel Coward's Blithe Spirits; Superman, based on the comic strip and others.

Three of the choices involve flying a major character. "We like challenges," said Capen. "We've built a ship and a train—if we fly someone, we've covered land, sea and air. What else is left, unless we do Gone With the Wind, referring to the London musical, then we'll have to burn Atlanta. I don't think the Scituate schools would like that, though."

Notre Dame Academy seeks graduates

Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, is looking for graduates to participate in an arts and crafts show that is planned for April 12 at the school.

"We feel that there are many talented young women who would welcome the opportunity to exhibit their works and it will be exciting to bring them together," said NDA Development Director Marie Hoy. "The Art Show will be coordinated with a rags to riches fashion show that will feature high quality used fashions that will be sold at a fraction of their cost in addition to a display of dazzling furs."

All events will be open to the public.

Graduates of any of the NDA academies who would like further information on the arts and craft show, should contact Mrs. Hoy at Notre Dame Academy, 1073 Main St., Hingham, 02043, 749-5930.

South Shore Visiting Nurses celebrate anniversary

The Visiting Nurses Association of the South Shore recently celebrated its 75th anniversary with an awards presentation and free health fair in Cohasset.

The ceremony was held at the Cohasset Community Center, and among those honored were Mrs. Howard Barton, Mrs. William Cole, Mrs. Lydia Ericson, Mrs. Oliver H. Howe, Miss Madeline Howson, Mrs. Thomas McGrath, and Mrs. Evan P. Wentworth, for their devotion of time and energies to caring for the people of Cohasset.

In 1912, the Cohasset Social Service League was founded by Mrs. Oliver H. Howe. The League, made up of members representing each church in the town, dedicated themselves to improving social conditions. Their main concern at this time was the training and care of children. Along with a school lunch program, the League established several "domestic science" courses for local boys and girls.

The Cohasset Social Service League was incorporated in 1923, and they offered home nursing and attended to social causes as well. Through the years home health care services expanded, and clinics were provided for all ages. In 1979, due to government regulations, the Social Service League voted to have the Visiting Nurses Association of the South Shore assume the home care caseload for Cohasset.

Today the VNA of the South Shore is proud to provide a full complement of home health services to the Town of Cohasset.

As part of the VNA's 75th anniversary celebration, the Health Care '75' fair was conducted at Stop & Shop in Cohasset. Blood pressure testing was free of charge to all who stopped by.

RUDERMAN'S HANOVER

All around New England
you'll find Ruderman's customers, and the reason...it's simple; and it all comes down to one word...VALUE.
There isn't any other furniture company anywhere in New England that does it the way we do...the others talk about the old days; the new days...but, we just keep on doing it our way...The customer services, the variety, the looks and the famous guaranteed brand names such as Thomasville, Sealy, Broyhill, Simmons, La-Z-Boy, Lane, Mersman and above all the price...Always specially priced and when we have a sale, it's below that... GUARANTEED!
Just consider for a moment how terrific we feel about our new Hanover store...It's our second new showroom in two years. Now we've got five. That's not bad when you opened your first showroom seventy-four years ago.
But, what's really unique about our story is that we did it in New England. Of all the areas in the Country; convincing a New Englander they are getting the best in value and having them keep coming back is the test and we've done it for 74 years.
So, from one New Englander to another, be impressed...drop in for a visit!

Skippers spoil Hanover's homecoming 35-0

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner Correspondent

Saturday, the boys crushed Hanover, 35-0. The Skippers dominated the game both offensively and defensively.

After getting off to a slow start in the first quarter, Cohasset bounced back in the second quarter. The Skippers finally scored with four minutes remaining in the first half when quarterback Peter Sandblom connected a pass with Philip Mahoney who then ran the ball 18 yards for a touchdown. The boys then blocked a punt by Hanover which enabled Peter to once again throw a touchdown pass, this one being caught by Craig Mulcahy in the endzone.

The second half was one-sided as Cohasset's powerful defense limited Hanover's offense to only 14 plays and prevented Hanover from getting any first downs. After a scoreless third quarter, Bobby Durkin became the star of the fourth quarter as he added three more touchdowns to his extremely long list. Bobby also kicked 5 extra points for Cohasset and had 143 yards rushing on 23 carries.

Cohasset's offense played very well and came up with several big plays. However, it was Cohasset's defense that really shone on Saturday. Led by Jeff Lloyd, Liam Stanford, Matt Maloney, and Todd Henry, the defense kept Hanover scoreless and limited the Indians to less than 100 yards. Thus, the defensive effort of the Skippers was the key to this win and enabled Cohasset's record to now stand at an impressive 8-1.

Cohasset's Chris Conant evades capture by Hanover opponent Mark Shanley, during Saturday's victory.

Seahawks Mite action

In the Mite B Division, the Seahawk Gold team scored a 4-3 victory over a determined South Shore Eagle team to remain unbeaten.

Nick Esposito opened the scoring for the Seahawks with a breakaway goal in the first period. But Jim Yannizzi got the equalizer for the Eagles with his own breakaway.

In the second period, the Seahawks went two up with goals by Marcus Wily and Adam Fuller with assists from Charlie Keyes and Kevin McLaughlin.

The Eagles got one back early in the third period to make it close again at 3-2. Then, with only 2 minutes 23 seconds left, Esposito and Fuller combined for the second week in a row to get what proved to be the game winning goal.

With exactly one minute to go the Eagles scored to make it 4 to 3. Then they pulled their goalie in a valiant attempt to tie.

In an exciting action-packed final minute, the Seahawks were able to overcome the pressure of the extra man and preserve a hard fought victory.

The Seahawks I Mite C hockey team is off to an undefeated start in the 1986-87 hockey season. Sunday's 4-1 win over Dorchester marked their seventh victory against no defeats since the opening game on Oct. 5.

Brad Kent, Andy Heller, Robbie Ialla, and Ken Dunbar are Scituate's representatives on the team. Timmy King, Mark Angeloni and Jared Simpson are from Norwell; Greg Shultz and Nevin Bunstein from Cohasset; and J.J. Donovan, Brian Hartigan, Leigh Olson, Jason Kadish and Ryan Read from Marshfield.

6-9 YEARS OLD

Coach Lou Angeloni, assisted by Bob King and Bruce Heller, has developed a well-balanced team that has all three lines outscoring opponents.

Sunday's goals came from Ryan Read (2), Preston Lemanski of Hull and Derek Edmunds of Hull. The team's next game is Saturday at 11 a.m. in Hingham.

Committee plans for annual Village Fair

A full range of activities and merchandise with special appeal to children will once again be presented in abundance at Cohasset's annual Village Fair Saturday, December 6.

One of the earliest planning goals of general chairman Annette Sawchuk and her central committee representing the five participating town churches was to make certain that all popular children's features were included and staffed. While leadership of these is in place, many of the committees would welcome additional workers either in advance or on the day of the Fair.

From "grabs" to Santa Claus, face-painting, clowns, balloons and a "Secret Room" for their very own private gift-shopping, the Fair again will offer a range of temptations for children while parents prowl the booths and tables for their own gifts, decorations, bargains and taste treats.

Weather permitting, the Common itself will be a major center for the children's activities. Focal point, as usual, will be Santa Claus who has sent word to his long-time Fair host, Jeff Stelle, that he will be arriving by fire engine about 10:45 a.m. With Margaret Young assisting, Santa will welcome youngsters to his sleigh in an evergreen bower and pose for Polaroid pictures by Florence Sanford.

Nearby Kathy Brennock and assistants will be inflating and selling balloons while a clown entertains and a number of other children's activities will be underway, conducted by a group headed by Kate Caldwell.

Ms. Caldwell has enlisted Avis Sweeney for the popular face-painting while others involved in running games, cookie decorations and storytime, will include Bev. Nedringer, Kathy Prouty, Arlene Claiborne and Donna Glowacky. Kim and Jennifer Costas will present a puppet show. Children who will be helping with these activities include Kay Long, Alison Doherty, Katie and Matthew Norris, Joshua Stevenson, Brian Donovan and Gregory Lennon.

If December weather does not cooperate these activities will move into the Community Center.

Occupying a central position in the Town Hall will be the Children's Table which traditionally attracts both children and parents to the many attractive hand-made clothes and novelty gifts the committee has been fashioning over a period of weeks. Nancy McLaughlin and Jane Long are co-chairs of this buddy group and are being assisted by Claudia Story, Kate Abbruzzese, Mary Beth Curry and Elaine French. Among the items they will offer are stuffed toys, doll clothes, sweaters, dresses and crib blankets.

Also scheduled for operating in the Town Hall is the popular feature of grabs, where a collection of wrapped mystery treasures assembled by a group under Dawn Vivian will be available to youngsters willing to take a chance.

A major move of one of the Fair's most appealing features for children is that of the Secret Room from the Congregational Church to St. Stephen's where it will have the advantage of larger quarters. In this feature, admission is limited to children so that they can shop in private for Mom, Dad, brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles. A group headed by Ann Delaney has been working for weeks, making and assembling items for the Secret Room and expects to have as many as 1,500 on hand for the big day.

Joining their parents in looking for attic treasures, basement bargains and cellar collectibles, children are certain also to be attracted to the Bargain Bazaar in the Unitarian Parish House. Gail Bell chairs a group which has been collecting these items and storing them in the basement of St. Anthony's Rectory over a period of months.

Donations are still being accepted there Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. when members of the committee will be on hand. Among the workers are Cynthia Peters, Ruth Sisson, Lillian Caramanis, Carole Johnson, Fran Hanks, Lynn Previte, Holly Holway, Judy Fitzsimmons, and Gertrude Hooper.

In the Parish House, too, children will find used books, many of them geared to and suitable for their tastes, that will be sold under the direction of Alice Daunt and Helen Hooper.

Art center holiday shoppe opens

Step through the door to the South Shore Art Center and enter into the "holiday shoppe" featuring finely handcrafted gifts by local artists and artisans.

New to the 1986 collection for the holiday shoppe, located in the Center at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, are hand painted blue and white miniatures by the late Peter Anderson, a noted Time-Life magazine photographer; finely embroidered wall hangings created by the Hmong women of Laos; and whimsical hobby horses and puppets created by Joni Jensen.

Along with these new art forms, the holiday shop has a collection of pottery by Judith Rossman, Sandy and Ralph Terry and Marsha Klein; pre-Columbian artifacts by Tom Lucas; the ever popular handmade wreaths of dried materials; and hand decorated Christmas egg ornaments.

Anderson's hand painted miniatures were done in 1983 and were much influenced by his desire to understand Zen Buddhism. The proceeds from the sale of the miniatures will go to the Peter Anderson Award Fund.

An ancient form of art, "Pa Ndau", has been carried on by a group of Laotian women living in the Brockton area. The tradition of this art has been passed on for centuries by the Hmong women of Laos. Pa Ndau is a very specialized form of textile art which features applique, embroidery and cross stitch. The beautiful needlework wall hangings serve as a window on their culture, telling ancient stories in handstitched pictures.

The Hmong women living in the Brockton area come together daily to work on their needlework to create wall hangings, table linens, baby carriers and pillows and bed covers and to carry on this ancient tradition of art and storytelling. The Hmongs, meaning "free people", are a tribe who come from the remote regions of Laos and whose allegiance is first to family and then to tribe.

Joni Jensen's whimsical beasts for little children to ride or play with are soft sculptured animals of all sorts. She originally created a soft sculpture turkey for the Cohasset Dramatic Club and has gone on to create a whole line of soft sculptured animals under the name of Custom Costumes. Her creations appeared in an exhibit of children's toys made by New England artists at the Brockton Art Museum.

All the crafts in the Center's "Holiday Shoppe" offer a wide variety of gift giving ideas for the holiday season.

The shoppe is open Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. While in the Center, shoppers might also consider giving a Center gift certificate for a class, a workshop, a lecture or work of art and let the recipient pick out what he or she might enjoy.

For additional information, please call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Regional swim meet

The Coastal Swim Club will be hosting a sanctioned United States Swimming Meet on the weekend of Dec. 13 and 14 at the pool of Massasoit Community College, Brockton. This two-day meet will be composed of five sessions and will attract U.S. swimmers from all over New England.

Sponsor coordinator for the meet will be Marie McDonald, Plymouth. Each of the 66 events will be funded by a sponsor from the local business community. The donation for sponsoring an event is $25. For this tax-deductible contribution, the sponsor will receive a one inch by three inch ad placed above a particular event in the program for the meet. Anyone interested in sponsoring an event should send a check for $25 made payable to Coastal Swim Club, P.O. Box 297, Bryantville, Ma. 02327 Attn. Marie McDonald.

The sponsor should include a business card which will be used for the advertisement. A receipt and a copy of the program will be forwarded to each sponsor. The Coastal Swim Club, with a membership of more than 70 swimmers ranging in age from 7 to 17 practices six days a week at Massasoit Community College, Brockton, under the direction of Coach Paul Miles.

He explained, "The line-up I have now . . . Jimmy Gallagher, I was thinking of having him as a forward and now he's an outside fullback. And I had Jimmy Reidy as an outside fullback and now he's one of our highest scoring forwards."

"As it went on," he said, "we shuffled people around, seeing where they fit in best and where they could help the team the best."

Magner was especially happy with the attitude of Stephen Myers.

"Stephen Myers was a big, big surprise," he said. "At the beginning of the season, I really thought he was going to play on the j.v. team. He was one of four or five kids who were going to go down to the j.v. level."

"But he stayed with it," Magner noted; "he stuck with it and now he starts as an outside fullback. He has just played fantastic soccer. He's a very, very solid player."

As the season went along, Cohasset sharpened its skills and racked up a big batch of wins.

"At one stretch," the coach commented, "we won six games in a row. We beat Rockland during that time, 3-2. It was a very big win, because it was at their field.

"We beat Scituate, 1-0," he added, "and at that time, they were the number one team in the state in Division 2. That was a big, big win for us."

The playoffs put the Skippers on the road, but terrific fan support helped them feel right at home against some tough opponents.

In their third post-season match-up, the Skippers managed a 0-0 tie against Dover-Sherborn (19-1) before a snowstorm halted play.

Cohasset had to go home without a decision, knowing another road-trip into enemy territory awaited them.

"It's not so much going to someone else's field," Magner said, "but taking that long bus ride takes its toll, mentally."

Cohasset shocked the Raiders, 1-0 on that return trip.

"We had a bigger crowd than the home team," he said. "It's so nice when you have that support. I hope people know how much all the players and coaches appreciate it when you're down and you look and you see people are there who want you to win. It's inspiring."

The Skippers were inspired to another great win against Medway, 2-1. The score was tied, 1-1 through two five-minute overtimes, four sudden death overtimes, and won on a penalty kick.

East Boston fell, 2-1 in a sudden death overtime to make Cohasset the champions of eastern Massachusetts.

One more Cohasset win on Saturday and things will really be coming up roses.

Wedding

Peters/Hickok

Wendy Hickok

Wendy Allsopp Hickok, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanford Hickok of South Orleans and Richard Allan Peters, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Peters of Cohasset were married in South Orleans on November 8 at the Church of The Holy Spirit. The Reverend David White performed the ceremony. The wedding reception was held at Eastward Ho Country Club in Chatham.

Mrs. Peters graduated from Kent Place School in Summit, New Jersey and attended Randolph Macon Woman's and Bethany Colleges. She is employed by Harvard University. The bride's father is the retired chairman of KMG Main Hurdman. Mrs. Peter's gradparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest S. Hickok and the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Allsopp of Summit, New Jersey.

Mr. Peters graduated from Wellesley High School and Ohio Wesleyan University. He is the owner of Sea and Cheese in Cohasset. His father is an executive with Polaroid Corporation. Mr. Peter's grandparents are Mr. Theodore A. Ward and the late Mrs. Ward of Westwood and the late Mr. and Mrs. George Peters, Senior of Swampscott.

Mr. and Mrs. Peters will reside in Wellesley.

Obituaries

Bernard H. Mulcahy

A funeral Mass will be celebrated Thursday, Nov. 20 at 10 a.m. in St. Anthony's Church for Bernard H. Mulcahy. Mr. Mulcahy, a former partner of the Central Market, died Monday at South Shore Hospital. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Mulcahy was part owner of the South Main Street grocery store for more than 40 years. He retired two years ago.

A native of Cohasset, Mr. Mulcahy was a well-known volunteer. He frequently helped out with the senior citizens and was a poll worker for many years. He was also a former member of Cohasset Rotary.

A graduate of Cohasset schools and Boston College High School, he attended Bentley College.

He leaves his wife, Catherine (Walsh) Mulcahy; three sons, Bernard L. Mulcahy of Cohasset, Richard Mulcahy of Oakland, Va., and Lawrence Mulcahy of West Springfield; two daughters, Maureen O'Meara of Glencoe, Ill., and Kathleen Pratt of Cohasset; a sister, Margaret M. Mulcahy of Cohasset, and 14 grandchildren.

Memorial donations may be made to the Cohasset Community Center Building Fund, 4 Main Street.

Milton F. Higgins

A funeral service will be scheduled at a later date for Milton F. Higgins, 78, who died last Friday at Massachusetts General Hospital after a brief illness.

Mr. Higgins was a native of Cohasset and lived there all his life. He was a graduate of the public schools here and the Quincy Trade School.

Mr. Higgins was an avid painter and yachtsman. For more than 40 years he was production manager for the D.S. Kennedy Corp, and he worked at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy during World War II.

He leaves his wife, Mildred-Joyce (Beede) Higgins; two sons, Wayne Higgins of Scituate, and Glen F. Higgins of St. Cloud, Fla.; a sister, Elsie Sladen of Cohasset; four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 1105 W. Chestnut St., Brockton, Mass. 02401.

Real estate and cable TV

Home Center Realty announces the exclusive use of Cable television in Massachusetts as a way of selling houses. No other real estate company in the state has used this "marketing wave of the future" to this advantage for both the homeowner and the potential buyer.

Norma Telesco, principal of the firm, emphasizes, "As a non-franchised company, we have prided ourselves on creative approaches to marketing our listings, such as color brochures, special promotions and extensive advertising. Our growth rate indicates that we are fulfilling a welcome service in the marketplace."

Sales Manager Gail Petersen Bell adds, "I'd like to take this opportunity to describe this service that is available to all of our clients here on the South Shore. After our sales associates perform a market analysis on a potential client's home to suggest a fair market price, we develop an overall marketing strategy on a case-by-case basis. I'm very excited about the new cable house ads — it means we can offer the homeowner a total media mix to maximize and target exposure. As an ex-advertising executive, I can really see the potential."

Gail P. Bell

Home Center Realty invites you to see their "Classified Home For Sale" ads on 5 cable stations and then give them a call. They are, as always, Exploring the Possibilities.

Home Center Realty is located at 57 Water Street, Hingham, 749-8833. Call them for an appointment.

New Dwyer and Mullin program

Robert J. Mullin, president of Dwyer & Mullin Realtors in Cohasset, has announced the firm's New Commission Incentive Program for Achievers. It is a three-tier commission system to benefit the company's sales associates while assuring clients of the continued service and commitment of a full service broker firm.

Calling the Incentive Program "a most liberal and rewarding concept developed to keep pace with an increasingly competitive real estate market," Mullin said that all real estate sales persons, from the newest associate to the veteran, will benefit under his office's new commission system.

"Less experienced sales associates with earnings under $13,500 will receive the standard 50 percent of the commission. A 60/40 split will apply to those associates with commissions over $13,500 while those who earn over $22,000 will receive 70 percent of the commission earned," Mullin explained.

Dwyer & Mullin Real Estate is located on Route 3A in Cohasset, just north of the Scituate/Cohasset border.

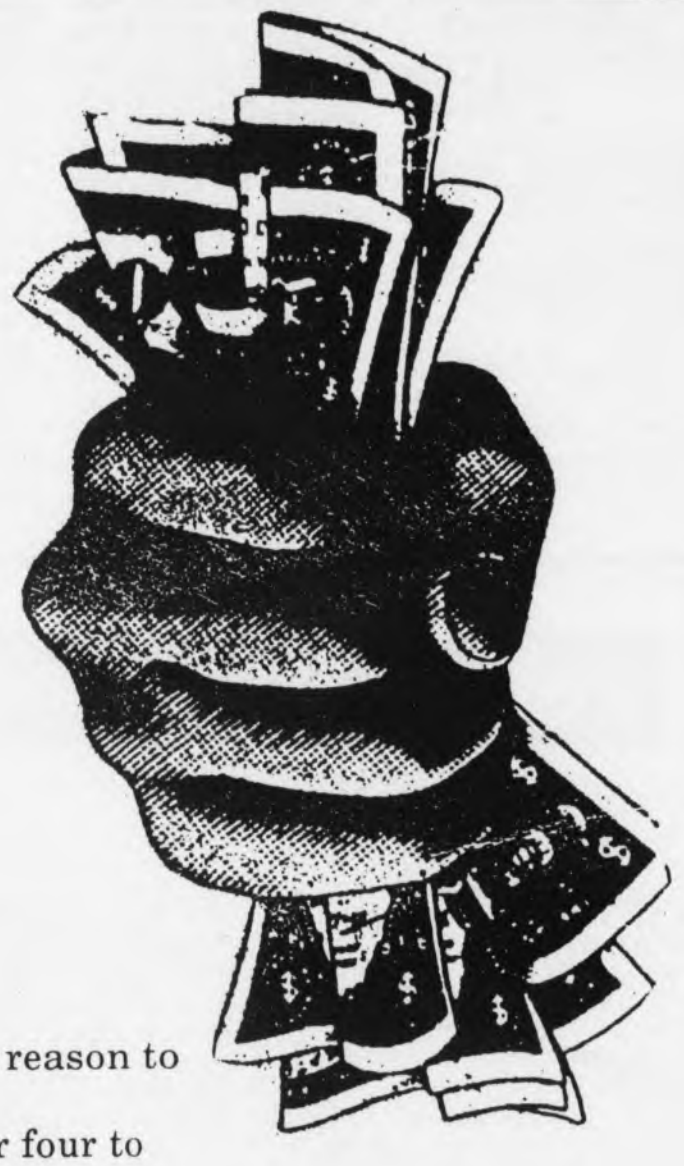
A Stone's Throw —— by Paul Steven Stone

Read this and save hundreds of dollars!



I lied.

You won't save a penny reading this.

I didn't mean to lie; something just came over me.

The problem is I write advertisements for a living. So when David Cutler, the publisher of this paper, told me I wasn't attracting enough readers, I knew exactly what to do. And I did it.

But don't stop reading now. Somewhere below you'll find a "mystery word" which could win you a fabulous luxury condominium at Pilgrim's Progress, the new age living community now under construction at the abandoned Plymouth II nuclear station.

Sorry.

I did it again, didn't I?

There's no mystery word to find, no luxury condo to win. It's just another cheap trick on my part, and I'm not proud of myself for pulling it.

Why don't you turn the page? Find yourself an advertisement with the courage of its convictions. You won't save any money reading this. Nor will you win anything or improve your sex life or enjoy the benefits of space age technology. Truth is, there's really no reason to be reading this at all.

Next week, however, I'm offering my first 100 readers a free trip for four to Disney World. That you won't want to miss.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

Helping Youth Stay With Church

In the summer of 1985 I was one of five leaders chosen by the Scituate School Committee to conduct an "Alcohol Awareness" workshop of students and parents. A week-long, intense experience, it yielded several recommendations to help improve the woeful record of alcohol abuse among both teenagers and adults.

Several suggestions have been implemented and others will be, but both school committee and administration acknowledge that school alone cannot do the whole job. Other community organizations must also take a role.

Churches are always mentioned as primary sources of help. Yet when one goes to the churches, one sees how difficult their job is.

Few children in our communities are actively involved in churches. And when children reach junior high age, the numbers diminish considerably. At the age when alcohol becomes a danger, church often disappears from their life.

There are many reasons. Sunday School may not be sufficiently meaningful. Sunday School isn't just babysitting that keeps kids quiet while adults worship. Nor is it enough to give children ancient stories and expect them to be interested.

Children need to be ministered to, as do people of all ages. This means more than just getting them to church. It means making that ministry as important as the ministry to elders or those in mide-life.

Another complaint is that parents don't make their children come to church any more, at least not after the age of eleven or twelve. While teens in church against their will is not helpful, perhaps parents don't take the time to explain why going to church continues to be important, even after they finish Sunday School. Then again, if teens go to church and find nothing for them, why should they go?

Still another, and more difficult problem in keeping children close to their churches, is the increasing competition for time on Sunday morning.

Church competes with the world. It has since earliest times. The world is exciting, attractive, interesting and diverse. Choosing to be part of a worshipping community on Sunday morning instead of going toward worldly events is hard even for religious adults. How can we expect youngsters to choose the church?

Sports events and athletic teams, social events, sometimes even school groups schedule activities on Sunday morning. The reasons given sound good. "It's the only time we can all get together."

"It's only for one (or two, or six) Sundays."

Ministers and Sunday School leaders hear this again and again. Sometimes it seems that everybody has a special interest that comes before church.

We also hear, "You can go to Mass on Saturday." Fine, if you're Roman Catholic. People who say this ought to consult with their priests.

While Roman Catholic worship is available at times besides Sunday morning, there is increasing feeling within the Church that Sunday is still the Sabbath and scheduling activities which conflict with Sunday worship fragments and weakens the community.

Public schools should also be sensitive to events scheduled on Sunday. They need the good will of the community and forcing children to choose between church and school does not foster it.

Also, how can schools expect churches to provide proper values if they schedule activities which conflict with the church.

Yes, children must make choices in life. Learning to make good choices is the most important factor in steering safely through the dangers young people face today.

But should making them choose between church and athletic events, between church and school activities be the way for them to learn?

Doing so puts everyone at a loss. If they choose church they may lose out on some valuable experiences. If parents make them choose church, the church becomes a chore and a resentment.

If they choose the worldly experiences, and parents allow them to, then we send a message that church is a commitment easily and painlessly avoided, that church can always be put off for whatever is more fun or more socially acceptable.

I don't believe that organized religion is the only, or even the best way for children to find values and responsibility. But I do hear again and again that people expect the church to give values and be a means by which children grow into healthy adults.

Do people who have such expectations for church do their part in allowing churches to perform this function? Do they support their church youth activities? Do they volunteer to lead or help with youth activities, or help organize them in churches which currently have little youth programming?

Or do they spend Sunday mornings, elsewhere? No church can accomplish anything without the support of its people. And a parent can't expect another adult to give the right values to one's children if the parent isn't willing to give one's own time and commitment.

I'm no supporter of blue laws. I'm sensitive to the diversity of worshipping communities. Some worship on Saturday, some Sunday afternoon, and so on.

But we cannot expect church to help our youth if we keep holding activities that conflict with it.

If you have an interest that involves children and which asks them to choose between your activity and church, please bring up to that organization the difficulties that I have just outlined. Reasonable people can discover compromises that do not put our children into needless dilemmas.

Churches need to program more creatively and with more commitment toward youth. Community organizations can support church efforts by thinking more positively about how they can carry on without conflicting with church activities.

Inspector General Barresi fights government waste

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The party is over for those who defraud and abuse government procurement programs.

Since 1981, he has been cracking down on white-collar criminals. Now, Cohasset resident Joseph Barresi has begun his second 5-year term as Massachusetts' Inspector General.

He told the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce Wednesday, he plans to vigorously continue his work, thwarting corruption in the Bay State.

"The basic concept behind the office of Inspector General," he said, "is the prevention and detection of fraud and waste in the procurement of goods and services by the commonwealth."

Barresi recalled his institution as the state's first Inspector General.

"The office was created by the Ward Commission five years ago with a clean slate," he said. "We had no cases, no track record... In fact, when I took office, I had a big, empty room with nothing in it, not even a desk or a telephone.

"And all I had in my hand was a statute," he added, "which told me in broad terms what I was supposed to do."

From those humble beginnings, the new inspector built a strong, independent watchdog agency.

With a first-year budget of $440,000, Barresi's office responded to citizen's complaints, as well as identifying and investigating programs and contracts most susceptible to abuse.

He described some of the agency's major accomplishments.

"In September, 1984," he recalled, "while reviewing the operations of the Woods Hole, Martha's Vinyard and Nantucket Steamship Authority, my office discovered the authority's governing board was about to approve the pouring of a concrete foundation for a new terminal building on Nantucket.

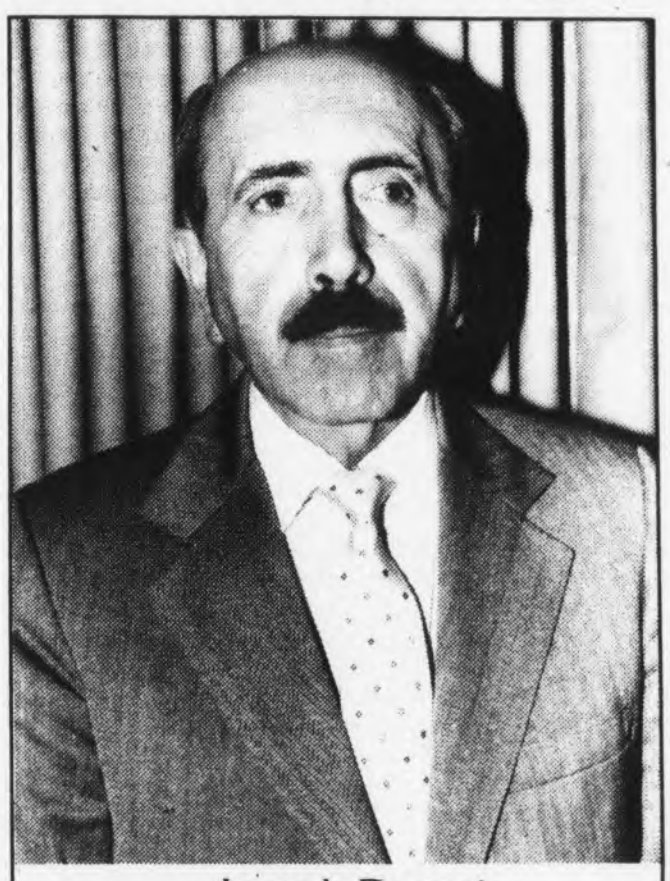
"At the same time," he said, "the board was considering a drastic change in the terminal design, but the authority had not yet negotiated a reasonable price adjustment with the contractor for the new design."

Barresi explained, "The board members apparently didn't realize the go-ahead they were about to give would have locked them into the new design, for which the contractor wanted $2,000 more than the authority's engineers thought feasible.

"I advised the authority to further study the cost of changing designs and to improve its negotiating position by delaying approval of foundation work, until they agreed upon both a building and a price," he said.

The steamship authority voted to accept the Inspector General's advice and eventually negotiated a lower price, saving $166,000.

"In addition to my advice to delay pouring the foundation for a terminal building on Nantucket," Barresi added, "I recommended to the Steamship Authority that it initiate civil proceedings for the potential recovery of more than $1 million."



Joseph Barresi
Massachusetts Inspector General

He explained, "This recommendation was based on an investigation which had revealed the contractor on the Nantucket pier project had over-billed for fill, and had delivered a lesser-quality fill than the contract prescribed."

Barresi recalled a similar case.

"In 1982," he said, "my office discovered the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) intended to replace the General Lawrence Bridge in Medford with a concrete arch bridge, totally inappropriate for the site.

"The bridge," he explained, "estimated to cost $15 million, was modeled after a Czechoslovakian bridge spanning a 138-foot gorge. The required clearance in Medford was only 16 feet.

"There was no other bridge in the U.S. similar to the proposed design," he added. "Pursuant to my recommendations, the new MDC commissioner re-evaluated the project and cancelled the original design, in favor of a simpler $8.6 million design."

On a referral from Barresi's office, the state filed suit against Somerville Engineering Inc. for negligent design, deceit, breach of contract, negligent misrepresentation and filing false claims with respect to their design.

The owner of Somerville Engineering Inc. was not pleased with Barresi's recommendations.

"He's now sueing me for $750,000 for violating his civil rights," Barresi told members of the chamber, "and he's sueing me as an individual, not as Inspector General, for acts I performed while Inspector General.

He quipped, "So, after this meeting I'll be taking up a collection." The room rippled with laughter.

Barresi said the same man printed and distributed at his office building, fliers contrasting him with Abraham Lincoln and George Washington.

'Abe Lincoln stood for honest government," he quoted; "the Inspector General is a cowardly jackal."

Barresi commented, "I guess it comes with the territory."

Despite such threats, Barresi pushed forward his fight against corruption in government procurement programs.

He proposed an "Omnibus Construction Reform Bill" to the state legislature, which he said "would give everyone an equal shot at getting public business."

Barresi said he hopes the bill will soon be passed into law.

Perhaps the Inspector General's biggest coup came in 1985. A three-year investigation into municipal banking practices revealed a flood of corruption.

"I found that municipal treasurers, in a single year, wasted as much as $11 million through no-bid contracts, unwritten agreements and questionable management practices," he said.

"The widespread leaving of excessive amounts of cash in bank accounts which paid little or no interest, an estimated $6 million was wasted," he added, "in non-interest bearing accounts."

Barresi said, his investigation also revealed, "Several large Boston-based banks wined and dined the municipal treasurers of nearly one-third of Massachusetts' cities and towns, an apparent violation of the commonwealth's conflict of interest laws.

"According to the bank records we examined," he commented, "24 treasurers each received more than an estimated $1,000 worth of gratuities, such as brunches, lunches, dinners, golf fees, theater and sports tickets and entertainment on trips to Bermuda and Florida."

Barresi said, "At my recommendation, the General Court immediately passed legislation that will insure state monitoring of excess balances in zero-interest accounts, and will require municipal treasurers to seek reasonable rates of return on cash not needed to pay immediate expenses."

The Inspector General estimated his office has expended about $4 million in its five years of crime fighting. Meanwhile, he said, his office's actions have saved and identified potential savings exceeding $55 million, roughly a $15 return on every dollar spent.

"Today," he said, "the office of the Inspector General is a strong, independent watchdog agency."

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Whither the Massachusetts Democrats?

For many months many luminaries, even including this flickering one, have extended themselves trying to explain the sorry state of the Massachusetts Republican Party. With the seventh consecutive biennial clean sweep of statewide offices by the Massachusetts Democrats (the last Republican victor was Edward Brooke in 1972) the succession of sorry explanations will no doubt continue in the coming weeks until drowned out by our greatest secular rite, Christmas.

Always good for a surprise if nothing else, I would like at this juncture to go against the flow and take a look at the Democrats in Massachusetts. Perversity aside, I want to focus on the Democrats because whereas the Republicans merely found new ways to stumble through the same old song and dance in 1986, I believe that the Democrats underwent something of a sea-change on November 4.

Stripped to its essence, the "sea-change" was the shift in Gov. Dukakis' role from a 20-year period of rise and maturation to that of "lame duck." That is not to say that the governor could not run and win again in 1990 -- he would certainly be the favorite should he decide to do so. But in a subtle way that I am certain will become obvious in due course, an era in Democratic Party history ended November 4; and understanding what ended will help us understand the era that has begun.

To be more specific, the era that ended began in September, 1978, when Gov. Dukakis was upset by the then conservative Democrat Edward J. King. That upset was not only a searing loss for Mike Dukakis, it produced something of an identity crisis for Democratic liberals generally. An entire generation that had come of age during the volatile years of the Kennedy Administration, the civil rights movement, and the Viet Nam War, found that they, with the governor they had often scorned, were on the outside looking in.

The "sea-change," then, that the 1978 Democratic Primary effected, was the discovery, both by Mike Dukakis and by his heretofore somewhat disloyal liberal constituency, that on the whole they liked being in power better than they liked being out of power. Compromizes were made on both sides. Dukakis moved around the state between 1980 and 1982 and ate public crow before so many liberal groups that I sometimes wondered why such a whole and stable private person even bothered. Liberal activists for their part seldom admitted error, but they did moderate their behavior, they deigned to accept his apology, and they agreed to a modus vivendi that included a commitment to political loyalty.

The result was the much ballyhooed, much mocked, but stunningly successful "Dukakis Coalition." It has been a coalition in the true sense that groups with different philosophies and interests have united around what they see as their common interest of electing a governor committed to furthering significant parts of their respective individual interests.

Dukakis for his part became a spender in his second term. In his first term he threw his liberal backers a few ideological crumbs such as his signature on a document rehabilitating Sacco and Vanzetti. That wasn't enough, he found. He found he had to support public programs liberals believe in, and in his second term he has.

Dukakis has often annoyed his allies in his second term as he did in his first; but he has kept his commitment to hear their advice, and they have kept theirs to support him politically. But with Dukakis' election to a third term on November 4, the dynamic that has motored the coalition since September, 1978, has changed. Dukakis will increasingly be seen as an obstacle, not a facilitator. Why? Ambition!

A lot of people would like to be governor, and Mike Dukakis is now in their way. An incomplete list would include Sec. of State Michael Connolly, Sen. Gerard D'Amico, Cong. Brian Donnelly, Auditor John Finnegan, Mayor Ray Flynn, Sen. Bill Golden, Sec. Phil Johnston, Cong. Ed Markey, Lt. Gov.-elect Evelyn Murphy, former Sen. Sam Rotondi, Atty. Gen.-elect Jim Shannon and even a couple of political blasts from the past named Frank Bellotti and Kevin White.

Most of the above, in turn, hold positions that other younger, less well-known men and women covet. There is therefore a common interest among a wide range of office holders and activists that Mike Dukakis not run for reelection in 1990. If he runs for President in 1988 this crowd will retain its loyalty to him. But if he does not, and if he looks like a candidate for a fourth term in 1990, we can expect the fractiousness of his first term to arise again in his third.

I believe that some fracturing of the Dukakis Coalition would be healthy for the Democratic Party. If this Party, which is full of able men and women in their thirties and forties, has an Achilles heel beyond a liberal ideology that may or may not be in fashion in 1990, it is that during the second Dukakis term the Party has not acquired many active members in their twenties. If you didn't pay your dues in the sixties and seventies, the Dukakis-dominated ward and town Democratic committees, which form the basis of the active Party, have been practically-speaking, closed. The machinery of the Republican Party, by contrast and by dint of the Republicans' many miscues, is probably today more open to the bright young man or women who will be elected governor in 2006 than the Democratic machinery.

In the shorter run, should Dukakis move up (in 1989) or out (in 1991), one wonders if there is anyone on the horizon who could pick up the gonfalon and lead the naturally rivalrous and motley crew we call the "Dukakis Coalition" in 1990. Such a leader would have to provide an umbrella big enough to cover business and labor, consumers and taxpayers, social service advocates and (perhaps the most influential pressure group of them all) professional politicians. Dukakis has managed to do this in his second term, and whether one likes his policies or no, one must concede that it has been a virtuoso performance.

In all likelihood the Dukakis coalition will disintegrate as issues change, its members age, and its raison d'etre is forgotten. But surely there will be many ambitious candidates who will fancy themselves capable of keeping the old gang together. At this juncture I only see one I'd bet could pull it off: Congressman Barney Frank.

Art Association showcase Nov. 21, 22

A special feature of the Duxbury Art Association's 1986 Craft Showcase, to be held on Nov. 21 (6-9 p.m.) and Nov. 22 (10-4 p.m) at the Old Town Hall and First Parish Church in Duxbury, will be the work of 9 craftspeople chosen to exhibit by special invitation. These artisans were chosen for their excellence and originality in design and craftsmanship.

Featured this year will be two potters; Debbie Mason of Duxbury and Judy Rossman of Scituate.

Debbie, a former teacher and director of the art department at the Cambridge School in Weston and currently an instructor for the Duxbury Art Association, will display functional stoneware and porcelain.

Judy Rossman, whose work has won numerous awards in DAA-sponsored shows and in exhibits throughout the South Shore, will exhibit handbuilt functional and decorative pottery.

The work of Duxbury crafters Jo Fox Hanlon, Gina Pleasants and Bradford and Virginia Jenkins will also be featured.

Jo's line of hand-sewn luxury items is sold to exclusive specialty stores around the country. She uses the finest European flowers, laces, fabrics and fragrances to create a variety of items including champagne wraps, sachets, lingerie cases and more.

Gina Pleasants' original and beautifully crafted baskets are well known throughout the South Shore. She will display baskets in a wide variety of sizes and colors.

Bradford and Virginia Jenkins will exhibit beautifully hand-painted and hand-carved decoys.

Other featured artisans will include bookbinder Catherine Badot-Costello, weaver Penelope Walker, dollmaker Sonia Petros and Joanne Denietolis of Plymouth, designer of antique reproduction fabric items.

Over 20 other craftspeople will be exhibiting their fine handcrafts in the show. A members' food table will also be a highlight of this annual event. Admission to the show is 50 cents for adults and free for children under 12.

For further information call the DAA at 837-8337.

Booklet on radon

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health's (DPH) Radiation Control Program has announced the availability of an informational booklet and fact sheet on radon, a naturally occurring radioactive gas produced in the ground through normal decay of uranium and radium.

The booklet, "A Citizen's Guide to Radon," and the public fact sheet are available free to the public and explain what radon is, where it is commonly found, what are its known hazards and what to do if you suspect its presence.

Following test results in the late 1970's in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, revealing elevated levels of radon gas along the rock formation known as the Reading Prong, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (E.P.A.) advised states with similar geologic formations of the possibility that homes with elevated radon levels might be found. The results of limited surveys in Massachusetts to date have shown much lower levels of radon than those found in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The informational booklets, fact sheets, names of radon detection testing companies, and further interpretation of test results may be obtained from DPH's Radiation Control Program, 150 Tremont Street, Boston, MA 02111, (617) 727-6214.

Pumpkin cheese cake ideal for holiday feast

Homemade pie is traditional for Thanksgiving dinner, with pumpkin and mince the favorites and apple and squash close behind, but those who savored Phyllis Burns' cheese cake will have no pangs when passing up the pie that sometimes seems a little overwhelming after gorging on turkey and all the "fixin's." This is a recipe from Phyll's nephew, Roger Delong, who is a chef. There's no pastry to make, or add to one's calorie count for the day and is so smooth and delectable that it will rate raves, as it did from our garden club members.

Pumpkin Cheese Cake

(serves appox. 12-15)

Butter 9 or 10" springform pan and dust with gingersnap crumbs.
Soften and beat well 2 pounds cream cheese. (4 8oz. pkgs.)
Add and beat well: 1 1/2 c. sugar
1/3 c. flour
1 T. cinnamon
1 tsp. ea. allspice & nutmeg
1/2 tsp. ea. ginger & ground cloves pinch of salt
6 eggs
Fold in 2 c. pureed pumpkin.
Bake in 325 oven for 1 hour and 30 min., or until knife inserted in center comes out clean.
Turn off heat, open oven door and let stand in oven for half an hour.
Remove from oven and let cool in pan.
Remove springform and chill, loosely covered for 2 hours, or overnight.
Top with whipped cream, if desired.

Every family has its favorite holiday traditions, all designed to create memories that will linger down through the years. There's the preparation of the stuffing, the mincement, the fragrance of the roasting bird and treats to savor or give away. Logs glowing in the fireplace before dinner, with drinks and nibbles is a favorite at our house and I look forward to trying out this appetizer sent to us in a package of promotional material from the Dairy Industry Association.

Confetti Cheddar Log

1 pkg, (3 oz.) cream cheese, softened
2 c. (8 oz.) shredded cheddar cheese
1/4 c. pitted chopped ripe olives
2 T. chopped pimiento, drained
2 T. chopped green pepper
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Chopped slivered almonds
Beat cream cheese 'til fluffy. Beat in cheddar. Stir in remaining ingredients and blend well. Shape into roll on waxed paper. Coat with almonds. Cover and chill to allow flavors to blend. Let stand at room temperature approx. 30 min. before serving with assorted crackers.

It's also getting to be traditional for food columnists to warn of the dire results sure to occur by stuffing the turkey in advance. So, just to be sure we do not end up with tummy aches or worse, the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture advises preparing the stuffing a day ahead and refrigerating it until it's time to put it in the cavity. Absolutely taboo is the method of roasting a turkey at 250 degrees overnight; and the method of partly cooking a turkey one day and finishing it the next is not recommended for the same reason: bacteria will flourish. It is also courting danger to cook turkeys in paper bags, as chemicals used to make the bags may make the turkey unfit for consumption. So, if a 25-pound turkey is needed and no one is willing to get up at 5 a.m. to roast the bird for a 1 p.m. dinner, it makes more sense to have two 12-pound birds. And with left-over turkey-time just around the corner, Penelope Jones is sharing this recipe she calls simply:

Hot Brown

2 slices toast
2 or 3 thin slices turkey or chicken
2 thin slices ham, optional
2 crisp slices bacon
1 can cheddar cheese soup
Arrange turkey and ham on toast and pour on enough heated soup (thin with a bit of milk if needed) to cover. Top with bacon slices and slip under broiler until brown and bubbly.
Serves one.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Madam Zolar's forecast from the heavens

I know you're all getting ready for Thanksgiving, but it has once again occurred to me that some of you may not know what to be grateful for. So I schlepped on over to Madam Zolar's chic little ashram on Third Cliff. I crossed her palm with silver and she gave me the following advice for all you astrophillac givers of thanks.

Aries (March 21 - April 20): Since last November you have managed to offend almost everyone you know. Your pushy, domineering ways have alienated friends, acquaintances and relatives alike. Be thankful that no one has cleaned your clock.

Taurus (April 21 - May 21): Your innate greed has placed you on the brink of catastrophy. Give thanks that so far you have escaped an IRS audit. You should enjoy this happy condition while you still can, as by this time next year things may have changed drastically.

Gemini (May 22 - June 21): During the past twelve months you have managed to confuse everyone who knows you. Because of your constantly shifting viewpoints, no one is certain whether you want to be a law-maker or a law-breaker, a doctor or a patient. If they knew what you are really up to, you would be in deep trouble. Be very thankful.

Cancer (June 22 - July 23): Cancerians have so much to be thankful for this year. Be thankful for a plentiful harvest. Be thankful for a comfortable mattress. Be thankful that new fashions feature a "relaxed" waistline, effectively concealing most of your dietary disasters.

Leo (July 24 - August 23): Leos and Leonesses should be very thankful that scientists have not yet discovered the center of the universe. You would be crushed to find that you are not it.

Virgo (August 24 - September 23): Since last November you have told 5,876 people what they are doing wrong. If you can read this, be very grateful. It means that to date no one has blackened both your eyes. If you had to have someone read it to you, be very, very grateful. It means you still have one person who's speaking to you.

Libra (September 24 - October 23): Be thankful for your grace, charm and diplomacy, and hope that they will continue to keep you one step ahead of the vice squad.

Scorpio (October 24 - November 22): Be thankful that you are beginning to see through grace, charm and diplomacy. It will make your job on the vice squad so much easier.

Sagittarius (November 23 - December 21): You have spent the past 12 months amid your customary clutter. Be thankful. Not only do you feel most comfortable when surrounded by mess and disorganization, the aforementioned hodgepodge of possessions tends to deter even the most conscientious law enforcement official who may be searching for contraband. With a little luck you may retain your liberty for another year.

Capricorn (December 22 - January 20): When you were a child you wanted to grow up and be a pirate. Today you are a success in business. Be thankful. Very few people actually realize the ambitions of their youth.

Aquarius (January 21 - February 19): During the past twelve months all who know you have agreed that you are a zany, irresponsible buffoon, and have unanimously decided to ignore anything you may say or do. Don't forget to thank them.

Pisces (February 20 - March 20): Dear, gentle Pisces, rejoice and be thankful. You will spend the week before Thanksgiving preparing a feast beyond description for all your friends and relatives. On Thanksgiving morning you will learn that the brand of turkey you purchased has been recalled by the Pure Food and Drug people who have persnicketty notions about things like viruses. You and your guests will spend the holiday trying to decide whether to dine on sardines or risk having to have your stomachs pumped out. In either case you will cry a great deal - just the sort of holiday you most enjoy.

Note to all signs: Ignore anything you have been told by a sun sign astrologer who writes for a local newspaper. With the possible exception of a political candidate who proposes the colonization of Mars and Jupiter, we all agree that with all its problems this is the best of all possible worlds. At least none of us are in a hurry to leave it. Be thankful.

We are serious cash buyers of gold, silver & platinum; both old & new diamonds, estate & antique jewelry, sterling flatware, gold filled items, industrial precious metals, dental gold, old & rare coins, tokens & medals, postcards & collectables. Our evaluation & gold & silver assay tests are free & at no obligation while you wait. We will meet or beat any legitimate offer to buy published locally, nationally, or internationally. Many local dealers claim to be the "highest buyers" so shop around & see us last. We may be a little further away but the few extra miles are worth the effort. We also exchange all denominations of foreign currency & coin on the spot. Banks send their customers to us for just that purpose. We have the most competitive prices on new jewelry in New England & also do expert jewelry repair & appraisals.

"THANK YOU St. Jude for prayers answered." R.F. (11/19)

PRAYER THROUGH APPLICATION OF HOLY SPIRIT — Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I may attain my goal, you who give me the Divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you, even and in spite of all material illusion. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine.

The person must say this prayer for 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the favor requested will be granted even if it may appear difficult. This prayer must be published immediately after the favor is granted without mentioning the favor. Only your initials should appear at the bottom. J.B. (11/19)

Foster families for teenagers needed

Jennifer is an intelligent, friendly and attractive 17 year old white female. She studies culinary arts in a vocational high school. Jennifer is an articulate, responsible and cooperative young woman with serious goals for the future. She plans to complete her high school education and move on to college. However, family conflict, illness, financial hardship and stress sidetrack Jennifer's ability to accomplish these goals. At the moment, Jennifer lives at home and gets stuck in an angry and adversarial relationship with her parents. Both Jennifer and her family need a break from each other for the next year.

Jennifer will benefit from the space and neutral environment a foster home can provide. Foster parents will help Jennifer to pursue her dreams. Jennifer will respond to positive role models in her life. Jennifer will try hard to please and meet a foster family's expectations, but they must be fair and reasonable ones. In return, Jennifer will require attention, guidance and direction from sensitive and supportive adults.

Jennifer will be an asset to any family. She is able to make attachments and commitments to others. Jennifer has begun to move beyond past experiences with drugs and alcohol. She likes to dance, listen to music and spend time with friends. Jennifer enjoys and relates well to younger children. Jennifer is ready to gain greater control over her young life. A foster family will help Jennifer prepare for a future life of independence, educational growth, and responsibility.

If you have room in your home and your heart for a teenager like Jennifer, please call Don Moskowitz of DARE Family Services at 628-3696. Professional training and support together with medical coverage and financial reimbursement are available.

United Way donates $50,000 to American Red Cross

The United Way of Massachusetts Bay recently approved a grant of $50,000 to the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay's Emergency Disaster Relief Fund. The grant represents approximately 15 percent of the chapter's fundraising goal of $322,758 and will be used to replenish national disaster reserves.

A United Way affiliated agency, the Red Cross assists disaster victims in eastern Massachusetts by providing food, clothing, emergency medical aid, household furnishings, temporary home repairs, and occupational supplies.

Nationally, citizens have experienced an unprecedented number of hurricanes, floods, droughts, earthquakes, and tornadoes over the past few years, resulting in heavily depleted disaster reserve supplies. Experts predict that the unusual weather patterns responsible for these will continue.

Annually, the American Red Cross responds to an average of 43,000 disasters. These include major disasters as well as thousands of individual family fires, transportation accidents, and tragedies caused by chemical spills and environmental pollution.

In the Massachusetts Bay area, the Red Cross spent nearly $2 million helping 5,400 families recover from the Blizzard of 1978. More recently, the Red Cross spent $88,000 helping the citizens of Lynn who were displaced by the Great Lynn Fire of 1981. During these two disasters, contributions for relief came from all over the country.

Harold Hestnes, senior partner at Hale & Dorr, and United Way's professional division chairman, led the efforts to solicit local corporations and foundations.

The American Red Cross is one of 190 agencies supported by United Way of Massachusetts Bay, which is currently campaigning to raise $43.3 million.

Free lodging guides

Travelers planning winter weekend getaways can choose from an array of more than 250 Massachusetts lodging packages in a new publication available from the Massachusetts Division of Tourism.

The booklet includes a transportation section and a calendar of weekend events that features festivals, sporting and cultural events and exhibitions.

For a free brochure, call toll-free: 1-800-892-MASS, or write: Weekend Spirit, Massachusetts Division of Tourism, 100 Cambridge Street, Boston, MA 02202

Two more lawsuits added to town's case load

Donald Staszko, who last year proposed to build a super Stop and Shop along Rte. 3A, is fighting the town in court on two separate complaints.

One complaint alleges the town's site plan review bylaw is defective, and requests the court to order it invalid.

Plans to construct the store were filed in August, 1985 by Staszko and his wife, Barbara O'Pray, trustees of Cohasset Development Trust. Those plans were rejected by the planning board in November, 1985. In its decision, the board outlined its concerns with increased traffic, and the reconfigurations proposed for Rte. 3A to accomodate the flow of traffic. The planning board also noted that the proposed entrance and exit widths were in violation of Cohasset's zoning bylaw.

In July, Staszko filed a complaint in Norfolk County Superior Court against the planning board's rejection of his plans.The complaint was refiled in the Norfolk County Land Court and a hearing was scheduled for this month. The hearing has since been rescheduled. In that case, Cohasset Development Trust has appealed the November, 1985 planning board decision against the store plans, saying the board failed to "promulgate any rules and regulations for the site plan review"

By the board's failure to follow the site plan regulations, Staszko alleged he was deprived of the regulatory process which in turn deprives he "and all other applicants of the ability to be treated uniformly in accordance with previously determined and ascertainable standards.

The lawsuit alleges that "as a result of the Local sports hero moves from town

The board of health won't have Walt Sweeney to kick around anymore.

That's the sentiment borne by Sweeney and his wife, Nancy, as they head back to California. With finances depleted and his dreams defeated, the Cohasset native will leave town this week.

He's accepted employment in San Diego, where their new home awaits. Sweeney and his wife will turn their back on Cohasset, firing one parting shot.

After a final rejection issued this week by the health board on plans to rebuild his parents' Bow Street home, Sweeney will be filing a lawsuit against the town.

"I've retained the Boston firm of Hill and Barlow and we're going after them," he said this week. "I'm suing the board of health for depriving me of my Constitutional right to live on my native soil."

The Sweeneys have fought for two years to rebuild the family's homestead at 21 Bow St. The home was 200 years old at the time it was destroyed by a fire in 1972. It included four bedrooms and two bathrooms. The current plans were to build a two-bedroom, one bathroom home on the site.

In order to build on the non conforming site, the Sweeneys needed approval from the health board.

Cohasset women help homeless

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The homeless women of Rosie's Place in Boston have something for which to be thankful this year.

On the first Tuesday of every month, a group of Cohasset women prepare a special meal for Rosie's destitute guests.

This volunteer service began four years ago when Barbara Donahue decided to do something for the homeless at Christmas time.

"I happened to go in there one Christmas time, just to bring some stuff in," she recalled. "There was another girl from Cohasset in there and I didn't know her that well, but it began there.

"They were looking for a 'caterer' to cover one night per month," she explained, "so we decided we would take the first Tuesday of every month."

Donahue put notices in the parish bulletins of all the churches in Cohasset.

"We had a big meeting at my house," she said, "and it was overwhelming. We probably had 75 to 80 people there that night."

Sunday is set for Santa

It may not be snowing, and it may be a bit early, but White Christmas will be arriving in Cohasset this week.

Sunday, Nov. 30, beginning at 11 a.m., the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will be presenting its annual holiday festivities throughout the town.

Santa Claus will arrive in his usual dramatic fashion aboard a helicoptor at Cushing Plaza at 11 that morning.

He will greet the children of the South Shore in the parking lot at Cushing Plaza for conversations and photographs. Lollipops, balloons, and Santa's elves will be at the plaza alongside Santa.

Residents are advised to get there early, as Santa's arrival is always a well-attended event. Hundreds of families make it a traditional part of their holiday preparations.

From Cushing Plaza, Santa will travel aboard an official Cohasset fire truck to the Tedeschi Plaza across Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Again, he will stop a while for photographs with the anxious children there.

Sunday's star will be taken, via fire truck, from Tedeschi Plaza to the Cohasset Common for an afternoon of fun and activities. While at the Common, Santa will be available for more photographs.

Members of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce gather to decorate the downtown store fronts in time for Sunday's festivities.

We almost had it all . . .

Cohasset's soccer squad was ambushed by Bromfield High School of Harvard in the Division 3 state championship, 3-2 in overtime.

The Central/Western Mass. champions jumped to an early 2-0 lead and kept the Skippers scoreless until just 10 minutes remained in the contest.

Ned Chase put Cohasset on the scoreboard with a long shot.

"It looked like they were playing in slow motion," Skipper Coach Dan Magner said of the shot. "He shot it from 45 yards out and it bounced up and over the goalie's head and went in."

With four minutes left in the game, Cohasset tied the score.

Jim Reidy got the ball and dribbled around three Bromfield defenders. He passed the ball to Ian Smart who fired a rocket of a shot into the right hand corner of the net from 24 yards out.

Greg Butler, Bromfield's center-halfback fired the winning goal into the Cohasset net two minutes into the first overtime period.

"Everything he did was magic," Magner said of Cohasset's week . . .

Preliminary condo review

The planning board last week reviewed preliminary plans presented by developer Charles Wills to construct 28 condominiums off Lambert's Lane.

The review was an informal, preliminary discussion of the proposal which was filed with the town last week. The planning board must schedule a full, formal public hearing on the site plan.

The development, called Rock Rimmon, would include five or six units per cluster in a semi-circular road to be built off Lambert's Lane near the golf club.

The board's discussion last week centered on the amount of open land necessary for the development, in order to comply with the town's cluster zoning bylaw. The developer suggested implementing a "use easement" provision with each unit, in which individual owners could use the land according to his preference.

But board members noted that the easements could not be included in the open space requirement for cluster developments.

Although no purchase prices were d¡vulged at the preliminary meeting, planning board members Daniel Cotton and Patrick Plante asked the developer to include a few smaller, lower-priced units in the proposal.

Spensley parking plans

Geoffrey B. Spensley, president of Spensley Chevrolet, Inc., notified selectmen that they have not expanded their business. The lot adjacent to the car dealership is being used "merely to park cars on the lot next to us which we own," he stated in a letter to selectmen.

The company president added, "if this is in anyway a violation, then we certainly wish to comply with the existing regulation."

Building Inspector Donald Robbins said last week the car dealership has applied for a special permit to the zoning board of appeals.

Business expansion

Autohaus, Inc. has applied to the zoning board of appeals for permission to sell automobiles from the former Bergson's site on Rte. 3A.

According to Atty. Charles Humphreys, representing Autohaus owner Robert Guarino, a special permit is necessary in order to use that parking lot for the sale of vehicles. The car sales company is also requesting that selectmen amend its Class I license to include the expansion onto the Bergson property.

According to the attorney, "Autohaus will not use this area for the display and sale of motor vehicles until or unless all required approvals are granted. In the meantime," he stated, "Autohaus is parking cars on the site. They are not for display or sale, but rather are stored there. If any vehicle is to be shown to a customer, it is removed from this storage lot and brought to the sales lot by the salesman for showing to the customer."

Civil Service violation

Police Sgt. Richard Barrow notified selectmen they are in violation of state law because they have failed to post the Civil Service list.

According to Sgt. Barrow, "there has been no posting of the Civil Service list since Mark J. Lanza was employed by the Town of Cohasset as Executive Secretary, and the time frame prescribed by the law has expired."

Barrow said his letter, addressed Nov. 24 to the board, "is a formal request for your immediate conformation to this law. You, as 'appointing officers,' are in contempt of the law, subject to fines of up to $100."

According to the police sergeant, the board is in violation of state statute Ch. 31, Sec. 67.

Cedarledge litter problems

The residents of Cedarledge Village wrote to selectmen last week, outlining the recurring problems with trash blown onto their property from the adjacent landfill.

According to Melvin Waldfogel, president of the Cedarledge board of managers, the litter fence erected by the town this year has helped, but has failed to alleviate the problem.

"There is the further problem of trash falling on Cedar Street as vehicles proceed to the landfill with unsecured loads. . . We have plans for landscaping along Cedar Street and hope to see them implemented before winter sets in," he wrote. "However, the effort to beautify may prove futile if the street continues to serve as an adjunct to the landfill."

Planners not concerned with Staszko appeal planning board's failure to adopt such rules and regulations, said site plans review bylaw is vague and allows the Cohasset Planning Board overly broad discretion in denying and/or acting upon all applications before it."

The Superior Court complaint requests that the planning board's denial be annulled and the bylaw ruled invalid. Cohasset Development Trust also requested the court grant site plan approval to the Stop and Shop proposal and that the building inspector issue a permit for construction.

Planning board chairman L. Christine Bassett is not concerned about the future of the town's site plan bylaw. "I'm not worried about it. It's a valid bylaw and I'm confident the court will uphold it," she said.

"I can't imagine a court throwing out this bylaw. We're not the only community to have a site plan bylaw. I honestly doubt it will be removed," Bassett added, noting that in her memory, this is the first challenge to the town's site plan regulations.

Bassett explained that in the "unlikely" event a court ruled the bylaw invalid, the planning board would propose a new one at a special town meeting. That process, she said, would take about 35 days, in which time no major development plans would be likely to pass through the board's review process.

The chairman explained that a site plan is essentially the town's review of a specific site and the buildings proposed for construction on it. The planning board's jurisdiction is in the review of commercial construction or additions more than 200 square feet.

"We do not review residential dwellings, only in zoning areas for specific circumstances such as cluster developments. We review commercial entities in the highway business districts, the downtown area and the light industrial district," she explained.

The site plan bylaw allows the board "to measure the impact of a particular building on a site and measure its impact on abutting streets, and on traffic, and to ascertain if the use is in conformance with the bylaw and if it is generally harmonious with the town," she noted.

Many communities, Bassett said, including Sudbury, have implemented bylaws more stringent than Cohasset's. "In that town, for instance, every commercial building in town is subject to an extensive site plan review. We don't go through the review here unless the commercial building or addition is more than 200 square feet," she said.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that if the bylaw was overruled, the town may appeal the decision. During that appeal process, the court's decision stands in effect.

However, he noted, town meeting could move to develop and approve another site plan review bylaw. During the interim, Henderson said, the town's other bylaws pertaining to zoning would remain in effect.

Towns asked to financially support Coalition

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner Staff

Voters at their respective town meetings will be asked next spring to appropriate $1,000 toward the operational costs of the South Shore Coalition, according to Sen. William Golden of Weymouth.

"Will the $10,000 supply significant resources? No, it won't. The budget is six, eight, 10 times that.

"But this would be the first tangible commitment by the towns.

"It's time for the towns to show (the state) we are serious," said Golden, "and I think the (financial) commitment from the state will be more."

The coalition, which was formally organized slightly more than a year ago to address common problems and find regional solutions, is comprised of 10 communities — Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield, Duxbury, Hanover, Rockland and Weymouth.

Golden asked coalition members to present the appropriation request to their boards of selectmen and said he would be happy to speak to each board.

In addition, Golden said he would ask the Metropolitan Area Planning Council "to pony up some extra resources" and also request further funds from the state executive office of communities and development.

"A lot has been accomplished during the past year," said Golden, "without putting up a penny.

"It was a strong leap of faith by Secretary Amy Anthony of the state executive office of communities and development to provide the initial funds," he said.

"Addressing problems together such as solid waste, housing, coastal pollution and drinking water protection requires significant cooperation," he said.

The 10 communities first obtained an incentive aid grant which enabled the coalition to hire Jean Christensen, a planner for the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, as its director.

"That was the first time ever these towns had cooperated on a regional basis," noted Golden.

He pointed out the coalition had applied for and obtained a second grant, this time for water protection. That work is under way, he said.

Now, the coalition has formed a solid waste task force, and two state officials are working closely with the group, he said.

Golden said he and Christensen met recently with the state office of Coastal Zone Management and learned that CZM will very likely assign one of its planners to the coalition to work exclusively in this area.

"The coalition is a voluntary association, with towns participating to the extent they wish," he said.

"It's unique, but it still is a fragile experiment. The coalition has accomplished a lot, culminating in a regional conference last September."

He said the coalition and the conference have become models for other communities which have banded or are about to band together.

Other communities look to the coalition's first success attained earlier this year, Golden pointed out.

The towns presented one strong voice and battled the New England Telephone Company which planned to impose a new area code and could have divided the South Shore.

Joel Bard, acting executive director of MAPC, told the coalition members they could achieve other successes by working together.

He said he hopes the level of state funding can be increased in next year's state budget.

Presently, a group of towns can obtain a maximum of $50,000 in an incentive aid grant, while an individual town may obtain up to $35,000.

Hull selectman John Silva said the $1,000 request for the coalition next year was not unreasonable.

"My only concern is the perception is that we could be creating another planning bureaucracy with (requests) for contributions escalating over the years," he said.

Marshfield selectman James Finucane said an emphatic "yes" in support of the request for a $1,000 contribution for the coalition.

Norwell selectman Constance Hughes said that results will tell whether the time has been well spent at the coalition meetings.

And Marshfield planner Michael Almada echoed her thoughts. "It depends on what is accomplished. It could be $1,000 and may well be more if it is merited," he said.

Janet Humphrey, who divides her time between Hanover and Hanson as a town planner for both communities, offered her services to the coalition as a resource to Christensen.

"As more planners come to the South Shore, we can provide backup to Jean," Humphrey said.

Cohasset's Dan Cotton said he considered the $1,000 request "as venture capital. Let's see what happens in two or three years."

Golden pointed out that Norwell already had made a far greater contribution than $1,000 in its in-kind services by providing space within Norwell town hall for the coalition's office.

Gjesteby attends MAPC meeting

Martha K. Gjesteby, the MAPC representative for Cohasset and MAPC treasurer, attended that agency's Fall Council Meeting Oct. 29, at Regis College.

The focus of the meeting was the growth of voluntary subregional organization (such as the South Shore Coalition), and their implications for both local and regional planning initiatives.

Guest speakers State Representative David Magnani (D-Framingham); Middlesex News Publisher James Hopson; and Weston's Chairman of the Board of Selectmen Jean Thurston used the experiences of the MetroWest Growth Management Committee as the model to highlight several strengths and weaknesses of subregional planning.

Their advice to other subregional planning groups including the South Shore Coalition, was to keep channels of communication open; provide opportunity for public participation; and seek other sources in addition to state funding for transportation, development and other land use planning.

Gjesteby also participated in the discussion proposing legislation requiring regional review of developments of regional impacts. No consensus was reached regarding the contents of this piece of legislation; the issue was forwarded to the Executive Committee for further discussion and policy formation.

Landfill closed Nov. 27

The Cedar Street municipal landfill will be closed Thursday, Nov. 27 for the Thanksgiving holiday.

The health board also reminds residents that the deposition of autombile parts is prohibited at the landfill. This not only includes tires, but any portion of the frame, body or mechanical parts of any vehicle. As in the past, the board appreciates your cooperation in observing compliance with the Regulations for Resident Hauler Use of the Cedar Street Landfill. Sweeney takes town to court

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Walter Sweeney vowed Monday to take the board of health to court, after members refused to reverse their denial of his plans to rebuild his family homestead.

After fighting for two years to get the board's approval to rebuild a septic system at 21 Bow Street, Sweeney's temper flared.

"You're stealing my land from me," he said. "You're denying me my constitutional right to live on my native soil."

Sweeney proposes to build a two-bedroom, one-bathroom house on the site of his ancestral home, a four-bedroom, two-bathroom structure, which stood on the site for more than 200 years, until a fire destroyed it in 1969.

Sweeney and his representative from Perkins Engineering disputed the findings of town engineer John Modzlewski.

Among the items of "new information" Sweeney submitted, was a proposal to define the lot by the wetlands vegetation line, rather than the eight-foot contour.

The eight-foot elevation line, was the highest recorded high tide. However, an average high tide reaches only 4.83 feet above sea level, they said.

Dr. Michael Bliss, chairman of the health board queried, "Is it possible to determine the wetlands vegetation line?"

They responded, "Where the line is in relation to the eight-foot contour, we don't know. But the 4.83 mark, which is regularly associated with wet terrain, is 100 feet from the eight-foot contour line."

The board received a visit September 8, from Deputy Commissioner Thomas McLaughlin of the state Department of Envirionmental Quality Engineering.

At that meeting, McLaughlin told the board, from the state's standpoint, "there is no reason why a septic system cannot be built there."

While the state standard for setback from wetlands is 50 feet, the town requires a setback of 75 feet. Because Sweeney's proposed system was marked 50 feet from the wetlands, the board of health denied it.

The board also disagreed with a proposal for a retaining wall, and said there must be a four-foot depth of naturally occurring previous soil to meet Title Five requirements.

Charles DeSantis, chairman of the sewer commission, backed Sweeney's septic system plans.

He argued, the strict enforcement of Title 5 should be applied to new construction, but Sweeney's project should be considered an upgrading of the property, because Sweeney had a house there prior to May 15, 1978, when Title 5 went into effect.

Dr. John Burns, a member of the health board commented, Title 5 requirements can be waived for hardship.

Last year, the board granted the Sweeneys a manifest injustice, which allowed him to apply to rebuild the septic system, even though it had been abandoned for more than three years.

Bliss said, "There were two variances, but we only waived one, the manifest injustice. We did not waive the stipulation that the environment be adequately maintained."

"The purpose of this board is to serve the people of Cohasset," DeSantis prodded. "If you deprive a native son of his ancestral home, you would not be serving the people of Cohasset, you'd be abusing them."

Sweeney added, "We want to know why you're dong this. Let's just clear all the bull* out of here."

"We're concerned about the environment," board member Sherry Becker protested.

Bliss taunted DeSantis, "Why don't you send a sewer line down there? Then, there would be no problem."

"Fine," DeSantis retorted, "give me $60 million and I'll sewer the whole bloody town."

When it became apparent the two sides were far from agreement, Sweeney stood up and said, "I'll see you in court and my attorney, Mr. Bud Corkin will call you."

He added with disgust, "This is like having open-heart surgery and going before hairdressers for an opinion." And he stormed out of the room.

DeSantis commented, "I'm ashamed for the town of how you've treated Walter Sweeney. I'm disgusted; this is a disgrace to the town of Cohasset."

He turned to Bliss and said, "Mike, I hope this is your last year in office."

Staszko appeals decision

The second complaint was filed in Norfolk County Superior Court. It cited several reasons why the planning board's decision was unfair and discriminatory. It requests that the board's decision be annulled and the site plan approval be granted.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said any decision rendered by the court may be appealed, which is a six to 12-month period. During that appeal period, no current or previous site plans presented to the planning board would be affected.

Since the plans were filed last year, Cohasset Development Trust has obtained all the necessary permits for construction. A final order of conditions was issued by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE). The plans have received approval from the town's conservation commission and the board of health. An environmental impact report received approval along with water quality certification. The Army Corps of Engineers has issued approval to construct in the wetlands, and the state Department of Public Works in August approved curb cuts and the reconstruction design of the upper King Street intersection.

Society installs new president

The Cohasset Historical Society recently held its 1986 Annual Meeting and has selected a new president to succeed the retiring Mrs. Constance W. Parker, who served as president of the Society for almost 13 years.

Also elected at the meeting were other officers and members of the Society's Board of Directors. Replacing the retiring and well know Connie Parker as president is Charles G. Fink, who for some 15 years served the town as chairman of the Cohasset Harbor Study Committee. In elections held at the Annual Meeting, David Chittim was chosen as first vice president, Noel A. Ripley as second vice president, Robert B. James as treasurer, and David H. Wadsworth as secretary. New members of the Society's Board of Directors are J. Arnold Nickerson, Mary Jane McArthur, and Liz Crosby, all of Cohasset. Retiring President Parker has been elected as President Emeritus of the Society, and retiring Director Edward E. Tower has been elected as honorary director.

John Mullett, membership chairman of the Society, announced the Society's 1987 membership drive will begin soon. Anyone wishing to become a first-time Society member can call the Society at 383-6930 for further information.

At the Annual Meeting, some 116 persons, both members and guests, enjoyed a dinner catered by Jessica, and heard a fascinating talk about early automobiles. Featured speaker was Eugene Baril, retired officer of the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles who serves as the official Historian of the Registry.

Retiring Society President Parker received special citations from the Massachusetts House of Representatives and Senate, sponsored by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Senator William Golden, and one from Governor Michael Dukakis, as well as honors from the members of the Historical Society itself.

Santa arrives this Sunday

The Common will be transformed into a North Pole playground with rides and activities abounding.

Christmas caroling will begin that afternoon with the high school chorus. There will also be a Carillon Concert from St. Stephen's Church.

At 4 p.m., as dusk settles on our town, the Common and downtown merchants will officially signal Cohasset's White Christmas. Trees lining the Common and store fronts throughout the downtown will be outlined with the traditional white Christmas lights.

The downtown merchants will open their shops Sunday throughout the White Christmas hours. Many of the local shopkeepers will provide busy Christmas shoppers with refreshments as they browse through the local stores.

It is a day for children and families. White Christmas, a tradition now in its third year, is a time to start our Yuletide celebration.

More well tests for landfill

The board of health Monday decided to seek expanded testing of wells at Cohasset Heights Ltd., a private landfill on Crocker Lane.

After receiving a set of test results from GHR Engineering, the board found the data "uninterpretable."

Dr. Michael Bliss, chairman of the health board noted, previous reports indicated only the presence of benzene.

Now, he said, all organics are showing.

Bliss questioned the engineering firm's test methodology, saying GHR should have graphed the results from more than six of the 28 wells at the site.

The board will ask GHR to graph the results from all wells, so it can get a clearer picture of trends at Cohasset Heights.

Following the advice of their engineers at Camp Dresser and McKee, the board will also instruct GHR to test for nitrogen and sulfates.

Bliss added, "Inorganics, such as calcium and sodium; they say those have no impact. I'm not satisfied with such a blithe dismissal."

He explained high sodium content at the wells might indicate a problem at nearby Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply, which could impact people on low-sodium diets.

The next test results are due January 15. In the meantime, the board will look into having Camp Dresser and McKee take half of each GHR sample to double check the results.

According to health officer Dr. Joseph Godzik, Cohasset Heights may exhaust Area 3 of its four areas by the spring of 1987.

He explained, intake at the landfill is up, although they haven't passed the monthly limit of 3,000 tons, which would trigger a study by the Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency.

The board expressed concern at the landfill's bid for reclassification.

☐ Carla Lucas makes the news this week. It's basketball time again for Carla and Wheaton College. Wheaton played in the Pine Manor Basketball Tournament and won, and Carla earned the Most Valuable Player Award! Two years ago she was playing for CHS, does that seem possible? Each year she gets better and better. Continue your good work, Carla.

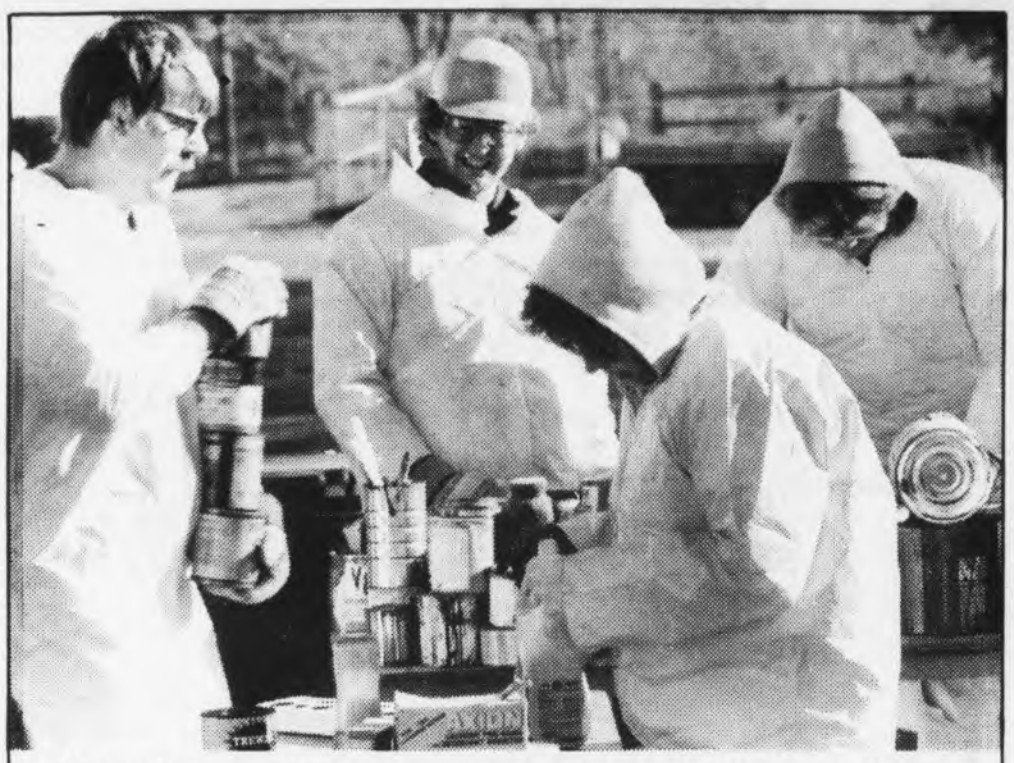
☐ Here's hoping that Joanne Egan gets better real soon, just remember Joanne that you can't keep a grand lady like yourself down for long!

☐ Apologies go to Amanda Sweeney this week. It seems her name was left off when the Cast members of Alice in Wonderland were listed. Amanda does a fine job in every performance she is in, as she did this past weekend. Sorry about that, Amanda!

☐ Hurray for Michelle Shea, who graduates from the University of New Hampshire next month. Michelle will receive her BA in Political Science and her minor in Dancing. She plans on going to Washington, D.C. after graduation, and we're sure she'll find just the job she wants without any trouble. If her BA doesn't get 'em, that wonderful smile will!

☐ It was nice to see Scott and Nanette Fone in town for the Thanksgiving feast...they're looking grand and enjoying the Chicago life!

☐ The drawing was held for the VFW Post 9146 for their building fund. The prizes were a 19" color television, won by Kevin O'Donnell of Scituate; a 15-pound fresh turkey, won by Joseph Perroncello. The fund is underway, thanks to all of you that purchased raffle tickets! Congrats to the winners.



Hazardous waste disposal workers Rick Ricci (L) and Greg Fitzgerald (R) sorted through Himgham's hazardous waste collected last Saturday. Cohasset and Hingham sponsored a combined household hazardous waste collection day.

☐ Two Deer Hill students, both in fifth grade open space, are in the news this week...Johanna Horn and Karla Kennedy will be appearing in the Christmas Ballet on Dec. 6 put on by the Museum of Science; and , on Dec. 16 they will be dancing as soldiers in the Nutcracker, everyone's favorite Christmas ballet. Break a leg, girls!

☐ The Gridiron Club had a busy day last Saturday, and an extremely successful one!. They began by holding a breakfast for the football players at the Red Lion Inn, where the food as abundant and delicious, and the boys had the privilege of hearing John Hannah speak. Everyone was impressed by how great he looked...those present had the honor of being with two great football players, as Walt Sweeney was a guest also! Here's betting a few of the players listening will be back someday, talking about their own pro careers!. Saturday night the Club hosted a dinner dance at Cohasset Gold Club, and they out did themselves as usual. The dancing was great, the food delicious, the raffle a grand one, and a super time was had by all.

☐ That's the news for this week...be sure to let us know all about your Thanksgiving, who was home, what their news was, and so on. We'd love to hear about it!

☐ Best of luck to the football team as they go against Hull at 10 Thanksgiving morning (with all of the extra cheerleaders there, how can they lose?)

Are we court crazy?

To sue, or not to sue, that is the question.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson once mentioned that the increase in the number of lawsuits against the town is a reflection of today's society.

When someone feels aggrieved, particularly if they have the finances to support the process, they file a complaint in court.

Often they don't attempt to resolve their differences on a one-to-one basis. They find a lawyer to accept the case for a fee, and they use the weight of the court system to provide a more significant impact to their claim.

Depending on the impending situation, a lawsuit may not only be valid, but necessary. When one side will no longer listen; when there will be no justice served, then the the court is the proper forum to conclude the argument.

But this has been said, and we agree, the court system is too often viewed as a panacea for all ailments. If someone's dog has littered your lawn, sue; if you trip on someone's rickety stairs, sue; and if a town board denies you, sue.

And sue they do.

The lawsuits against this town are escalating as decisions of town officials are appealed. That is the right of every individual under the provisions of our town bylaws.

Like putting one foot in front of the other, we automatically expect a denied party to volley with a court appeal. That is their right - to be granted an impartial judgement based on fact.

It is incorrect to point the finger at either side and say that we are court crazy, or that our town officials are failing to abide by their rules and regulations.

Certainly, there are some inferior officials sitting on town boards whose sole delight is to rebutt the testimony of residents. They relish the aggravation they, as presiding hearing officers, can render proponents of a plan.

It is our responsibility as voters and taxpayers not to elect these power-hungry officials, people whose only reason for serving is selfishly motivated. We must gather the resources and fair-minded residents willing to challenge elected incumbents.

And, on the other hand, we as residents must realize that all our hopes, dreams and schemes may be flawed. If our plans to build a home or an office are found to be illegal, must it always be challenged? It is human nature to fight when we have been denied, to struggle against injustice.

We can't say to anyone, put down the sword, stop the fight. We can only advise you to look inward and examine the struggle. Will the people here be harmed by your proposal? If so, then we say be fair and conclude this dispute. And if your answer is the reverse, we say, continue the fight - for justice serves all.

A.F.S. exchange experience helped

Letters

To the Editor:

Last week when some of my college friends and I were talking, I realized something about how my parents and I had adjusted to my living at college. Most of my friends were talking about how they were having some trouble adjusting to living at college because their parents were having trouble dealing with being away from home so much. I started to get a feeling of being left out of the conversation because neither me nor my parents have had trouble adjusting to me being at school. The biggest reason for this we, my parents and I,feel is because of my A.F.S. exchange two summers ago.

During the conversation, one of my friends said that her parents had not told her all they should have about an operation that her mother had to have and talking like she did not care about what was going on at home. Also, my roomates parents and other family members have come to visit him more than my family has come to visit me. The only time my parents have come to see me was during Parents Weekend. I have also noticed that I have not gone home as much as some of my friends here. I feel this is because of my exchange, and my parents agree.

Besides my exchange helping me to adjust to college live better than some of my friends, it has also helped me learn to make decisions on my own. I remember a Cohasset High School graduate calling his mother to find out how much he should spend on a hair cut. This is one of those extreme cases, but what about when mom and dad say "It's up to you now," when it comes to deciding what courses to take. It is a decision that only the student can make because he or she is the only one effected by it.

When I first left on my exchange, the only people I knew were my host family, plus I was 4,200 miles away from my friends. This situation forced me to meet people or my summer would have been spent alone. When put in this type of situation one learns to make friends quickly. When you realize mom and dad are just as far away as most, if not all, of your friends, there is a little bit of home sickness, but as time goes on that realization bothers you less and less. Is that not what every kid wants, to be free of their parents? Besides there are usually people that fill their roles, maybe not completely, but just enough.

When it comes down to it, the best help my parents and I had was my A.F.S. exchange to Norway. My parents have even said that the money they spent for me to go away was some of the best spent money they can think of. Now that my brother is going my parents are looking forward to it, not because they don't like him, but because of how it has helped me and it will get them used to him not being at home. I strongly urge anyone still in high school to at least apply. There is nothing to loose and everything to gain.

An introduction to Lisa Ohlsson

To the Editor:

My name is Lisa Ohlsson. I am 12 years old. I am from Sweden and I came to U.S.A. July 1.

I could talk a little English when I came here. In Sweden I learned English in school for two years.

I am in the 6th grade at Deer Hill School and I like it very much.

All the teachers help me and I work on a level lower in some subjects for example Language Arts and spelling. I also get more help in the other subjects thant the other students, but I do the same things.

Every Monday, Tuesday and Friday I go to Miss Curley my help teacher. She helps me with my English. She is very nice and I like to go to her.

My other teachers help me a lot too and their names are Mr. Becker, Mrs. Cisneros and Mrs. Withley. They are very kind too and Mr. Becker is very funny. Can you believe that Mr. Ekberg my principal talked to me in Swedish when I first met him?

I am going home for Christmas. Then I will come back to Cohasset for another year. My dad is working here, that is why we moved here. I have one sister Liv and she is a student at CHS.

To the Editor:

The building pictured in the Nov. 6 edition of Peek at the Past is located at site of Kimball's Motel. The part of the building where ramp goes up is where Albert (Burt) Grassie painted all kinds of teams and barges upstairs in the smaller addition. Upstairs in the main building is where Ed Sinot fixed teams and did repair work on boats and homes (doors, windows) on premises. On the lower floor is where Mr. Malley (Parker Malley's father) had a blacksmith shop. In the smaller addition on lower floor under Burt Grassie, Cliff Dickson's grandfather built teams and wheels. He was a wheelwright by trade.

I worked there as a boy of seven to twelve years old for Mr. Grassie when not going to school.

Coalition discusses improvements to roads

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner Staff

The state will undertake major improvements along a small section of Route 53 in Hanover, at the Route 3 southbound exit ramp, to provide better traffic flow and ensure public safety.

Right now, according to Allan McKinnon, deputy secretary of transportation and construction, turning left from the highway onto Route 53, is "taking your life into your own hands."

The projected cost of the work or its construction timetable have not been determined.

McKinnon last week outlined to the South Shore Coalition three major improvements at the end of the southbound exit ramp from Route 3 to Route 53 in Hanover and detailed other noteworthy projects:

- Build a new entrance into the Hanover Mall, "right opposite the (southbound) ramps," McKinnon said.
- Widen Route 53 at that point to handle five lanes of traffic, two lanes in each direction and probably a left-lane turn.
- Install traffic signals at the end of the Route 3 southbound exit ramp onto Route 53.

"We will have a light at the end of the south exit ramp so we can make left turns," he said.

McKinnon said the roadway would be widened up to 10 feet so that there would be a 66-foot roadway, with two lanes for each direction and probably a left-lane turn.

He said final details at this time are "hazy," but eventually there will be five lanes.

McKinnon said he discussed the proposed improvements at length last week with officials at the regional public works office in Taunton which oversees state road construction projects for this area.

McKinnon told the representatives of the 10 coalition communities — Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield, Duxbury, Hanover, Rockland and Weymouth — that traffic signals also would be installed at the Route 3 southbound ramp to Route 228 in Rockland.

Bids will be advertised within the near future and a contract will be awarded in the spring, he said.

Rockland's Fred Damon suggested that traffic signals also be installed on Pond Street in front of the entrance to the park-and-ride lot adjacent to the highway.

Part of the traffic problem along Pond Street — which has an office park and an industrial park in Norwell, Boston Whaler's large manufacturing plant and three hotels — is that lot, said Damon.

"The state chases all this development and just tries to keep up," said McKinnon. "There are limits.

"There aren't going to be any more highways, not here," he continued. "We need some sensible planning where possible and are encouraging railroads, commuter boats."

McKinnon said the proposal to establish a commuter rail line along the middle of Route 3 was impractical.

"I haven't discussed this with (Transportation Secretary) Fred Salvucci, but it doesn't make sense to build a line in the middle of Route 3.

"That would cost more than $200 million, the projected cost of restoring all three (Old Colony) lines," said McKinnon.

An ongoing study is evaluating the feasibility of restoring commuter rail on the Greenbush line to Scituate, the Plymouth line and the Middleboro line.

"First of all, the federal government won't fund it because it's a new line," McKinnon pointed out.

"Besides, it really duplicates the (Plymouth) line through Hanover.

"And, politically, it would put even more traffic on Route 123 and Route 228.

"Everybody wants transportation, and consultants are looking at the proposals from an economic and an environmental standpoint.

"What may happen, and now we must try to come up with a proposal by next summer, is:

- do nothing;
- improve what you have — better express buses, better facilities for commuter boats;
- use the rail bed from Quincy Adams to Boston or Northampton Street for express bus service;
- or explore further the various options for restoring commuter rail service."

The four options under consideration are restoring the Middleboro line, restoring the Middleboro and Plymouth lines, restoring the Middleboro and Greenbush lines or restoring all three lines.

"Right now, (these options) are in the environmental stage," McKinnon said. "Within a year, we'll make a choice. Then there will be more in-depth environmental study and more hearings."

But even as proposals for mass transportation are being evaluated, the number of cars on the highways are ever-increasing.

Norwell selectman Constance Hughes asked McKinnon the status of alleviating "the biggest bottleneck" at Queen Anne's Corner.

"The state has been studying this for two years, and the ramp in Rockland contributes to this (traffic tieup). We're trying to get an answer," Hughes said.

"We're not trying to reinvent the wheel," she said. "Actually, a striped turning lane would be good."

McKinnon told her the proposal seemed feasible and would look into it.

Another congested area along the Route 3 corridor is the Route 139 interchange, south of the Route 53 exit.

But McKinnon said he could not comment on any design changes as nothing as yet has been presented formally to the state.

"Those plans are still with Pembroke and Marshfield," McKinnon said. "We haven't been presented with a plan."

Coalition executive director Jean Christensen of Marshfield asked what will happen when the two towns, which have joined together in a $130,000 engineering design study, hand over their design to the state.

"The state tries to let local communities come in with the design," McKinnon said. "If it meets safety standards and is within economic reasonableness, I assume the state would (support it).

"If we're talking millions, I don't know."

Marshfield Selectman James Robinson will meet next week with local businessmen to discuss one of the last hurdles on the proposed Route 139 changes on Ocean Street, then follow it up with a meeting with state Rep. Frank Hynes and state officials at the state house.

Sports hero moves back to California

In June, the board rejected three of the thirteen variances requested by the Sweeneys to construct a septic system on the lot. By disapproving the variances, the entire plan was negated.

Sweeney figured he and Nancy have spent close to $100,000 - to develop a septic system for a one-bathroom home, and to fight the health board's rejection.

"It's been a nightmare," he said. "We sold our house in San Diego and moved here with the thought of rebuilding the home I grew up in. We've used up all our savings and the money we made when we sold our other house, to fight this thing. Unless I rebuild on this lot, we can't afford to stay in Cohasset. We have to move."

He didn't go job-hunting, but Sweeney, a former professional football player for San Diego and Washington, was offered "a really nice position in San Diego," he said. "I didn't go looking, but I'll tell you, Nancy and I got turned off by this town. The board of health has really turned us off and we're leaving.

"We've been treated so poorly, and we've invested so much money, we have to go," he continued. "Thepeople of this town are great, but I feel like the town officials are stealing my house away from me."

"What they've (board of health) done to me goes way beyond the town regulations. Plain and simple, they're stealing away my right to live here," an angry Sweeney added.

In San Diego, Sweeney will work in marketing and community relations for the chemical abuse branch of the Sharp Cabrillo Hospital. It is the same hospital where Sweeney was treated almost five years ago for substance and alcohol abuse.

"It's an excellent opportunity for me," Sweeney said. After a Tuesday afternoon luncheon with Governor and Mrs. Michael Dukakis, the Sweeneys will be traveling to their new Californian home.

For the past few years, Sweeney has worked as an employee assistant program representative and community relations person for a Norwood corporation.

As a prominent member of the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs, Sweeney has traveled to more than 30 area schools. During these discussions in the classroom and on the athletic fields, Sweeney would talk about his personal involvement in drug abuse. It was his drug addiction that caused the termination of his career as an All Star player in the National Football League.

Regarding the past year's confrontations with the health board, Sweeney said, "it's been very disheartening. And the worse part is, that it's been allowed to happen at all.

"Do you realize," he continued, "they tried to schedule me for a hearing two weeks ago at 1:15 in the morning? Is that fair?

"Yeah," he added, "we've had a lot of community support. People like Sally Ann Chatterton and Richardson White have given us a lot of moral support. Mainly, we've heard from the townies. It's been very encouraging. They want us to live here, to stay. Everyone, that is, except the board of health."

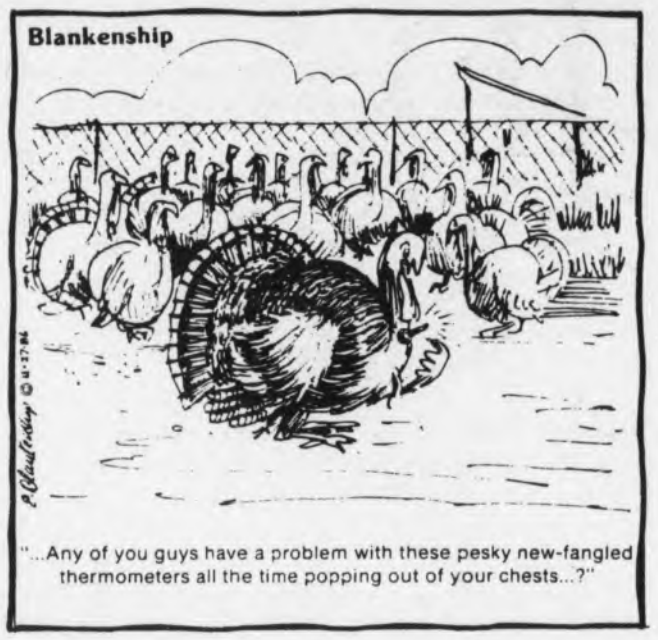
As a result of the health board's final rejection this week, the Sweeneys will push forward with a lawsuit against the town. "I'm quite sure we'll win," Sweeney said. "Especially when the state has already come in and relieved the health board of its responsibility."

The deputy commissioner of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), Thomas McLaughlin, interceded on the Sweeney's behalf in September. After reviewing the engineering plans for the septic system and walking the site, McLaughlin told the local board, "there is no reason why a septic system cannot be built there.

After that meeting in September, McLaughlin was asked by health board chairman Michael Bliss to submit his remarks in writing. Engineer John Modzelewski reviewed McLaughlin's statement for the board and has issued his recommendations.

The board discussed those recommendations at its meeting Monday night.

"I feel really bad," Sweeney said this week from his rented apartment on Elm Street. "Besides all the old friends I have here, we've made a lot of new friends. We always thought we'd stay here."



"...Any of you guys have a problem with these pesky new-fangled thermometers all the time popping out of your chests...?"

ONE OF THE NATION'S FINEST GOURMET SHOPS IS NOW OPEN IN HANOVER

If you enjoy cooking and good food, you will love Barnstable Grocery. The aroma of fresh roasted coffee beans greets each and every customer of our store. The shelves are filled with specialty foods from around the world. The cheese case is packed with aged cheddars, goat cheeses, and blues. Fresh pate, fresh caviar, and smoked salmon are available every day.

I love to cook! I teach cooking classes on a regular basis. I only sell cookware that I believe in, the name brands that I know are well built, and that my customers will enjoy using for years.

We are very proud of our new store on the South Shore. Come in, sniff, taste and browse.

'Godspell' returns to CHS Dec. 5, 6

The second show of the Cohasset High School Drama Workshop's '86-87 season will be a return engagement of the group's most successful show —" Godspell".

First performed 10 years ago, the timeless quality of the story and music, and fresh spontaneity of each cast, has made "Godspell" a sell-out. Performances will begin at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 5 and Saturday, Dec. 6 at Cohasset High School.

Students appearing in "Godspell" being a variety of experience to the show, including past performaces in prior productions. Returning to CHS from the '76 show is Stewart Replogle, and Michelle Meagher who while in eighth grade appeared in an earlier production, will be back on stage.

Karin Anglin has appeared in "Flowers for Algernon", "Take Her, She's Mine", "Voices from the High School", and last year's award-winning "Candid". Also from the cast of "Take Her" is Cindy Bell. Returning from "Algernon" is Liz Buckley. A veteran of two state final shows ("Candid"and"Voices") as well as "Algernon", "Snoopy",and "Take Her" is Jenna Emmons. Peter Kasperowicz performed in "Algernon" and "Take Her", as did Laura Kuhn, who also appeared in "Voices"and in "Snoopy".

Making her debut with the Drama Workshop is Holly Ludlow. Leaving the football field behind for the stage is Philip Mahoney, who previously performed in "Voices", "Take Her", and "Algernon". Joe Mazza appears in his second show after making his debut in "Take Her". New to Cohasset as well as to the Drama Workshop is Samantha Platt, who debuted in "Take Her". An all-star field hockey goalie, Lisa Shumaker will perform next on stage, and Katie Tolini, who appeared in "Flowers", completes the cast.

Tickets are on sale both at the school and via mail order. To order by mail send a note indicating date of performance, a check, and a stamped,self-addressed envelope to Cohasset Drama Workshop, Cohasset High School, 143 Pond Street, Cohasset, MA. 02025. Tickets are $4 in advance and $5 at the door.

GOURMET BOX DINNERS

The Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, which supports all fine and performing arts at CHS, will provide Gourmet Box Dinners (prepared by "Something Nice" of Hingham) before each "Godspell" performance, from 6:30-7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Cafe Library Gourme t Grille at CHS. The price is a mere $6 per box, including beverage.

Box dinners must be reserved in advance (by December 1) by sending a check to the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, 48 Sohier St., Cohasset, MA 02025 (please indicate the night of the performance you are attending), or you may call 383-0572 or 383-6772.

PATRONS

The Arts Boosters are seeking patrons for the "Godspell" program and in support of their work. Donations received are used towards study awards, field trips, the CHS Literary Arts Magazine, Arts Recognition Night and the promotion of all musical, fine and literary arts, and the dramatic activities at CHS. Donations must be received by Dec. 1 in order to be listed in the "Godspell" program. Patrons who contribute $50 or more will be entitled to two box dinners at no extra charge. Send check to The Cohasset Arts Boosters, 48 Sohier St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

LaVange earns Eagle rank

Mark C. LaVange, Life Scout, of Troop #28, BSA, just completed his Eagle Scout Project.

The project consisted of his gathering information from all the families residing in the Town of Cohasset, regarding the location of bedrooms, number of persons, ages, (babies, elderly, etc.), special needs and special medical information.

This information was fed into a computer and then transferred to a three by five inch card file which was turned over to the Cohasset Fire Department and the Local Civil Defense Corps.

These files are to help, aid, and assist these Departments in any case of Fire or Emergency Disaster where rescue or evacuation may be needed. Mark was helped by members of Troop #28, BSA, and members of Post #28, Explorer Scouts, both from the Town of Cohasset.

Upon the completion of his Boards of review, Mark will attain the distinction of becoming a Third Generation Eagle Scout in his family.

His grandfather, Irving C. Blossom, is not only the second Eagle Scout made in Cohasset, but he is the oldest living Eagle scout from Cohasset.

Blossom's son, Fred C. Blossom II, made Eagle scout in 1948, and now Mark in 1986.

The Town of Cohasset and, of course, his family can indeed by proud of the forthcoming Eagle Scout Award for Mark C. LaVange.

Megan Staunton stands inside her home — a Deer Hill replica of the actual Pilgrim homes of 1620. (Kathy Perlow)

The Thanksgiving Feast

Each year Mr. Shultz and Mrs. Magoun, teachers of the Deer Hill Open Space, grades 5 and 6, hold a Thanksgiving presentation. The children are divided into Pilgrims and Indians. They give reports on different topics. They dress up in outfits that resemble what Indians and Pilgrims wore. The children invite their parents and/or grandparents to listen to the presentations then enjoy a feast with turkey and vegetables and some of the things that Pilgrims and Indians had at their first Thanksgiving.

By Corin McAllister and Kathleen O'Brien

Pilgrims then and now

More than 100 Pilgrims sailed for North America on a ship called the Mayflower. It was a long and difficult voyage. The Pilgrims landed off Cape Cod, Massachusetts in Nov., 1620. They explored the coast for a good place to make a settlement. After five weeks of scouting they finally decided to stay in Plimouth, a perfect place with good land and a good harbor.

The fifth grade classes of the Deer Hill School also took a long and difficult voyage, but the year was 1986. They too landed in Plimouth, but at Plimouth Plantation, an exhibit of the first village in America. They learned many things, for example, that women and servants, or people who didn't own land couldn't vote. They also found out that the Pilgrims only had two sets of clothes, church and play or work. The students watched the men and boys of the vilage build houses out of clapboard sides and thatched or shake roofs. The fifth-graders enjoyed finding out about the windows made from oiled paper because the Pilgrims didn't have enough glass.

All of the children learned a lot about Pilgrims, and they know that Plimouth Plantation is a great place for a family trip.

Legion Christmas party

December 13, the American Legion Auxiliary invites its members' children and grandchildren 10 and under, to their annual Children's Xmas party.

All members of the Auxiliary and Post are asked to call Jill at 383-0372 with the names and ages of the children.

The party will be held at the Legion function room from 1-3 p.m. A strict deadline date will be Dec. 5.

Concert benefits Rosie's Place

The eighth annual First Parish Christmas Concert presented by Unicorn Singers under the direction of Margo Euler will be held in the Meeting House on Cohasset Common Sunday, Dec. 7, at 7:30 p.m.

They will perform "The Christmas Story," Distler's masterpiece based on the familiar "Lo, how a rose e'er blooming" and other a-cappela music of the season, as well as carols for all to sing.

Proceeds from the concert will benefit Rosie's Place, a shelter for homeless women in Boston.

Tickets are on sale at the church office 383-1100 at $3 each.

LaLeche meeting

The La Leche League of the Scituate/Norwell area will meet Dec. 9 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Patty Allen, 734 Country Way, Scituate.

Pregnant women and mothers with their nursing babies interested in good mothering through breastfeeding are welcome to attend the discussion of nutrition and weaning.

Le Leche League is a non-profit, non-sectarian organization of mothers offering education, information and support to women who wish to breastfeed their children.

For more information or for help with breastfeeding problems call 545-5392, 545-0815, or 659-1345.

Call Santa Claus

Attention, all children! If you want to talk to Santa Claus or Mrs. Claus at the North Pole, just dial 545-4000 any time between 5 and 9 p.m. Monday, Dec. 8, through Thursday, Dec. 11.

Arrangements for a telephone connection between Scituate and the North Pole were made by Robert P. Magner, a director of the Scituate Chamber of Commerce, which annually sponsors this Yuletide activity.

Science Center program

Fish with lungs? Birds with balloons inside? Animals who breathe through their skin? With an assortment of demonstrations, Naturalist Marshall Katler will explain the ins and outs of getting oxygen into the body at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell. So, take a deep breath and register! This adult/family demonstration will be held Sunday, Dec. 7 from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Prepaid registration required (members/$5; non-members/$6.50). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

EVERGREEN WREATHS

Begin this Christmas season with Joan Kenworthy, wreathmaker extraordinaire. She will assist you in creating a beautiful wreath of evergreens using a straw base. We will provide a variety of freshly cut evergreens and a red bow. You bring clippers and any decorations that you would like to add. Monday, Dec. 8 from 10 a.m. until noon. Prepaid registration required (members/$12; non-members/$14). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

TERRARIUM WORKSHOP

Travel from the Science Center to nearby gathering sites with Naturalist Barbara Devine. Select from plant materials such as partridgeberry, wintergreen, various mosses and ferns. Return to the warmth of the Science Center to put together your terrarium. Bring your own glass jar. We'll supply all other materials. Wednesday, Dec. 10 from 9:30 a.m. to noon. Pre-paid registration required (members/$5; non-members/$7).

Knoll Home party

The Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home, Rte 3A, will hold a Christmas Fair, Friday, Dec. 5, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will be craft items, baked goods and raffles. All proceeds will go to the residents council fund and donations will be greatly appreciated.

The public is welcome!

Women helping homeless

Volunteer Helen Hooper noted there are now 32 Cohasset women who regularly donate their time and energy preparing food for the homeless women at Rosie's Place.

Many other local ladies participate as substitutes or part-timers.

"I would say 80 percent of the women from Cohasset who cook now are the same women who started out four years ago," Donahue commented.

"All the food is brought to Barbara Donahue's house," Hooper explained. "She takes it in to Rosie's Place."

The Cohasset women usually cook enough food for about 90 people. But lately there has been a need for more.

"We're seeing more women now than we were last spring," Donahue said. "There are more homeless on the streets."

Donahue estimated, "We serve dinner to approximately 100 to 125 women on the night we go in. And it's escalating."

She added, "I almost ran out of food the last time; I didn't have enough. You have to be careful; it's like running a dinner party. You just don't give out big portions if you know you might run out."

Despite the increased demand, the Cohasset crew has met its challenge.

"It's a wonderful organization," Hooper commented,"and I certainly think Barbara Donahue is the one to be congratulated, because she's kept the whole thing going."

Donahue countered, "The women in Cohasset are fantastic. They're just here at my door; they never fail. I think they're the ones to be commended."

The efforts of Donahue and her South Shore samaritans have not gone unnoticed by those who run Rosie's Place.

"It means a great deal to us," said Harriet Koiles, Rosie's Coordinator of Volunteers. "If we had to do it on any kind of budget, it would be frightening, because people bring in food like that every night."

She added, "The food is wonderful; there are lots of home-baked pies and breads. It's real home cooking, and that makes it special."

Some of those pies and bread come from The Bread Shop in Cohasset.

"Sine Pounder has been wonderful," Donahue said. "Once a month I go down to The Bread Shop, and she gives me all the day-old stuff and I bring that in. They love it."

Koiles commented that the volunteers not only prepare meals, but also serve the guests and befriend them.

"The women who come here really look forward to the different groups that come in with the food," she added, "They really like talking with them and seeing them."

She explained, the volunteers "become very much a part of the extended family. What they bring to Rosie's is something very special and wonderful."

Hooper is just as impressed with Rosie's Place.

"I think it's such a remarkable place," she said, "and the sevice they provide for these people is just incredible."

"It's a great feeling of satisfaction," she concluded, "knowing at least there are a few people who aren't going to be hungry."

Workers prepare goods for Dec. 6 Village Fair

Faced with a larger volume of hand-crafted holiday decorations and gifts and larger crowds of shoppers, Cohasset's Village Fair will overflow Town Hall Saturday, Dec. 6. A tent will be set up next door to display and sell the hundreds of wreaths being made by volunteer workers from the five participating churches.

With the wreaths moved outdoors, space inside the Town Hall will be available for the Boutique and other popular booths.

The move of the wreaths to a tent is only one of several changes being made in the Fair program this year. A Village Fair dinner, once the gala wind-up of the day's events but missing from some recent Fairs, will return that evening to Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church. And the Secret Room for child shoppers will move from crowded quarters in the Congregational church to larger facilities at St. Stephen's.

Once again holiday decorations and gifts will be basic attractions of the Fair. In church meeting rooms and private homes around town, gifted and energetic volunteers from the five churches are busy in work groups or individually putting final touches on scores of articles that will go on sale the day of the Fair.

In particular the wreath committee, headed by Jean Manganaro, of St. Anthony's has been meeting Wednesday mornings at Carmen Schramm's on Atlantic Avenue and invites additional workers to the intensive final work week beginning on Dec. 1. That week the group will meet in the vestry of the Congregational each day from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. to complete the wreaths, still welcoming new helpers.

"We still say, 'come one, come all' for as much time as you can give us," Jean says. "No experience is necessary; we'll help you learn. And we all have fun doing it."

Representatives of the other churches on the wreath committee are Lindsay Guild, Congregational; Peg Miller, Unitarian; Amy Cutler, St. Stephen's; and Pam McNamara, Greek Orthodox.

Working equally down the home stretch to make sure that they have enough merchandise to last throughout the full day of the Fair, is the group under chair Carol Sandblom, for the Boutique.

Church representatives in this group include Velma Begley, Carol Martin and Andrea White. Among those who have sewed, stuffed, glued or knitted during the months of preparation are Dot Parmenter, Mary O'Brien, Marsha Silvia, Tillie Nardo, Olga Sawchuk, Peg Aiken, Margaret Bates and many others. A special feature will be the raffle of a quilt made by the Boutique group.

Tickets for the Village Fair dinner at St. Stephen's Church the evening of the Fair Day, are already getting scarce as Fair workers and others see it as a relaxing end to their day's work. Tish Jordan and Ruth Nedrow of the Congregational Church co-chair the committee that has arranged a beef bourguignon-to-apple pie catered by the Strawberry Parfait.

Some of the handmade items available at the Dec. 6 Village Fair are displayed by fair workers Sharon Moody (l) and Debbie Anderson.

Church representatives on the committee are Susan Reardon and Joan Larribee of St. Anthony's; Ann Churchill and Mary Ann White of the Unitarian; Sally Avery of St. Stephen's; Fay Papabokpouleis and Sophia Koutrobis of the Greek Church; and Rita Kirk, Joan Shockman and Ellen Endris of the Congregational.

In addition to dinner ticket sellers, there is also a corps of raffle ticket salespeople canvassing their congregations and the towns offering chances on a range of valuable prizes, headed again by a color TV set.

The prizes are the donations of local merchants and restaurants solicited by Committee Chairman Lou Simeone and his group that includes Barbara Weisenfluh, Fred Howe and Linda Argeros. Among the early contributers of prizes are Cohasset Hardware, Fleming's, The Linen Chest, Woolworth's, King Jewelers, 3A Antiques, Hugo's Kimballs, Colonial Pharmacy and Johnny Appleseed's.

Another committee that has been at work assembling their merchandise over a period of time is the group that will offer a range of plants on Fair Day, featuring both flowering and green plants, as well as dried arrangements. Sheila Wallingford heads this committee, being assisted by Jean Syrmopoulos, Judy Volungis, Fran O'Toole and Barbara Maynard.

One of the very busiest of Fair activities will be the popular Chowder Bar in the vestry of the Congregational Church. Historically this feature attracts lines of hungry shoppers slaking their appetities with bowls of the steaming delicacy. Ralph Coley is in charge of the Chowder Bar this year, assisted by Sara Murphy, Rose Kierce, Jack Martin, Jack McGrath, Fran Wallingford and Maria Barber. Adjoining the Chowder Bar will be the food table which again will add Greek pastries and a salad bar.

Skippers proud of a big year

the Bromfield player. "He was fantastic. We couldn't shut him down and he did what he wanted out there."

Magner said Butler was perhaps the best player his team faced all year.

The Skippers played a shakey first half against Bromfield.

"I don't know what it was," Magner said. "They weren't comfortable out there; they didn't look good. I don't know whether it was because they had jitters or because they hadn't played in a week."

The coach noted, Bromfield had played six playoff games on the artificial turf of the championship field.

"I think that helped them in the beginning of the game," he said. "It was like a home field for them."

Despite the championship loss, Magner had a lot of praise for his team.

"There's a lot of consolation in having gone this far," he said. "Being down 2-0 and coming back the way we did showed a lot of courage. The kids didn't lose their composure.

"I'm really proud of them that they did that," he explained. "They could have just given up."

For team captain John Reidy, it was the last game of his high school career.

"He played an excellent game," his coach commented. "He gave 110 percent during the whole game."

Magner also was impressed with the play of goalie Joel Reidy and of his brother Jim Reidy.

"I think Jim Reidy was the most valuable player in the game for us," Magner said. "He played very well, both on offense and defense."

Cohasset is a young team and will lose only one senior starter, so perhaps the future holds a lot of promise for the 1986 Eastern Mass. champions.

"I'm looking forward to next year," Magner said. "The talent is certainly there and we'll have more experience.

"But," he added, "there's a lot of luck involved in getting to the championship. Everything has got to be right again if we're to return."

Of course, losing the state championship is a disappointment, but the Skippers can be proud of their accomplishments. It was a very successful season.

Conservation board clarification

Letters

To the editor:

According to a newspaper article titled Conservation Appointments printed on Page 2 of the Cohasset Mariner, Thursday, Nov. 20, Selectman Chairman Diane Sullivan: "said she apologized for the board, explaining that Harrold's appointment had been discussed some time ago with the commission. Despite the mix-up, the appointment will stand, she added."

I do not wish to participate in a back-and-forth argument. However, I do wish to state that Dean Harrold's appointment to the Conservation Commission was not discussed in advance either with me or with the Conservation Commission. As I stated in my letter of November 6: "At the meeting of the Conservation Commission held Tuesday, Nov. 4, the members discussed with some concern the fact that they had learned only that evening, through the local newspaper, only, of your appointment the previous night of a new member to the Conservation Commission. They acknowledge that the Selectmen have the power of appointment, but they wanted you to know that to their knowledge an appointment to the Commission has never been made without consultation with the Commission in advance."

Sincerely.
Merle S. Brown, Chairman

Cohasset Worship

Second Congregational Church

SEARCH COMMITTEE —

By unanimous agreement, the congregation has called The Rev. Gary A. Ritts to be our new minister. Gary and his wife, Judy, and their children, Steve and Allison, will be joining us on or about February 1, 1987. All of us on the Search Committee thank all of you for your patience and support during the past 10 months and for the warm welcome accorded Gary and Judy Ritts last Sunday.

CHURCH SCHOOL —

Parents may want to note the following dates: November 30, -- no Sunday School; December 7, --chapel; Saturday, Dec. 13, -- rehearsal for the pageant at 10 a.m. and December 14, -- Christmas pageant. Children, you did a wonderful job rehearsing carols last Sunday. Mrs. Jenkins and I thank you for your patience and cooperation during a very long chapel. This week, attend church and then go to your classes. Gail Whitehouse.

CHOIR —

The choir had a wonderful post-rehearsal party last Wednesday at Carol Proodian's home. . . three kinds of cake and all that! . . . This week we work on the Thanksgiving Eve special, our own Thanksgiving Sunday, and special music for Advent and Christmas. Wednesday at 7:30. Come and sing with us!

SECRET ROOM —

Many hands are busily at work making gifts that the children can purchase for their relatives and friends at the Fair. (Special thanks to the Youth Group for their help!) As all of the gifts are wrapped and tagged for the children, we particularly need "stick-on" bows and tissue paper (white, inexpensive type). Any other contributions -- small gifts, materials for making handicrafted items, etc., would also be greatly appreciated. There will be a box marked "Secret Room" in Bates Hall, near the piano, where you can leave your contributions. Thank you. Lillian Ketchum, 383-6434.

Beechwood Church services

The Beechwood Congregational Church welcomes everyone to worship Sunday mornings at 10:45. Child care is provided.

Children in grades K-8 are invited to attend Sunday School from 9:30 - 10:30 a.m. Come and bring a friend!

Rev. Wally Cedarleaf will lead us in worship through the Advent season. We look forward to his words of inspiration. Come and hear.

The tenth Annual Antique Show and sale was held at the Deer Hill school, Saturday, Nov. 8. Thanks to all those who helped make it another successful year.

Miss Marion Ellis of Norwell continues to recuperate at South Shore hospital.

Two new members, Mrs. Marion Moulton of Cohasset and Miss Cindy Magacs of Somerville were welcomed into the church with minister emeritus, Rev. Robert Campbell officiating.

Please bring non-perishable goods Sunday, Nov. 22 for our Ingathering for the Home for Little Wanderers. Let us be thankful for all we have and share with others.

The church numbers are : church - 383-0808; if no answer (working hours), 545-1315.

St. Stephen's services

Parish pledges - With not quite half the pledges in, over $57,000 has already been set aside. Fifty-eight pledges are in, with more coming each day. They represent good expressions of commitment and of what is meaningful.

Whatever you choose to pledge, it is a prayerful faith decision. If you have not yet pledged, we hope you will fill out your pledge card either sending it in or placing it in the offering plate at worship. At the heart of a loving community is the giving that takes us beyond self.

UTO update - Alicia Seavey presented St. Stephen's fall United Thank Offering of $646.32 at the diocesan ingathering at St. Paul's Cathedral on November 5. This contribution combined with our spring offering amounted to a total offering for 1986 of $1,243.96 to be used for grants in 1987. Betty Madden, Clifford, and John Mullett also attended the service. Thanks to all of you who contributed so generously.

Grant proposal forms will be available at the Diocesan House from January 1, to March 1. Three proposals will be selected in March to be sent to the National UTO Committee for the final grant decisions during the summer.

Village Fair-Secret Room - The Secret Room, a "children's gift shop", will be at St. Stephen's in the Watermelon Room this year. We're looking for donations, such as unused toys, ornaments, decorations, jewelry or novelties of any kind. We also need stick-on bows, tags and tissue paper so all of the items children select can be gift wrapped and ready to put under the tree. Last, but certainly not least, we need volunteers to work as wrappers for an hour on Dec. 6. Please contact Anne Delaney (383-1065) if you can help us out in any way.

Village Fair help - Helping the Village Fair answers a real need and is a lot of fun to boot.

* Making boxwood trees. A workshop will take place at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Monday through Friday, December 1 through 5, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. You can come and go during these hours at your convenience. Someone will be on hand to show you how to make the boxwood trees.

* Helpers are needed for the clean-up group. This is only two hours of volunteering on the day of the fair, Saturday, December 6, from 2:30-4:30 p.m.

* Finally, workers are needed at most all of the booths during the fair. If you can serve, contact Sheila Wallingford at 383-6897.

Thanksgiving Services — Wednesday, November 26 at 8 p.m. here at St. Stephen's an ecumenical Thanksgiving Eve Service will be held for all of the Cohasset Community. Participating churches in addition to St. Stephen's will be second Congregational, Nativity-Assumption Greek Orthodox, St. Anthony's, First Parish, and the Vedanta Centre.

Traditional Thanksgiving hymns will be sung, and a choir made up of voices from all the churches will sing two anthems: J. S. Bach's "Now Thank We All Our God" and "O How Amiable" by R. Vaughn Williams. Our Organist, Stephen Lee, will play for the service. The choir will be directed by Sister Mary Hurld of St. Anthony's.

Thanksiving Day, Thursday, November 27 at 9 a.m., St. Stephen's will celebrate with communion our thanks to God for all of life and for God's life-giving love.

In Our Parish Family — David Vivian, son of Dawn and John, is back in Cohasset after a seven-year tour of duty as a naval navigator. Good luck, Dave, in your new civilian occupation: job-hunting!

Rick Peters, son of Cynthia and George, was married to Wendy Hickok of Orleans on November 8 in the Church of the Holy Name in Brewster. Jan, who often serves as an acolyte at St. Stephen's, was a bridesmaid, and Jeffrey Peters was best man — a joyous family affair for all of the Peters.

Please pray for Katie Dodd, who is in the hospital.

Seavey Co-Chairs Diocesan Forum — John has been a member of the Forum since 1984. It was formed as a result of the Adventure in Mission strategy developed under Bishop Coburn and is charged with "discovering in the Gospel a new way for Christians to understand and to build a concensus around those moral, economic and political issues which will most affect the world during the next two decades."

Cohasset worship

House of Prayer services

Sunday, Nov. 30, House of Prayer Lutheran Church, 916 Main Street in Hingham, will celebrate the First Sunday in Advent with worship service at 9:15 a.m.

Pastor Alan Grant will conduct the service and preside over holy communion. Pastor Grant's sermon topic will be "Spiritual Change." Robert Reimold will be cantor, and special music will be provided by the Adult Choir.

Advent means "coming" and is the beginning of the new church year. It is a time of expectation and hope. The Advent Wreath is a visual reminder of this. During the service the first candle in the Advent wreath will be lit to commemorate the beginning of the Advent season. This ceremony will be part of the service throughout the four Sundays of Advent with an additional candle being lit each week.

Coffee will be served following the service. Sunday school and Adult Forum will begin at 10:40 a.m.

Beginning Dec. 4, Midweek Advent Services will be held at House of Prayer Thursday evenings at 7:15. During Advent the Children's Choir will meet Thursdays from 6:30 to 7 p.m., and Adult Choir will meet following the service.

New Mormon Bishop named

Bradley K. Johnson, 30, of Hanover was 'called and sustained' as Bishop of the Hingham Ward of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints - an area congregation comprising some 300 members from Hingham and surrounding towns of the South Shore.

Bishop Johnson succeeds George H. Dresser III of Duxbury who served as bishop for four years until called last week to the Stake presidency.

Married and the father of four children, Johnson will labor voluntarily and without pay in his church assignments as do all leaders of that lay church. He has dedicated his time and talents to the Church since serving as a missionary in Switzerland ten years ago. A native Utahn Johnson has served in the Hingham Ward bishopric for four years and more recently as executive secretary to Brent W. Lambert, former stake president. Johnson also holds an administrative position with The Talbots.

Obituaries

Dorothy Prouty

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Nov. 28 at the First Parish Meeting House for Dorothy (Thornton) Prouty, 88, who died last week at the Cardigan Nursing Home in Scituate. Burial will be in the Washington Street Cemetery.

Mrs. Prouty graduated from Simmons College in 1920. Born in New York, she lived in London, England, Georgia, Illinois and California, before moving to Cohasset many years ago.

She leaves her husband, Laurence W. Prouty; a son, William L. Prouty of California; two daughters, Ellen L. Cotts of Pennsylvania and Deborah Rogers of Chatham, seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Memorial donations may be made to the First Parish Meeting House, 23 N. Main Street.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sparrell-McNamara Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street.

Michael A. DeLuca

A funeral Mass was celebrated today, Nov. 26 at St. Mary's Church in West Quincy for Michael A. DeLuca, 18, of West Quincy. He was the son of Richard DeLuca of Cohasset. Burial was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery in Quincy.

Mr. DeLuca died Saturday at Boston City Hospital after he was struck by a car while changing a tire on the breakdown lane of the Southeast Expressway.

He was a senior at North Quincy High School. He held a part time construction job as part of a work-study program at the school. He was a player on the school's hockey team.

Besides his father, Mr. DeLuca leaves his mother, Carol. A. (Lyons) Imbornone of Quincy; a brother, Richard P. DeLuca of Cohasset; two sisters, Carolann DeLuca and Patricia A. DeLuca, both of Quincy; his grandparents, John and Veronica (MacDougal) DeLuca of Quincy, and Charles and Helen (Ferguson) Lyons of Wareham; a stepfather, Frank Imbornone of Quincy; a stepmother, Joyce (Lennon) DeLuca of Cohasset; a stepbrother, John MacDonald of Cohasset; four stepsisters, Stephanie Imbornone of Quincy, Christine Cranfill of Malden, and Kara MacDonald and Heather MacDonald, both of Cohasset, and many aunts and uncles.

Memorial donations may be made to the North Quincy High School Scholarship Fund, 318 Hancock St., North Quincy, Mass. 02171.

Eleanor C. Downie

A graveside service was held Monday for Eleanor C. Downie, 91, who died Nov. 20 at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. Burial was in River Bend Cemetery in Westerly, R.I.

Wife of the late Charles E. Downie, she leaves a son, Robert Downie of Brooklyn, Conn.; a daughter, Martha W. Nyman of Hingham; six grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel in Hingham.

Wedding

Roderick-Sillcocks

Sheila Lee Sillcocks and John Francis Roderick were recently married at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. The bride, daughter of Warren B. Sillcocks and the late Ann H. Sillcocks, received a B.A. from Southeastern Mass. University. She is head teacher at the Mt. Wachusett Community College Child Care program in Gardner.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Roderick of Fairhaven, Mass., is finishing his degree at Fitchburg State College.

The couple will live in Townsend, Mass., following a trip to Florida.

Winterize your car now

By spending approximately 20 minutes troubleshooting, you may save yourself hours of delay stranded on the road in rough weather.

Cooling system. Check all hoses for cracks, cuts, swelling, soft spots or general deterioration. Make certain all hose clamps are fastened tightly. Inspect belts for wear and looseness.

Oil. Check the level and condition of oil regularly. Use the correct grade of oil for your area of the country. In cold winter driving, most car manufacturers recommend using a 10W-30 multi-viscosity oil. Don't forget to change filters when replacing oil.

Battery. Inspect battery posts for corrosion and tightness.

Barkeepers warned about fake IDs at special seminar

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Cohasset's purveyors of spirits and statutes enhanced their awareness of drugs and alcohol issues on drugs and alcohol awareness day.

Selectmen, police and local peddlers of port gathered Wednesday at Kimball's by the Sea to learn about the laws and liabilities involved in the liquor trade.

Special Investigator Charles Glynn of the Registry of Motor Vehicles addressed the assembly on the dangers barkeeps and beverage salesmen face in fake licenses and forged identification cards used by youngsters trying to buy alcohol.

Glynn displayed a variety of doctored licenses and IDs. The kids' cleverness ranged from the simple replaced photos and date-of-birth changes, to the sophisticated overlayed lamination technique.

"One kid spelled 'registrar' wrong," the inspector noted. "But it was a very good counterfeit license; if you're in a dark barroom, maybe it wouldn't show up."

He told the story of a young entrepreneur who would take the license of someone who's over 21, take a 35mm photograph of the license and the "customer" and laminate them together.

"He was getting $20 apiece and he couldn't keep up with his business," Glynn said. "He made a substantial amount of money for college."

While selling alcohol to a minor can be painfully unprofitable for merchants, he explained, the courts much milder on the other side of the equation.

"Most of the courts look at it as a joke," he said. "You have a kid who's altered his date of birth, he goes to court and the judge says, 'Don't be ridiculous; you knew you were going to get caught. You did a lousy job.' And he lets him go."

Glynn told the audience about the new licenses for "junior operators."

He said, "I want to call it tamper-proof, but nothing is tamper-proof." It will be tougher to reproduce, because all the print that goes on the new licenses will be computer generated.

"There's a lot more to change," he added, pointing to the red block and junior operator designation on the plate.

George McCarthy, Chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) commented, the number one problem his commission finds is, "the licenses aren't fraudulently produced."

He explained, "They go to the registrar with their older brother's or sister's social security and information and get away with a duplicate license plate. They're the genuine, 100 percent license issued by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"What happens," McCarthy added, "the kid goes into your bar or your package store and he'll flash the ID. You look at it and there's no reason not to accept it, because it's his picture and everything on it is perfect.

"You give it back to him," he said, "and he puts it in his pocket. It gets to that point when an investigator walks in and recognizes the person because of his youthful age and says, 'All right you, let me see your ID.'That kid will deny he ever flashed an ID, because he knows if he surrenders it, he could lose his regular license."

McCarthy advised, "Don't accept any duplicate driver's license, because nine out of 10 of them are fake."

He described a recent sting operation in Falmouth, where 10 package stores were caught selling to minors.

"All 10 neglected to ask for the ID," McCarthy said. "You have to teach your employees to ask for the ID."

The chairman addressed another issue of concern to many in the Cohasset crowd.

"I overheard a conversation when I came in about clubs." he commented. "We're getting a rash of complaints about clubs, veterans organizations taking people in off the street' that's not allowed either.

McCarthy explained, "The state law says only members could be accepted, unless regulations issued by the town would have you accepted as a guest with a member of the club.

"The reason for this," he said, "is they're competing against legitimate business people."

McCarthy warned of the dangers of liability.

"If one of the guests gets killed, gets in an accident, the guy with the deepest pockets is going to pay up," he said.

"If you think you can't be sued," he noted, "there was a case in Pennsylvania, where a woman won $1 million because she had an x-ray destroy her psychic powers.

"There's another one," he added, "in which in a robbery attempt, the burglar fell through a skylight. He was awarded $206,000 and $1,500 per month for a year.

"A drunk in California crashed into a telephone booth," McCarthy told the crowd. "He sued and won $650,000 because the telephone booth was put in a bad spot by the phone company. If you think you can't be sued, don't be too sure."

McCarthy concluded, "The problem we're facing, we're trying to do a job, to stop as many drunk drivers from being on the road as we can.

"If we go into a place and we pick up a couple of drunks," he said, "and we notify the management, even though he may get closed down for 12 days, he may be the luckiest guy in town."

He explained, "Because those two drunks are going to be stopped before they get to their car by the trooper in the parking lot, they may be taken into protective custody.

"But they're not going to be allowed to get into that automobile," he said. "Now, if they were allowed to get into that car, if there were no trooper in the parking lot, and they killed somebody... That 12 days looks like the easiest thing in town to handle."

Don Andrew, Executive Secretary to the Board of Selectmen offered some information and some advice.

The audience cheered when he announced, "We're not going to raise (license) fees at this time."

He added, "On the club issue, as a result of the American Legion's three-day suspension, we developed the policy that you have to be signed in with a member." The policy applies to both the American Legion and to the Golf Club.

"We had an incident within the past several months," Andrew commented, "where an establishment was having some problems.

"They told us they were reluctant to call the police," he said, "when they doubted an ID or if somebody became intoxicated and they wanted to stop serving him because they thought they'd create a disturbance."

He explained, "They felt they'd be considered a trouble spot by the local board.

"The local board doesn't look at it that way," he said. "The way the board is looking at it, if they're calling the police because of a problem like that, it's an indication they're doing their job; they're living up to their responsibility as a licensee."

He concluded, "I don't want any licensee to think that if they call the police, there's a tally sheet being kept or anything, because there isn't.

"Feel free," he said, "to call the police when you have a question. You're protecting yourself and the town."

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

First impressions are crucial to prospective home buyers, and what they see when they pull up in front of your house can make or break a sale. Curb appeal is so important because much of our business comes from inquiries about our "For Sale" signs.

Take a hard look at your house from across the street. Does the yard look healthy and well groomed? Do the shutters hang straight, and is the paint on the house and trim fresh looking? Are trash cans out of sight, and are toys and garden equipment put away? Do you have attractive shrubs and flowers that will help your house show itself off? If you can't answer yes to these questions, many buyers may resist even going inside. If they do, and even if the interior is terrific, negative first impressions could strongly color their feelings about the property and its value. A cared-for exterior, on the other hand, will give the impression that your house is well served, and it will make buyers feel good about the property from the first moment they see it.

If you're thinking of selling your home, call the professionals at HOME CENTER REALTY. We can suggest some simple fix-ups that can help your home sell for top dollar. Call 749-8833, or drop by our office at 57 Water St., Hingham.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Our Mediocre Judges, Part I

(first of a two-part series)

In a recent action, Chief Justice Samuel Zoll of the Massachusetts District Courts suspended the controversial Paul King of the Dorchester District Court from most of his duties. At the same time Zoll is weighing the case of Somerville District Court Judge Paul Heffernan, who is accused of the verbal abuse of battered women appearing before him — particularly of one seeking protection from a husband who is alleged to have subsequently murdered her.

These are important cases in their own right. Judge King succeeded another jurist (Judge Troy) who resigned after years of protests by all manner of indignant citizens. It was thought King would bring order and dispassion to the Dorchester Court; it would appear he brought only more controversy to a court and a community that hardly needed more trouble.

Judge Heffernan is a one-time associate(of the late Robert Kennedy)who went on to a distinguished career as a probation officer. Heffernan can be heard on tape deriding the woman after hearing her tell him she feared for her life. Heffernan did grant her a restraining order, but his attitude, which the abusive husband was present in the courtroom to hear, cannot be condoned. Whether or not Heffernan's tone actually contributed to the woman's murder, a judge who behaves in office and on the record as outrageously as Heffernan did on that occasion has got to go. He has got to go, or what we call "standards" will have no meaning in the Massachusetts judiciary.

The correct disposition of both the King and Heffernan cases obviously is important to the future of the Massachusetts judiciary. But we will be greatly deluded if we presume that the removal or non-removal of this pair will alone determine the future of our judiciary. Nothing could be further from the truth, yet in "sexy" cases like these the press as well as political leaders as well as the general public tend to want to see a couple of heads roll. Then when heads have rolled we can go on ignoring the serious problem at hand with a clear conscience!

What we really ought to be concerned about is not the frailties of individual jurists, it is a state judiciary that by pattern is too often rude, inefficient, inept, inconsistent, unfair, and in a few instances, plain corrupt. Such a large issue can't be dealt with comprehensively in this space, but here, and in next week's column, are a few aspects of the problems as I see it.

First is the way judges are made. Traditionally judges were appointed by governors as a reward for political service to the governor himself or to important people able to prevail upon him. When Gov. Dukakis first took office in 1975 he created a "Judicial Nominating Committee" to review the qualifications of potential judges and make recommendations to him. He pledged to keep his own role to that of picking one of three qualified candidates selected by the Judicial Nominating Committee.

Dukakis' effort was praiseworthy in that it was an attempt to do better in the appointment of judges. However, the attempt has failed. While this governor has appointed some fine judges, his Judicial Nominating Committee has not retained its independence. Part of this is Dukakis' own fault: when, as in the case of Paul Liacos, the Judicial Nominating Committee did not come up with the name Dukakis wanted, Dukakis came up with Liacos' name for them, then made the appointment. (Liacos turned out to be a fine judge.)

In another far more sinister case, when Atty. Ted Harrington — who had prosecuted the renowned musician, art transporter, and jail escapist Myles Connor for murder — was up for a judgeship, he found himself confronted by one of Connor's lawyers on the Judicial Nominating Committee. This lawyer happened to have worked for a firm that had numbered Mafia members among its clients. (Harrington was not my source for that bit of information.) As Harrington explained it to me, the lawyer in question queried him about his decision to prosecute Connor and nothing else, then voted against his being made a judge — a recommendation Gov. Dukakis followed.

The worst-case-scenario here, if one assumes the lawyer was corrupt and that his former firm represented the Mafia in more than a legal sense, is the spectacle of the Mafia telling of a naive Gov. Dukakis whom and whom not to make into a judge in Massachusetts. The best-case-scenario, if one assumes that the lawyer was honest and that his former firm's Mafia connection was purely coincidental, is a Judicial Nominating Committee that has conflict-of-interest built into the way it operates.

Let's here assume the "best case." What it means is that Gov. Dukakis' Judicial Nominating Committee has no real, structural independence. For, independence is no independence when subject to the good faith of the governor and the governor's appointees who constitute the Committee's membership. Most of the time the governor and the nominating committee probably do act in good faith. But both have shown that in the "crunch" they will let politics and personal preference carry the day at the expense of the independence of the committee.

The Judicial Nominating Committee therefore fails, for it is in the "crunch," not in the easy cases that independence is important. Since the Judicial Nominating Committee is not truly independent it has not prevented this governor from adding his share of hacks to those appointed by other governors. And that is the first, very important aspect of the problem of mediocre judges.

The reform that we probably need is the creation of a truly independent body to review judicial appointments. In the Federal system the U.S. Senate must approve all judicial appointments, and frequently performs this role with great distinction. Some equivalent to the Senate's role is what we need in Massachusetts. Perhaps the independently elected Governor's Council, which has the statutory responsibility of confirming judges, should be upgraded. Perhaps an independent examining body should be created, a body to which appointments would be made by a variety of state officers including minority party members.

What is certain is that we need to take much more care in the appointment of judges. To do this we need to impose a mandatory system of scrutiny on our governors and on our potential judges. For, if this most well-meaning of governors can have found ways around the unfriendly recommendations made by his own appointees on the present Judicial Nominating Committee, then the system is unsound and we have much to fear under a less scrupulous governor.

In short, Gov. Dukakis' Judicial Nominating Committee was, as I indicated, a praiseworthy attempt to improve upon the nominating performance of previous governors. But the mediocre judges out there are living proof that we now need a better system of review.

Another Barrymore story: When John took a nip from a flask after leaving a cemetery, a stranger said: "If you have no respect for the surroundings, you might have some for me. I am 97 years old." "There doesn't seem to be much point in your leaving the place," Barrymore said.

Cranberries and potatoes, Thanksgiving favorites

"Over the river and through the woods to grandmother's house," is a jingle that prompts so many to view New England as the only place to be at Thanksgiving time.

Not only do visitors want to see "The Rock,"; outsiders look upon Boston as the center of American culture, history, learning and medicine. I have a yellowed, 50-year-old copy of the Boston Traveler given to me by the late Edna Phillips and it features an article by a mid-western describing the Boston scene in 1936. That was when Boston's United Fruit Company had made the banana a staple American food.

The article's author wrote: "John Hancock probably never sawa banana. Curious crowds at the Philadelphia Centennial Exhibit in 1876, gazed in wonder at a bunch of them. Today, Boston's United Fruit makes the banana, once a rarity, a staple American food." And so, from the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club Cookbook," what could be more appropo than their

Banana Shortcake
1 box vanilla wafers
3 sticks of butter
2 eggs
2 c. confectioner's sugar
4 bananas, sliced
1 can crushed pineapple, drained
1 lg. container cool whip
Cherries and crushed nuts

Crush box of wafers with one stick of butter, melted and press into 9 x 13" pan. Beat together eggs, sugar and remaining sticks of butter for 15 min. Spread over wafers. Layer bananas and pineapple over mixture and cover with cool whip. Sprinkle with cherries and nuts and refrigerate overnight.

A traditional part of our Thanksgiving meal are native cranberries which the Pilgrims combined with meat to make a cake called pemmican. Basically dried meat and dried cranberries chopped up, mixed together and shaped into a patty, they used to take pemmican along when they were off on a day's hunting. Don't you think Barbara Brown's recipe is far more preferable?
It's called a

JELLIED CRANBERRY RING.
1 lb. fresh or frozen-fresh cranberries
1 1/2 c. water
2 c. sugar

Combine berries and water in saucepan. Bring to boil and lower heat to simmer 15 min. Rub mixture through a sieve. Return to pan. Add sugar. Bring to a boil, lower heat to simmer for two min. Pour into 3 1/2 c. ring mold. Chill 'til firm. To release, run small spatula around inside of mold; dip mold briefly in pan of hot water. Turn onto serving plate.

Stalwart Brahmans were quitting Beacon Hill for the suburbs back in the 30's, but the Globe article said it was their trade and financial genius that resulted in Boston Harbor having America's largest drydock, the world's greatest fish processing and in volume of ocean-borne passenger traffic. This is a good time of year to think of America's past and our Yankee tradition of making do with what is already on hand when it comes to cooking up a meal. Here is Millie Carr's way with potatoes, particularly good as party fare, for they can be made up the day before.

GOURMET STUFFED POTATOES
6 baking potatoes
1 8-oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
1 4-oz. can deviled ham
1 tsp. onion flakes
3-4 T mayonnaise

Wrap each potato in foil. Bake at 400 for 1 hr. and 15 min. Combine cheese, ham, flakes and mayo-set aside. Unwrap potatoes. Cool and slice skin away from top of each. Carefully scoop out pulp, leaving shells intact. Combine pulp and cheese mixture; whip until smooth. Stuff shells with this mix; sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 350 for 15-20 min. Serves six.

Happy Thanksgiving to all our good cooks and a toast in gratitude to our many readers who through the corner of the MARINER have shared with others their pleasure incooking. Now as we begin the grand December rush, we all will welcome your recipes and suggestions for making holiday foods. Just send them to me care of Box 25, Marshfield Hills, 02051 . . . Joan . . .

THE DRAGON'S DUNGEON — By CLAIRE McDONOUGH

Time is money and just as hard to manage

"I'm sorry," I told the Dragon, "but I can't meet with you right now. I'm busy preparing a column. However, I can give you two five minute appointments before dinner. Would you like 8:35 to 8:40 a.m. and 3:12 to 3:17? Or maybe 10:36 and 4:28 would suit you better?"

The Dragon looked confused. "I didn't ask to meet with you at all."

I nodded. "But I'm practicing. I can manage my time much better if I have a system for avoiding unexpected interruptions. This will result in greater over-all productivity."

The Dragon groaned. "You're taking another one of those self-improvement courses, aren't you? It's going to be as bad as it was when you took assertiveness training, isn't it? When you kept telling people, 'From now on, I'm going to assert myself around here. If it's all right with you.' "

"I don't think it'll be that bad," I told him. "All I have to do is learn to manage two exciting and demanding careers, deal with a household, maintain high caliber relations with my husband and children, find time to interact with the family pets, pursue my political activities, engage in meaningful and relaxing hobbies and reserve sufficient space for planning and implementing long and short term personal goals and objectives. Shouldn't be too difficult."

The Dragon raised a quizzical eyebrow. "Too difficult for whom?" he asked politely. "Let's for the moment ignore your bland assumption that you're the one who does all the housework. Are you telling me that I only get to talk to you twice a day for five minutes? And I have to have an appointment?"

"Not at all. We have several options here." I consulted my Timeline book.

"We could meet once a day for 30 minutes. Or for an hour twice a week. Or if you're looking for quality time, I could block off a three hour segment for you every month."

The Dragon pondered briefly, then nodded. "This could free up some time for me to do a little pursuing of my own," he commented. "Where are you learning all these wonderful things?"

"It's state-of-the-art time management," I told him. "I'm taking a series of 4 hour long seminars, and the instructor worked out a step-by-step program just for me, based on my answers to a questionnaire I filled out a month ago."

"I remember that questionnaire," the Dragon mused. "It was the one that asked if you could put up with conceited people even though they brag or show they think too well of themselves. And if you have strong feelings of guilt. And if you are comfortable with sloppy, untidy people. And if you would rather have a moderately paid, uninterestng job that is secure, or an exciting, well-paid job with an element of danger. You were convinced the C.I.A. was recruiting and that you were going to wind up delivering weapons in Central America."

"That's the one," I agreed. "They also asked if I was afraid of mixing with strangers because of danger of infection. Then I wasn't sure who was doing the recruiting.

"Anyway, the result was an 84 page manual that indicates I'm great at planning routines, good at setting goals, so-so at completing tasks, less good at defining limits, and rotten at handling demands. Well, all that's going to change. From now on anyone who wants my time has to have an appointment. My manual says that for me successful self-improvement depends on realistic controlled development of new and better habits. I have to put a great deal of energy into defining limits."

"Very interesting," the Dragon conceded. "What did he tell you in class?"

I avoided his eyes. "Nothing. I got busy at work and I forgot to go."

The Dragon sighed. "If anyone ever needed a time-management program . . . But so long as you have your book out, how about giving me three hours tonight?

"After," he leered, "the kids are asleep."

"If you thing we can outlast the kids I'll pencil you in," I told him. "But it's going to cost you. Remember, my time is valuable."

He thought for a minute. "Okay. But it better be quality time."

At the South Shore Science Center . . .

The parents and tots program at Norwell's Natural Science Center provides an opportunity for parents to share outdoor learning experiences and adventures with their children. Emphasis will be on sensory awareness and experiential learning. Dress to go outdoors. The program will be held rain or shine unless Norwell schools are closed. Join Naturalist Barbara Devine for the next session. Classes meet Fridays from 10 to 11:15 a.m., Dec. 5, 12, 19. Prepaid registration required (members/$23; non-members/$28). Fee includes parent and tot; additional child is $7 for members and $8 for non-members. Call 659-2559 for registration information.

CHRISTMAS CRAFTS

Usher in the month of December with this potpourri of clever Christmas craft ideas. Jini Foster, Christmas Enthusiast, will assist you in making a paper patchwork star, Scandinavian heart ornament, cinnamon spice ball, silver basket, hearts and stars garland and a be-ribboned gift box. Bring a pair of scissors; all materials' costs are included. Come, catch the Christmas spirit, Monday, Dec. 1 from 9:30 a.m. until noon. Prepaid registration required (members/$10; non-members/$12). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

MONAHAN ADVENTURE

Explore this woodland-edging saltmarsh with Naturalist Barbara Devine. The dry grasses rustle as you check for signs of the mink who lives here. Mantid egg cases hang suspended, becoming visible only at third glance. The striking geometry of the marsh mallow seed heads awaits your visit. Meet at the Science Center on Wednesday, Dec. 3. The program is from 9:30 a.m. to noon. Prepaid registration required (members/$3; non-members/$4). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

KENYA LUNCHEON

Gwen Ferrini, world traveler, will take you on a fascinating journey to the African continent followed by a most appropriate luncheon: chicken with fragrant rice, salad, Gwen's own Kenya tea and fruit dessert. Please join us on Friday, Dec. 5 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Prepaid registration is required (members/$7; non-members/$9).

HOLIDAY WORKSHOP

What better gift than one that is handcrafted? Children will have an opportunity to make wrapping paper and greeting cards, a terrarium, spice ball ornament and much more! Start your Christmas season with us, Saturday, Dec. 6. Grades K-2, 10 a.m. to noon; Grades 3-6, 1 to 3 p.m. Prepaid registration required (members/$9; non-members/$11). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

NATURE GIFT SHOP

The holiday season is fast approaching and the Nature Gift Shop is the perfect place to get that special gift for the hard to please—and not so hard to please—person. We offer a wide assortment of gift items, cards (including potpourri cards!) gift wrap and stocking stuffers. The parking is easy, atmosphere is friendly and the hours are convenient—9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays.

EARTHWATCH—TURTLES

Dr. Ross, Associate at the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard and noted expert on sea turtles, will give an illustrated lecture on work done for the World Wildlife Fund of Switzerland. Included in his presentation will be Atlantic Green, Loggerhead and possibly Leatherback turtles. This Adult/Family lecture will be held Thursday, Dec. 11 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Pre-paid registration required (members/$3.50; non-members/$4.50). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

HOLIDAY STARGAZING

Darkness falls early in December which makes it a good month to head outside with a telescope! Using the telescopes of the Astronomical Society you can see the Andromeda Galaxy, the star cluster in Pegasus and the planet Jupiter. Viewing will be followed by a short indoor slide talk and question period with Rolf Egon, President, South Shore Astronomical Society. Friday, Dec. 12 from 8 to 10 p.m. Pre-paid registration required (members/$4; non-members/$5). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

BIRD FEED SALE

DON'T FORGET!!! Pick-up days for the bird seed sale are Saturday, Dec. 13 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 14 from noon to 4 p.m.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and is open 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays. Trails, exhibits, library and gift shop. Free admission.

'Success breeds success' for Cohasset sports

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Over the past few years, the name Cohasset has been synonymous with championship.

Cohasset's athletic prowess has spanned many sports: football; soccer; basketball; field hockey. Each team has reached remarkable heights.

This town has one of the smallest schools in the league; it is one of the smaller high schools in the state. Yet, while the numbers are stacked against it, Cohasset continues to acheive. Why?

Cohasset's coaches and administrators offered a number of explanations.

"It's just a combination of a superior group of athletes in two or three grades," Athletic Director Clark Chatterton commented. "I've been in Cohasset more than 35 years, first as a student, then as a spectator, coach and athletic director.

"In those 35 years," he explained, "I can't remember another student body that on paper, looked like it would do as well or better than any team in the past 35 years at Cohasset."

Chatterton added, "Success breeds success," and that feeling has caught on at Cohasset High School.

"There seems to be a lot of spirit in Cohasset," Superintendent Stephen Hart remarked. "We recently had a pep rally and everyone seemed to be involved. A lot of that is because the teams are winning."

He added, "It's kind of hard not to be enthusiastic."

According to Football Coach Phillip Pisano, the school's enthusiasm adds to the winning momentum of its teams.

"The athletes get a lot of support from the student body," he said. "And that positive atmosphere helps them to succeed."

Of course, coaching has also played a large part in the Cohasset success story.

Hart noted, Cohasset kids have been coached competently since they were very young, in town recreation programs.

'The best' team leaves a fine legacy at CHS

There were a lot of smiles after last Thursday's skillful victory over Hull. The tears were hidden.

For the seniors of the varsity football team, Thanksgiving marked their last time in a CHS uniform. The team that gathered the most wins in 38 years at Cohasset High, has hit the showers and immersed themselves in the record books.

For this year's seniors, it is a time of bitter mixed with the sweet.

Phil Pisano said without hestitation, "this is the best team I've ever coached."

Athletic director Clark Chatterton agreed. "This was a great, great team. This school hasn't seen this kind of all-round team in many, many years. It was definitely the best I've ever seen at this school."

This was the year, and so quickly it is ended.

But for the seniors, who will move onto college next year, this season was filled with incredible memories and friendships. "We're more like a family than teammates," co-captain Jeff Soltesz said. "There's no hatred or jealousy there. We've known each other since eighth grade, so we're very close."

There were 12 seniors who will be leaving the varsity squad after this season. Most of them played together in the freshman squad during eighth and ninth grades.

"They were the primary reason for our success this year," Coach Pisano claimed. "They were our prime movers.

"They've worked together for three or four years and have committed themselves since that time.

Hub Shipping addition completed the old fashioned way

Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Curious bystanders wonder if it's a hull of ship. When the foundation was being poured, perplexed neighbors thought Hubert van der Lugt was digging a pool for his employees.

What is being constructed on the side lot of Hub Shipping Co. is not nearly so bizarre. But it is unique.

With painstaking care, patience and an appreciation of fine craftsmanship, Charles Brine of Kingston is overseeing the construction of a 26-by-39-foot addition at the headquarters of this international export company located on Elm Street.

Using tools, many constructed of wood by hand, Charles and Bob Brine are completing the oak and pine frame for this addition. The Brines are the only carpenters in this area, he said, who work the "good, old-fashioned way."

No metal - no nails, no screws, no bolts, will ever touch these solid wood timbers.

"It's a lot more work," Charles said, "but it's so much more rewarding than framing an addition the 'normal' way. It's a much more beautiful way of working - all these beams will be exposed from the inside of the addition."

While chieseling the notches that will be fitted with wooden joints and pegs, Brine noted, "this was the way barns were built three and four hundred years ago. Many are still standing, so it must be a good, solid way of construction."

Timber frame, according to the Kingston resident, is a form of the popular post and beam work used in home construction. Timber frame is unique, he explained, because he uses dove tail, mortice and tenon to join the beams, connecting the solid timbers

Fink to reorganize Historical Society

A transition in leadership is bringing changes to the Cohasset Historical Society.

Recently, Charles Fink of 17 Summer Street assumed the presidency of this organization, a post long held by Connie Parker of 36 Parker Avenue.

At the society's meeting Tuesday, Fink presented his plan for a structural reorganization,which he says will make the historical society more effective in serving the community.

"There is now a need to reorganize the historical society," he said, "so we can carry on and expand some areas of critical need."

The primary way the society serves the town, he explained, is by preserving the town's past and making it available to the public.

The major focus of of the new Fink administration will be the building of a financial endowment fund to support the expenses of the society and to expand its service.

"The annual budget is getting to be more in line with the nature of the society and requires more of a financial foundation than we have," he said.

Fink added, "I'm not sure how we're going to Notice of groundwater change

The board of water commissioners recently notified the state of its opposition to the proposed change of groundwater classification from Cohasset Heights Ltd.

In a letter to the state Division of Water Pollution Control, the commission stated that CHL applied for a change in groundwater classification for the stream flow off Scituate Hill. "Please be advised that we believe that the discharge from that area does enter our Sanctuary Pond and then flows into the watershed of our Sohier Street wells," commission chairman William Montouri stated.

The chairman added, "we are opposed to the downgrading of any tributary to our water supply system, particularly with the actions the town has taken to protect our limited facilities for future generations."

Official Bicentennial designation

The Cohasset Constitutional Bicentennial Committee, a town committee established to head Cohasset's observance of the nationwide celebration marking the 200th anniversary of the United States Constitution,announces the receivingof notification from the National Bicentennial Commission of the acceptance of Cohasset as an officially designated Bicentennial Community.

In a letter from Mark W. Cannon, staff director of the National Commission in Washington, the local Committee was informed of the approval given to Cohasset's application. Thus, Cohasset becomes one of the growing number of communities receiving official designation from the National Commission, a government agency headed by retired Supreme Court Justice Warren Burger.

The Nationwide observance of our Constitution's 200th anniversary will last for three years, covering the time span betwen the writing of the Constitution in Philadelphia in 1787 to the final ratification by the necessary nine of the original thirteen states in 1789.

The Cohasset Constitutional Bicentennial Committee urges all citizens to participate in its Bicentennial observance during the coming months. The remarkable American Constitution is the founding document of our nation, and from it we derive both our freedoms and our responsibilities as citizens. It is with profound respect that we prepare to celebrate its first two hundred years as the cornerstone of our enduring Republic.

'Eastwick' feathers

The flurry of excitement created by the filming of "The Witches of Eastwick" last summer spread into Scituate last weekend.

Visitors to the Christmas bazaar at the Mount Hope Improvement Society in the West End of Scituate discovered "genuine souvenirs of Eastwick,"- inch-long white feathers that were used during one of the scenes.

One of the crafters was told that thousands of feathers were flying all over the place near the Cohasset police station, so she and a friend scurried to fill several trash bags full to use in stuffing toy animals for the bazaar.

The leftovers were put in a container and sold for a penny apiece.

Teachers win Horace Mann grants

Supt. Stephen Hart reported that $12,324 in grants will be distributed to Cohasset teachers for work in six different areas.

The Horace Mann grants have become available through the passage last year of Chapter 188, the state education reform act. Each school system in the state was awarded a varied amount, depending on the size of the system.

The selection of teachers who would receive the grant monies was "bittersweet," Hart noted. Many teachers developed grant programs, and more than $30,000 in new education programs were proposed.

"We were overwhelmed," he commented, noting that distribution of the grant money was completed according to rules approved by members of the Cohasset Teachers Association and the school committee.

The decisions were made based on the value of the individual program to the entire school system, Hart explained. "We're pleased that 13 teachers will be affected by this proposal."

The assignment committee, which included the high school principal, Supt. Hart, a school committee member and an association member, made allocations from $600 to $2000 for this school year.

The grants were awarded to :Ed Leary, $2,000 for his work as a grant writer for the schools. All information of available grants will be forwarded to him, Hart said; Gale Vivale, $600, Florence Ely, $600; Barbara Fanning, $600; and Ed Leach, $600, for the development of curriculum for special needs students who are unable to participate in the core academic classes; F. Alan MacDonald, $2,000, for the development of an outdoor education curriculum for the alternative school and the normal classroom; Elizabeth Beatson, $625, Kenneth Cisnerso, $625, Don Kelly, $625, and Marie Schleiff, $625, for the development of a proposal for a junior high team approach to teaching; Coleen Lucas, $1,000 and Jean O'Malley, $1,000, to work on a sequential K-12 art curriculum.

"I'm pleased with the overall direction," Supt. Hart stated. "I'm just a little sad we couldn't fund them all."

In other business Monday night, the school committee approved the February AFS student exchange visit to Napa Valley in California. AFS director George Fortin explained that students from the Vintage High School in California will be visiting Cohasset at a later date this year. Twenty students are expected to participate.

The school committee has scheduled 15 budget sessions, beginning January 5. A draft of the proposed 1987-1988 school budget should be prepared by then. January 26 will be the first meeting to discuss the proposed budget.

The next meeting of the school committee will be Dec. 15 at which time there will be a presentation of the alternative school.

'Godspell' cast makes debut in school

The cast and crew of "Godspell" made their first public appearance this week.

At a meeting of the school committee Monday night, members of the upcoming high school production talked about the long weeks of preparation prior to the performance.

The cast members will perform the musical Friday, Dec. 5 and Saturday, Dec. 6 at the high school. Tickets are on sale at the school.

Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher introduced the students and their director, Ron Emmons, to the school committee. "Cohasset's drama program has been well known for years. I dropped into the last play's rehearsals and I thought it would be a good idea for you to meet them, to know what goes into the production of a play."

This is the fifth production of "Godspell" for director Emmons, who said each performance is unique and enjoyable. He noted that this year's cast is comprised of students involved in many activities. Athletes run off the playing fields into rehearsals, he said, and others are involved in various students organizations. "Almost everyone here does a cross-over activity," he noted, highlighting the unique quality of this year's cast.

Another special feature of this production, he stated, was the inclusion of 1976 CHS graduate and drama standout, Stewart Replogle. In addition to performing, Replogle is an assistant director.

The individual cast members, amid giggles and gaffaws, introduced themselves to the school administrators. They include: Holly Ludow, Laura Kuhn, Katie Tolini, Peter Kasperowicz, Joe Mazza, Liz Buckley, Cindy Bell, Karin Anglin, Lisa Shumaker, Michelle Meagher, Jenna Emmons, Replogle, Phil Mahoney, John Durant, and choreographer Andrea Millis.

In answer to the committee's questions, they explained how the cast has spent seven to eight weeks in rehearsals. Replogle added, "with this play, we really tend to take it home with us. It's that type of play, we're more conscious of what's preached in the play."

Emmons noted that the crew rehearsed last Wednesday from 7 to 11 p.m., and again on Friday and Sunday nights.

Everyone is on stage at all times during this play, they explained. There is no set, and everyone is responsible for setting his own props. Each performer designed his own costume, and art teacher Colleen Lucas helped to gather the outfits and sewed whatever needed to be created or repaired.

"She's been there all the time," Emmons stated.

"She's been real supportive, she cares," several of the students added.

The director noted there were only nine characters in the original version of "Godspell." But through the past four Cohasset productions, Emmons has created new characters and split others.

"Godspell" has attracted a big advance ticket sale, he added, noting the problem has been in attracting kids to see their peers in student productions. "Well over 60 or 70 percent of our audience is made of adults."

Shumaker offered, "kids seemed scared to go to plays, but this play is so much fun to watch. The audience gets involved. So tell your kids to come. This is as much a student activity as an athletic event."

Mahoney, a member of the 1986 CHS football squad, said this isn't his first performance. "I'm a ham in class," he explained, "and in the 10th grade, Mr. Emmons poked Bob Durkin and wanted him to audition for a play. Bob brought me along, I thought he was kidding around."

Mahoney got the part and was later named a member of the All Star cast of last year's production of "Voices."

"That very first play," Mahoney said, "I really enjoyed. It was a lot different than I thought. That's why I'm where I am today. At my second rehearsal, I said to myself, 'my God, this is fun!' "

Committee chairman Joseph Nedrow, reviewing the list of 15 upcoming school budget sessions, noted, "it's things like tonight that make these 15 meetings worthwhile. That kind of input like tonight, keeps us going."

Samuel Polito wins bank's winsurfing contest

Samuel Polito of Cohasset recently won the grand prize of a Surf-Sailor Windsurfer in BayBank Norfolk's Grand Opening Contest, celebrating its newest branch in the Cushing Plaza.

The windsurfer, with its 12-foot sail, was an awesome sight to Mr. Polito, who exclaimed, "I can't even imagine trying to control this thing. I've never even been on a surfborad."

Customer Service Manager Jean Casey drew the winning postcard which culminated six weeks of hopeful entries at the branch.

The second prize, a Columbia 10-speed bicycle, was awarded to Judi Whitney of Cohasset. Alice McWilliams won a Salton Beachcomber AM-FM cassette radio as the third prize.

Highway Dept. readies for snow

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The realization that winter is on its way fell recently with the season's first snow.

If your summer ended when the Red Sox fell out of contention, you might not yet be prepared for snow. But the Cohasset Highway Department is ready for action.

Sand and salt has been stockpiled for the winter campaign and the battle plans have been drawn.

"When it starts to snow," said Harold Litchfield, Superintendent of Highways, "we're notified by the Police Department and we send out our three spreaders to cover their designated routes."

He explained, each truck makes two trips. They take three-and-a-half hours to cover the 37 miles of accepted roads and 11 miles of private ways in town.

"We use a mixture of three-parts sand to one-part salt," Litchfield said. But there are several areas designated as no-salt zones for environmental protection.

Motorists should be mindful that the following roads normally receive no salt protection: Aaron River Road; Flintlock Ridge Road; Bates Lane and King Street from Route 3A to Reeds Corner.

If a storm dumps as much as three inches of snow on the ground in Cohasset, then the plows hit the streets.

The town has 11 plows to open its roads, and hires four four-wheel drive vehicles to work on private ways, Litchfield said.

Clearing the "main drags" are of highest priority to the highway Department, he added. "Our routes are set up so we get to every main road in Cohasset quickly."

He commented, "We are hooked up with the Fire Department, so we can swing our equipment around and shoot down to assist them if necessary."

The superintendent expressed concern regarding the behavior of some motorists in the snow.

"When they see it snowing and the road is turning white, the first thing they should do is slow down," he said.

Even after a clean-up operation, driv-ers should be cautious, he added.

"There's a lot of ledge in Cohasset," he explained, "and water can run onto the road and freeze."

If your driving doesn't get you in trouble, dumping snow or parking on the street are other things you should avoid doing.

"There's a parking ban in effect from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m.," he said. "People are not allowed to park on the street for more than one hour."

The ban went into effect November 15, and the police have been attaching "courtesy tags" to remind folks it's a no-no.

Litchfield said, persistent street-park-ers will be fined if they don't take the warnings seriously, because such activity impedes the Highway Department's sanding and snowplowing operations.

"We have a pretty good batting aver-age in Cohasset," he commented. "If it's 20 degrees and the sun is out, the roads will blacken up pretty fast. After a clean-up operation, they should be in good shape within three hours."

Of course, it might take a little longer for the roads to clear if people who shovel their driveways dump their snow into the street.

"Residents who shovel their driveways should not shovel the last ten feet of their driveways until we're done with the roads," Litchfield said. "We'll just come along and fill them up again when we plow tthe roads."

The Highway Department has had problems in the past with private contractors, he said, who push snow onto the roads when clearing driveways.

"If an accident is caused because a contractor has dumped snow in the road," he added, "it could come back on that particular person in a lawsuit."

According to the Farmer's Almanac, this coming winter will provide the Highway Department with plenty of work, and could cost the town a lot of money.

Litchfield noted, if Cohasset gets a storm that dumps six inches of snow on the roads, the sanding and plowing effort could cost the town as much as $5,000 to $6,000.

With the recent realization that winter is on its way, the forecast gives Cohasset residents several reasons to start shivering.

Liquor license transfers approved

Selectmen unanimously approved requests Monday for the transfer of liquor licenses for three local businesses.

New owners of Cohasset Central Market, Scott's Liquors and Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant are now waiting further approval from the Alcoholic Beverage Commission, board chairman Diane Sullivan said.

Paul Logue, new owner of Hugo's, was represented by attorney Robert Galvin, who noted that Logue had ample experience managing barrooms, and his family would be helping with the operation. Galvin added that Logue would also be applying for an entertainment permit.

Addressing the issue of serving alcoholic beverages to minors, selectman James Gallagher said, "We're very concerned with the serving of minors in barrooms, and I just want to warn you we'll come down very hard if it happens."

"I can reassure you I've dealt with this issue before," Logue said, "it won't happen."

Representing Robert Anton, new owner of Scott's Liquors, was attorney Charlie Humphreys, who said the Anton family will "operate the liquor store in the same theme," but that the store will undergo some cosmetic changes. The new name for the business will be Liquors Unlimited.

Gallagher again brought up the issue of minors being served alcoholic beverages, asking Anton if he was "aware of the serving regulations for minors."

Anton said he has been working closely with Dick Scott to help him become more aware of the regulations involved.

In other business, the board was addressed by Cohasset resident Joe Wolfe, representing the South Shore Christian Youth Group — an unofficial organization affiliated with Cohasset, Hull and Scituate churches, according to Wolfe.

Wolfe requested permission from selectmen for a waiver of fees for use of the town hall Dec. 12-14, from 7-10 p.m., for the presentation of a seminar, "What's All This Fuss About Rock and Roll?"

Wolfe said the program was conducted by Joe Vieira, a former producer of rock shows and albums, who is now devoted to exposing "both the evil and good" in rock music. There would be no admission charge for the three-day program filled with slides and lectures, Wolfe said, emphasizing that parents were encouraged to attend.

"This is not meant to scare anyone — it's meant to be informative," Wolfe said. He also predicted that approximately 123 youth would attend, judging from the last turnout for the same program.

One question raised by Sullivan was whether or not Wolfe had contacted the police for extra patrolling those nights, since more than 123 people might attend. Wolfe said he did not contact the police.

Another question, asked by selectman Cliff Mitman, concerned the liability exposure of the event, since the group was unofficial.

Executive Secretary Don Andrew responded, saying the town policy would cover the event because the organization was non-profit, and was for students through grade 12.

Sullivan also asked Wolfe if he had first asked the Cohasset schools for use of an auditorium.

Giving two reasons why he didn't want to pursue the schools, Wolfe first said the town hall was a "good, central location." Secondly, he pointed out the schools were reluctant to house the program due to the religious overtones. He added the schools said it would be "unconstitutional" to support the program.

Asked how he was going to advertise for the upcoming program, Wolfe said the information would be posted on church bulletins throughout the area.

After some further deliberation, the board agreed to waiver the fees for the hall, explaining that only minimum janitorial fees would have to be paid by the group.

Sullivan further pointed out that the decision was also subject to acquiring police coverage the nights of the program.

Another item of interest was Sullivan's report on last week's South Shore Coalition meeting. A member of the organization, she requested support from the town for $1,000 for future coalition endeavors. The board agreed to schedule the issue for discussion at a future meeting.

Marshalairs to perform

Marshfield High School's "Marshalairs" will present a program of Christmas music at the meeting of the South Shore Republican Club Monday, Dec. 15, at the First Parish Church hall, Norwell Center.

The 1 p.m. program will be preceded by a social at noon. Hostesses will be members from Scituate.

All members are reminded to bring handcrafts, baked goods or white elephants to be sold at the Christmas boutique, the club's major fund-raising activity.

Those CHS athletic achievements

Chatterton added, spring and summer leagues and camps continue to benefit the various squads of Skippers.

Cohasset faces stiff competition in the strong South Shore League, but a relatively new arrangement has also benefitted the locals.

"People couldn't understand it when we brought in Scituate and Whitman to the South Shore League and made it into two divisions, small schools and large schools," Chatterton said.

"I think it's helped us over the past three years; we play the big schools once and the small schools twice per season. So, it gives the small schools a shot at their own championship," he explained.

Chatterton laughed. "In the past couple of years, the small schools, and Cohasset especially, have been beating the big schools too," he said.

The athletic director said he believes Cohasset's tough regular season schedule prepares the Skippers well for tournament play.

Both Chatterton and Hart praised the efforts of Cohasset's booster clubs, which together may contribute as much as $35,000 per year to the Skippers in terms of equipment, banquets and trophies... Lately, a lot of trophies.

"They've just been tremendous," Chatterton said.

For all these contributions, perhaps the most important elements in the Skippers' collection of successes are the athletes themselves.

At least in Cohasset's case, you can reject the image of the big, dumb jock. Success breeds success, and the Skippers' stars have made their marks in the classroom as well as on the playing field.

"We recently had an award night for academics," Hart said. "It was interesting to see that many of the kids who were receiving awards in athletics, also were receiving them in academic areas."

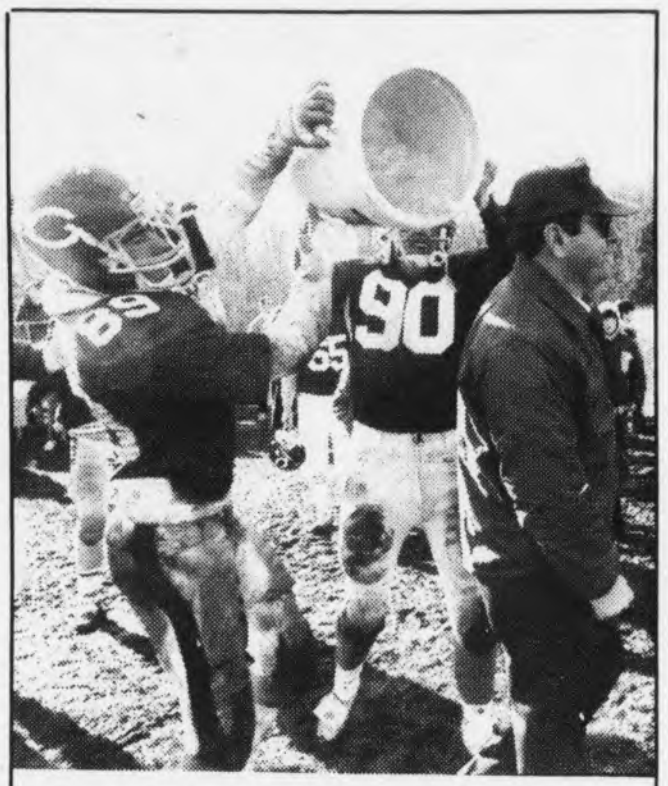
"They're a smart bunch of kids," Soccer Coach Dan Magner agreed. Eleven of his Eastern Mass. Champion soccer players recently made the honor roll.

"This school is quite demanding," Chatterton commented. "It's interesting; when exam time comes in the winter, most of the kids bring books with them on the bus if they're going to an away game.

"They hit the books as hard as they do working on the field," he added. "I think part of the reason is because they come from families who realize the value of an education and have been there themselves."

Hart concluded, "When you develop a winning tradition, it seems to carry over; kids get used to winning. I think there's a general overall spirit now at Cohasset of competetiveness, and a feeling that they can do well."

And so they are.



Coach Phil Pisano didn't realize he was about to be dumped on. Members of the victorious CHS football squad washed down the winning coach as the clock ticked away. (Alan Chapman)

around town

☐Jeffrey C. O'Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. O'Neill, received a letter in varsity football at Belmont Hill School. He was chosen All-League honorable mention running back.

O'Neill attends Belmont Hill as a five-day boarder, a program which permits students to live at the school from Monday through Thursday and to be with their families on weekends.

☐December 8 is a big day "around town", at least it is for one special gal...a very happy 60th birthday to Jay Jay Healy, and many more to follow!

☐Add another dancer to the list of Cohassetites that will appear in the Nutcracker on December 16th, Melissa Weir. Melissa is in the third grade, and will be playing the role of a polichinelles (which is a dancing doll).

☐Amandana Design of Cohasset is holding their third annual show and sale of beautiful hand-knit sweaters to buy or order on December 5 at the Cohasset Community Center. There will be custom designs available by Laila Roukounakis, many one of a kind, perfect for holiday giving. If you are stumped for the gift for that special someone, here is your answer...drop in any time from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and bring a friend!

☐If you don't have the "Christmas spirit" yet, a trip to Cohasset Village will put you right in the mood. White Christmas in Cohasset arrived last Sunday, put on by the Cohasset merchants, and the village is enchanting! Christmas lights adorn every store, and all of them are full of Christmas goodies. After all their work to make our town one of the loveliest on the South Shore, be sure to shop locally!

☐A fond farewell to Walt and Nancy Sweeney, they certainly will be missed!

☐It was nice to see former CHS football coach John Leone at the game last Thursday! He really enjoyed watching the team and its big win over Hull, as did we all. And so did his little daughter Amanda, who isn't so little any more!

☐Congratulations to Kathy Brayton for the Council on Aging, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Helen Hooper for the Social Service League and Bob Jordan (who accepted for the Community Center). They were recipients of the Visiting Nurses Association of the South Shore community services awards, presented by George Laban CEO of the VNA Management Services.

☐It sure was great to hear that Mike (Mucker) McNeill was in town over Thanksgiving. As everyone knows, the McNeill family now resides in Hudson, NH...but we bet their hearts are still in Cohasset! Even Jack, though he is now in business in New York City.

☐Welcome to Charles Fink as the new Historical Society President, who replaces Connie Parker after her 12 years at the "helm". Connie was honored recently by the Society, and was presented an award as well as being named President Emeritus. We sure hope you enjoy your much-earned retirement Connie!

☐Hats off to Mark C. LaVange, who recently earned his Eagle rank. Mark is a member of Troop #28 and is a Life Scout. His project was gathering information from Cohasset families, then turning it over to the Fire Department and the local Civil Defense Corps. That will help the departments in case of fire and/or emergency. One person that is especially proud is his grandfather, Irving C. Blossom, who is the oldest living Eagle Scout from Cohasset! Mark makes it the third generation to earn the prestigious award.

☐Be sure to catch the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home's Christmas fair on Dec. 5, where you can find craft items, baked goods and raffles. It will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

☐And, it's the last reminder from the Village Fair that will be held on Saturday. Here's to all of the gals that have been working all year to make what is sure to be a grand success. Do your part and be sure to get there, you'll love it.

☐ Congratulations to Joseph and Michelle Bonomi, who are brand new parents of a baby girl, born Nov. 6 at South Shore Hospital. Won't it be fun when Santa visits their house this year.

☐Welcome home to David Vivian, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Vivian. David has spent the last seven years on a tour of duty for the navy as a navigator.

☐Happy birthday to Laura Pompeo, who will be spending the special day at her college, UNH. Hope that it is a happy one Laura.

☐This is the newsy time for one and all, be sure to let us know all about your happenings...and, happy shopping for the big day, see you downtown!

So much talent

When someone at this week's school committee meeting inquired whose back to pat in congratulations for the impressive state assessment test scores, another replied without hesitation, "the students."

We agree. In addition to the dedication of our teaching staff, and parental nurturing, it is ultimately the students who have achieved and should be duly credited.

But our recognition should not be limited to academics.

This week, the committee listened to the members of the high school cast members of "Godspell." They were exuberant, silly, sassy and talented. As they performed a song from the production, the room was silenced into quiet admiration.

This was not a professional acting ensemble, but they sounded like one. From what source does all this talent eminate? In a school system as small as Cohasset's why do we have such an abundance of quality?

Again, we set forth an example on our playing fields. Here, this small seacoast community has excelled on the soccer and field hockey fields, in football, and of course, don't forget our basketball team which is just warming up the courts for another heart-stopping season.

Why is Cohasset recognized as an athletic leader, a forerunner in dramatic presentations, and is now widely acknowledged as a system with excellent academic acheivement?

Does it have to do with our level of income, being a community that affords to develop programs and activities for our children? It could be said other communities may be capable of developing similar programs, but refuses that choice. Is it the type of family that resides here, devoted to children and the environment we create?

Certainly there is a variety of answers to these related questions. But isn't it a pleasant problem to peruse?

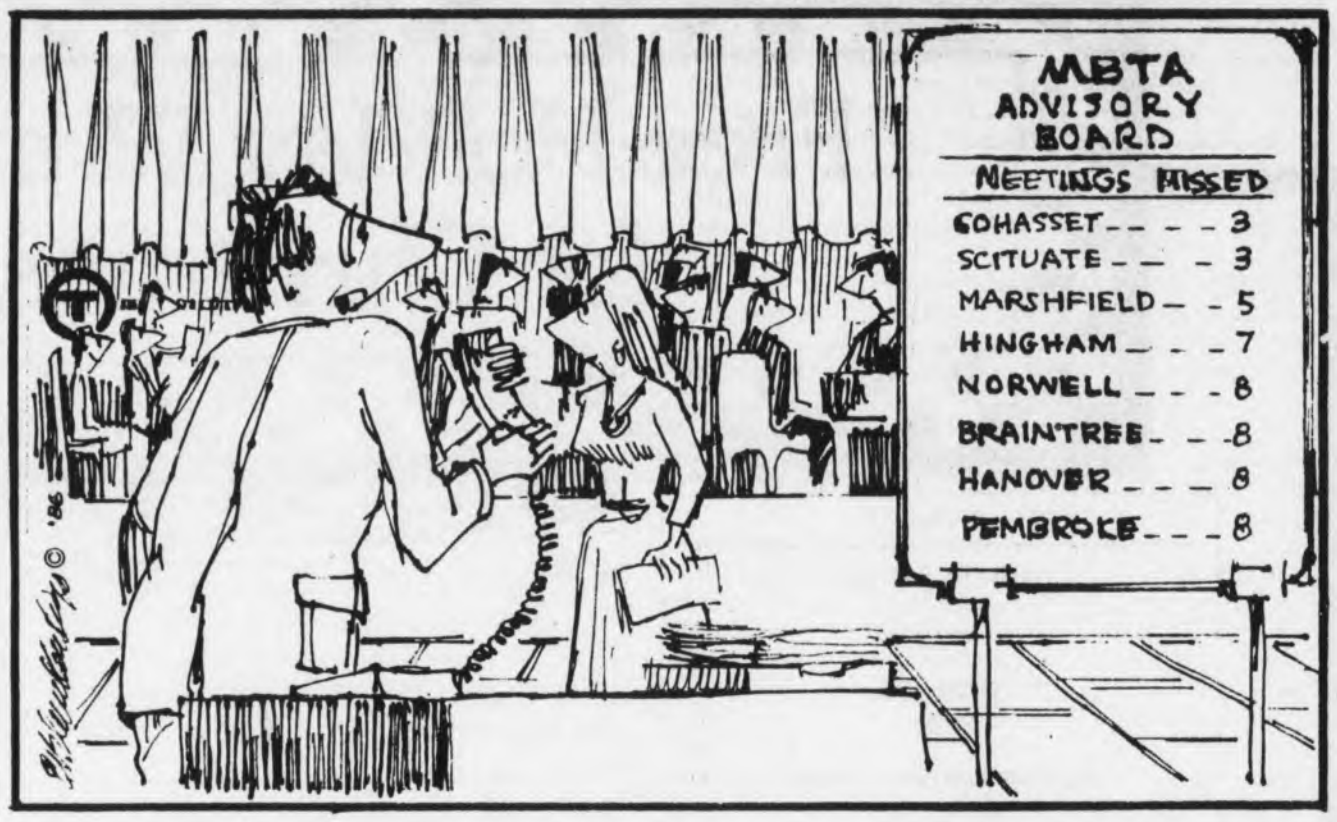
It's nice to hear our kids are exceptionally talented, be it athletically or academically, or both.

And isn't it great when we can converse with them, and say with all candor they are 'nice' individuals.

We should all be proud - of our students who are reaching new levels of success in all their endeavors. And we should be equally proud of the parents, teachers and everyone else who has contributed toward their attainment of these lofty goals.

A little pat on the back can sometimes go a long way.

NEWS ITEM — South Shore communities — members of the MBTA Advisory Board missed more than half of the nine meetings held between May '84 and May '85. The 78-member board controls the T budget and its evaluation before finalization. Board members of towns receiving no direct service are frustrated by small impact of their vote. Pull-outs considered



"...They all say they would have been here if they hadn't taken the Red Line...!"

Elected officials care about the town

Letters

To the Editor:

The premise that the "court system is too often viewed as a panacea for all ailments" is a good one, but I take exception to two statements. It appears untrue that, "our town officials are failing to abide by their rules and regulations;" but rather most court cases result simply because our officials are adhering to the rules. My feeling is that if Cohasset's majority wants to change our more stringent bylaws and regulations, they should petition to make them more lenient.

The second statement that, "Certainly, there are some inferior officials sitting on town boards whose sole delight is to rebutt the testimony of residents . . . and relish the aggravation they . . . can render proponents of a plan," is an insult to Cohasset's dedicated volunteers on town boards. I have yet to see one who could be characterized as "power-hungry . . . whose only reason for serving is self-ishly motivated." Rather, I find our elected officials to be concerned abut their duties, and dedicated to upholding the town's rules.

Parking ban instituted

The town will be subject to a winter parking ban until March 15.

The ban prohibits on-street parking for any more than one hour between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. It affects all Cohasset roads.

Those who violate the ban will be rewarded with a $10 fine by the Cohasset Police Department.

Some advice on replacement surgery

To the Editor:

This was my experience at Carney Hospital for two weeks.

It was my thought it might encourage others to have this new treatment for arthritis knee replacement.

The world of orthopedic electronic technology, Sutter CPM™ 2000, the most progressive, continuous passive motion device available today, is now in use at Carney Hospital Patients with total knee replacement, after a few days of healing of the incision, is placed comfortably, according to patients leg size, on this special arrangement, and this slow up and down motion is to loosen the tightened back of the knee muscles.

In five days the patient, with the aid of a walker, and a well-trained therapist, is walking carefully.

The well-trained staff at Carney Hospital, is responsible for this writer to return, walking, in two weeks.

Choral Arts Society performs Dec. 6

Trumpets and trombones, timpani and percussion will be part of the Choral Art Society's salute to the Christmas season, in a program of Renaissance and contemporary works for voices and brass ensemble.

Anne Watson, the Society's music director, will conduct the concert Saturday, Dec. 6, at 8 p.m., in St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Corner of Route 3A and First Parish Road, Scituate.

Boston composer Daniel Pinkham's Christmas Cantata and English composer John Rutter's Gloria are the two contemporary works, with Renaissance music by Praetorius, Schein, Handl, and Gabrieli. Singing the brief but taxing solos in the Rutter Gloria are sopranos Paula Carroll of Scituate; Susan Earle of Hingham; and alto Linda H. Baker of Duxbury. Mary Depperman of Scituate, the society's accompanist, will be the organist.

Tickets are available from chorus members or at the door, and concert-goers are reminded to arrive promptly for this popular affair. Carol Loring of Duxbury is in charge of the reception for audience and performers following the concert.

For information call 834-8962 or 545-3273.

Choral Art Society singers from Cohasset include M. Rita Burke, Karen Spencer, Ronny Wach, Millard MacNeill and Peter Tolman.

Singers from Norwell include Patricia Clark, Thomas Clark and Marguerite Pierce.

Virginia Waterman of Hanover and Wilma O'Keefe, Beverly Conant and Constance Crosby, all of Pembroke, also will take part.

This program is supported in part by the Mass Arts Lottery, as administered by the Scituate Arts Council.

Marshfield singers include Marilyn Barrett, Gail Citron, Paula Clough, Frances Connolly, Alice Humez, Margaret Peters, Janet Roberts, Bettie Jane Ruggles, Lois Hall, Carol Nickerson, Claire Perkins, Barbara Richardson, Linda Schneider, Dawn Whitten, Henry Dunbar, Kurt Schneider, David Humez and Joseph Thome.

Other Scituate singers include Paula Carroll, Mary Duffey, Phyllis Ketter, Diane McCarthy, Carol Miles, Marguerite Stout, Ann Bertone, Joan Dorr, Ellen Ford, Ada Kahl, Robin MacFarlane, Sheila Meleca, Gail and Henry Webster, Judith Whittemore, Gray Curtis, John Chesley, Owen Fryling, Peter Leavitt, Paul Miles and Philip Morin.

Businessmen donate equipment to local police

It's an expected reaction. If police are the first to respond to an emergency, they will initiate the necessary steps to resolve the crisis, or alleviate the problem.

Rarely does one consider the risks an officer may take by resolving that situation. And if it is a medical emergency, the chances may be more precarious for the responding officer.

Cohasset Police Officer Robert Grassie explained, "It's something all police officers have talked about for a couple of years. Since all the publicity about AIDS and herpes and other viruses, police officers have been concerned about the contact we have in a medical emergency."

Police officers, by law, are the "first responders" at a situation in which the authorities have been notified. Be it a fire or a medical crisis, despite the call for an ambulance, the police cruiser is most often first at the scene.

"And if we find that person has had a heart attack, or was electrocuted and his heart stopped beating, we are the ones to begin CPR or mouth-to-mouth," Officer Grassie explained.

There is an increased reluctance on the part of all police officers, he said, to administer mouth-to-mouth on persons who may have a communicable disease or virus. "And the recent publicity about these new viruses has increased the hesistation of a lot of officers to perform CPR," he noted.

Dan Nardo, owner of Reflections hair salon on Elm Street, and Peter Cappozolli, owner of Cohasset Imports on Rte. 3A, discussed this dilemma with the police officer. They decided to react.

This month, the local businessmen donated two ambu bag kits to the police department. These bags will enable a responding officer to administer CPR without physical contact with the victim.

Officer Grassie explained that the bag, which includes a small face mask, is placed over the victim's mouth and nose, and with a squeeze of the bag, oxygen is released into the person's lungs. No germs can be transmitted from the victim to the officer, so there is no danger in the procedure.

"When I went to my annual CPR training course last year," the officer said, "there was a lot of talk among the officers about this problem. In Cohasset, we had the same fears, because there was no other way to help a victim, other than to give him mouth-to-mouth."

"We couldn't believe," Cappozolli noted, "that the department was not equipped with the ambu bags. When I talked to Officer Grassie many months ago, it was the first time I realized what a problem it was for our police officers."

Two businessmen, (1) Dan Nardo of Reflections and (r) Peter Capozolli of Cohasset Imports, present Officer Robert Grassie with emergency ambu bag kits. (Kathy Perlow)

And Nardo explained that as established businessmen, they are frequently asked to donate to charitable organizations and causes. "We figured this was for a great cause," he said, "and it would help out everyone in our town."

The two men each donated $150 to purchase the kits. The bags will now become a component inside the trunk of the two police cruisers. Officer Grassie explained that the Cohasset department includes the two marked cruisers, an unmarked detective's car, and the chief's vehicle. The ambu kits will be stored in the two patrol cars which are used around the clock.

"It's something we've really wanted a long time," Officer Grassie said in appreciation of the donation. "The town wants its police department to function in a professional manner, but they don't realize that more often than guns and flashlights, what we need is medical equipment to use in emergencies.

"We had to depend on a donation from the community for this equipment, and that's too bad. But we're really glad we have it. It's good to know the businessmen of this town appreciate the work we're doing. And now, we're going to be able to do our job a little bit better."

Village Fair set for Dec. 6 at Cohasset Common

Holiday shoppers looking for unusual gift items, bargain hunters on the prowl for attic treasures and youngsters in search for fun, will once again find their wishes fulfilled at Cohasset's 46th Village Fair Saturday, Dec. 6. The fair will transform the Cohasset Common area into a "mall-for-a-day" from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

A final week of round-the-clock preparations by scores of volunteer workers will precede the opening of buildings—and a tent—around the Common to throngs of shoppers, many of whom come year after year from a distance to take advantage of this fund-raising event staged by five town churches.

Marsha Silvia and Linda Campbell work on the Boutique Table for the Dec. 6 Village Fair.

A variety of features will cater to a range of separate audiences and tastes. In the Town Hall shoppers will find a wealth of hand-crafted gifts in the Boutique; children's toys, novelties and clothing at the Children's table; plants, cheeses, popcorn, grabs, and the ever popular Snack Bar. There, too, will be a table selling tickets on a major raffle for valuable prizes, as well as individual raffles conducted by the separate tables.

Between the Town Hall and the adjoining Congregational Church, a tent will be set up to handle the sale of hundreds of wreaths on which workers have been adding decorations daily throughout this final week. The scale of the Fair has grown in recent years to the extent that the Town Hall could no longer handle this feature.

Food will be a focal point of activity in the Congregational Church, with the popular Chowder Bar occupying a large section of the vestry. The remainder will be given over to tables piled high with homemade cakes, breads, pies and pastries, cookies and candies.

Across the Common in the Unitarian Parish House, the Bargain Bazaar will attract flea market and yard sale addicts on the lookout for used articles of all kinds, as well as book browsers searching out bargains in used hardbacks and paperbacks.

St. Stephen's Church will also be the scene of daytime activity, housing the Secret Room for children where they can shop in private for their parents and other family members. More than 1000 items priced from 25 cents to $3 will be on sale, ready to be gift wrapped for the children shoppers.

Barring inclement weather, the Common itself will be a scene of activities aimed at youngsters, with Santa arriving at 10:45 a.m. to be established in a bower of greenery and available in his sleigh to take orders for tots and have his picture taken with them. Nearby will be balloons for sale, with face-painting, clowns, and other features of particular interest to children.

All these features have been planned and arranged for by a Central Committee, headed this year by Annette Sawchuk as general chairman, that has been working on the project for months. With the Congregational Church taking the leadership responsibility this year, Mrs. Sawchuk has been assisted by Susie Coley, Wilma Vanderlugt and Phyllis Peck from that church. Representatives from the four other participating churches to the Central Committee are June Simeone for St. Anthony's; Carol Martin for the First Parish Unitarian; Sheila Wallingford for St. Stephen's and Cindy Dedes and Linda Argeros for the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church.

While many of the volunteers have been working weeks and months in preparation for the big day, some are called on only at the last moment for the final preparations. A group headed by Bill Bell, for example, will take on the task of gathering tables from all the churches and schools for the set-up that begins in earnest on Thursday evening. With the return of the Village Fair Dinner to St. Stephen's on Saturday evening, the transportation group will have the added assignment of moving the tables there after the close of the Fair itself in mid-afternoon.

Dot Parmenter and Phyllis Peck busily finish decorations for the Boutique Table in time for Saturday's fair.

The chore of cleaning up after the Fair so that the buildings and the Common are free of debris and ready to greet churchgoers the next morning, will be the joint responsibility of the transportation group, assisted by a clean-up committee headed by Wayne Sawchuk, Chris Kierce and Brian Fahey.

Except for the final accounting to determine the amount to be distributed equally to each of the five churches, Saturday will bring an end to this year's responsibilities for the chairmen of the various Fair features. These chairmen include the following: baked goods and candy, Kiki Booras; boutique, Carol Sandblom; bargain bazaar, Gail Bell; children's activities, Kate Caldwell; children's table, Jane Long and Nancy McLaughlin; books, Alice Daunt and Helen Hooper; chowder bar, Ralph Coley; grabs, Dawn Vivian; Greek food and salad bar, Jim Dedes and Nick Argeros; cheese, Hamilton Tewksbury; dinner, Tish Jordan and Ruth Nedrow; plants, Sheila Wallingford; popcorn, Marilyn Hobson; Santa Claus, Jeff Steele; snack bar, Phil Shockman; raffle, Lou Simeone; Christmas tree, Annette Sawchuk; and wreaths, Jean Manganero.

The chemistry was perfect for CHS gridders

They've worked so hard for the past two seasons to become as great as they are now."

Superlatives are used to describe the senior members of this team which ran up a 9-1 record for 1986.

"Not only were they football-talented, but the chemistry between the seniors was great," their coach continued. "They mixed well together - they had to, to do what they did this season. They're all different personalities that grew together like a big family. They understood each other. They didn't care of individual success, but were concerned about the total success of the team."

Soltesz recalled his 'under'whelming response when he was elected a co-captain. "I wasn't too excited, because I felt that any one of the seniors could have been captain. They all would have been great," he said. "Every senior on this team took charge."

The team's record, wracking up the most wins in one season in 38 years at CHS, will be fondly remembered by Soltesz. "And I guess I'll never forget our Thanksgiving Day game. It was the last time we'll ever play together. It was so good, we had been together so long.

"We were an exceptionally talented team in every position," he added. "I believe this was the best team Cohasset had fielded in a long time."

Teammate Jeff Lydon, an offensive and defensive tackle, has played football for four years.

"But this team was special," he admitted, "probably because of the closeness. It's grown over the years. I think it was special, because we were varsity sophomores when Coach Pisano took over the team three years ago."

The senior said, "Coach Pisano has been lenient with us, and makes us enjoy playing the game so much more. He wants us to just have fun. And we did! We even looked forward to practices because we had so much fun.

"Yeah, we were talented. But I think this team was great because of the closeness we had. Everybody on this team was an All Star."

The fun began during their years on the freshman football squad. "Coach Silvia and Dooley were so nice to us. My brother, Jimmy, was on varsity, and I was introduced into the team that way. But all my friends have been together since the eighth grade. As we've gone along, we've been winning and that's so great. You give 100 percent and everyone is proud. We seem to get so much more attention in a small school. Everyone is behind you, being very supportive," Lydon added.

John Dockray was a defensive tackle on this year's 'star' squad. He too, was a member of the CHS team since his freshman year.

"What I'll remember about this year is how great this entire team was," he said. "I'll also remember how close we all were.

"When we were in the eighth grade, everyone talked about how good we were going to be. In the eighth and ninth grade, we started winning back then. Everyone kept saying, 'wait until the 12th grade.' So this year for all of us, has been like a dream come true. Even after last year's strong season, this was the best."

Dockray, who has talked about the team's prowess with others, agreed the 1986 squad "was probably the best in the school's history. We were flawless. We were great offensively and great defensively."

The senior noted that because of complex mathematical reasons, Cohasset may not have reached Bowl status even if they remained unbeaten.

"We knew there was a chance we couldn't get into a post-season Bowl game, even if we won all our games. So when we lost the game to East Bridgewater, we were able to concentrate on one game at a time and it was easier for us," he added.

Coach Pisano recalled the horror shared by the seniors when their teammate and first string quarterback Shaun Corkery was injured. "It wasn't exactly like a death in the family, but it was almost as bad," he said. "I think we all became closer, to continue toward the goals we had set for ourselves. Initially, Shaun's accident was a tragedy - he was such a high caliber player who couldn't finish his senior season. But the kids realized they would do everything to continue their goals and dig a little deeper."

Next year's players will naturally "have big shoes to fill," the coach continued. "Our whole offensive and defensive lines will be leaving. But the seniors left a big trademark with this team - the younger kids can look up to that, hopefully. They left an image that the younger kids can shoot for. They've seen what these seniors have accomplished through hard work and talent. Hopefully, we can carry on and continue the trademark the seniors established this year."

What has been more important to their coach than winning games however, is that the seniors enjoyed their time together.

"These kids gave 100 percent of themselves, and if they won, great. But it was so much more important that they had a good time and enjoyed the sport," he added.

His seniors would agree. "We all played together. That's what I'll remember about this year," team member Dockray stated. "We've all been through the tough times and the glory, too."

Custom Costumes captures the imagination

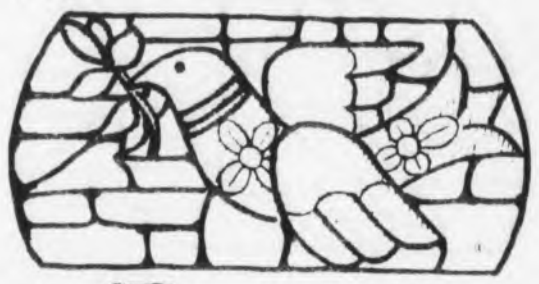
Capture the heart of someone special by giving him or her young or old a soft sculptured whimsical animal created by artist Joni Jensen for the South Shore Art Center "Holiday Shoppe" at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

These little fellows excite the imaginations of children and adults.

Working under the name of Custom Costumes, Jensen exhibited her soft sculptured animals at the Brockton Art Museum's show of children's toys. She has produced soft sculpture props and costumes for a number of organizations on the South Shore.

Shoppers are welcome in the Center's "Holiday Shoppe" Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturday's 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The 1986 "Holiday Shoppe" collection includes hand painted blue and white miniatures by the late Peter Anderson, a noted Time-Life magazine photographer; finely embroidered wall hangings by the Hmong women of Laos; pre-Columbian artifacts from the Tom Lucas collection; handcrafted pottery by Judith Rossman, Marsha Klein, and Sandy and Ralph Terry; holiday wreaths and ornaments; and works of art.



Marion Bush is one of the volunteers who staff the Art Center's holiday shop located at 103 Ripley Road. (Alan Chapman)

South Shore artists display 'blue ribbon' talents

Five blue ribbons were awarded in the South Shore Art Center's annual member's Blue Ribbon Exhibit, an exhibit which gives Center artists an opportunity to show their work.

The exhibit which hangs in the Center's gallery at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset is a good cross section of work being done by South Shore artists. This exhibit gives the public the opportunity to see the talent that exists in the area.

Janet Blagdon of Needham and Scituate won a blue ribbon in the acrylic category for her semi-abstract landscape "Lilac, Dogwood and the Old Maple." In the watercolor category Mary Lizzotte of Norwell won a blue ribbon for a piece "Picnic," a still life of a festive table top picnic spread.

Another Norwell artist well known for her portraits, Constance Flavell Pratt won a blue ribbon for her pastel portrait titled "Gloria." A still life incorporating watercolor combined with newsprint and described as "Catch of the Day" done by Ottillie Brown of Braintree was awarded a blue ribbon.

In the category of photography, Cohasset photographer Eileen Mullaney won a blue ribbon for her untitled black and white photograph, a portrait study of two heads.

These blue ribbon winners were among the 48 works of art which will hang in the Center's gallery through Christmas Eve, Dec. 24. The works in this exhibit represent a good cross section of all the mediums and style of painting from abstract to realism. Many of these artists had modest beginnings in the Center and have grown and matured in their work through workshops and courses offered at the Center and in their associations with other South Shore artists.

RUDERMAN'S HANOVER

you'll find Ruderman's customers, and the reason...it's simple; and it all comes down to one word...VALUE.
There isn't any other furniture company anywhere in New England that does it the way we do...the others talk about the old days; the new days...but, we just keep on doing it our way...The customer services, the variety, the looks and the famous guaranteed brand names such as Thomasville, Sealy, Broyhill, Simmons, La-Z-Boy, Lane, Mersman and above all the price...Always specially priced and when we have a sale, it's below that... GUARANTEED!
Just consider for a moment how terrific we feel about our new Hanover store...It's our second new showroom in two years. Now we've got five. That's not bad when you opened your first showroom seventy-four years ago.
But, what's really unique about our story is that we did it in New England. Of all the areas in the Country; convincing a New Englander they are getting the best in value and having them keep coming back is the test and we've done it for 74 years.
So, from one New Englander to another, be impressed...drop in for a visit!

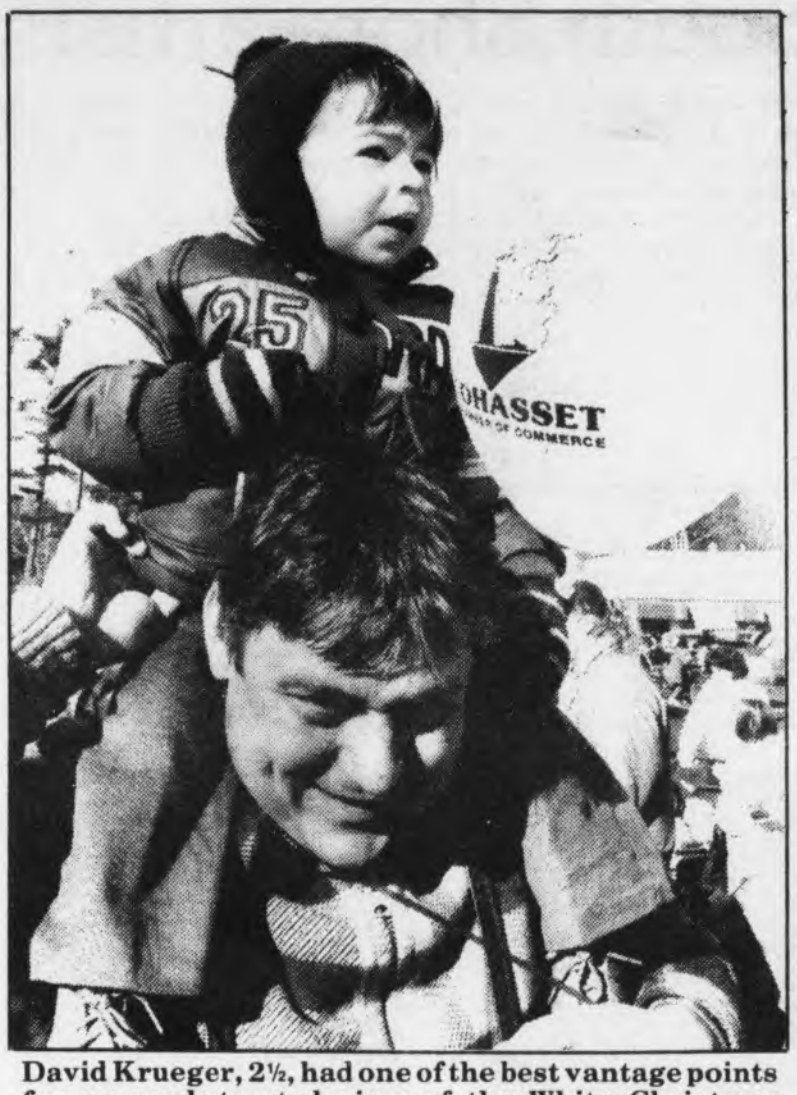
Ruderman's 6 Point Customer Satisfaction Plan
5 YEAR LIMITED WARRANTY
1. We will repair all manufacturing defects in structure and fabric for one year from date of delivery. For the next 4 years we will attempt to repair any structural defects, free of cost, but with no warranties or representations as to completeness of such repair, provided you bring the furniture to one of our stores. This limited warranty does not apply to carpeting, bedding, electronic goods, goods sold "as is" or to defects caused by normal wear and tear, negligence or abuse.
2. There will be no charge for labor or parts on any item covered by this warranty.
3. Any scratch, spot, stain, blemish, mark, tear or wrinkle reported within 30 days from date of delivery will be repaired to the customers satisfaction.
4. We guarantee you won't find a better price on the identical item anywhere in our delivery area under the same conditions of sale and service within 30 days of the date of your purchase. We're so sure that if you do we will refund the difference.
5. Our professionally trained sales consultants have been trained in planning, color and style coordination and we offer their in-store services at no additional charge.
6. Our 75 years of continuity. Ruderman's family owned and family operated. Here today and here tomorrow, growing stronger to serve you.

Russell Staples takes a firm grasp of Frosty's hand as many others await a similar opportunity.

Charlie Suter had a comfortable seat for the Christmas festivities which began Sunday morning from Cushing Plaza.

Bailey McDonald, 14 months, seems right comfy in the saddle. His mom, Rita, stands nearby in case of a serious buck from that Cohasset Common critter.



David Krueger, 2½, had one of the best vantage points for an unobstructed view of the White Christmas festivities. His dad, Andy, obliged the lift.

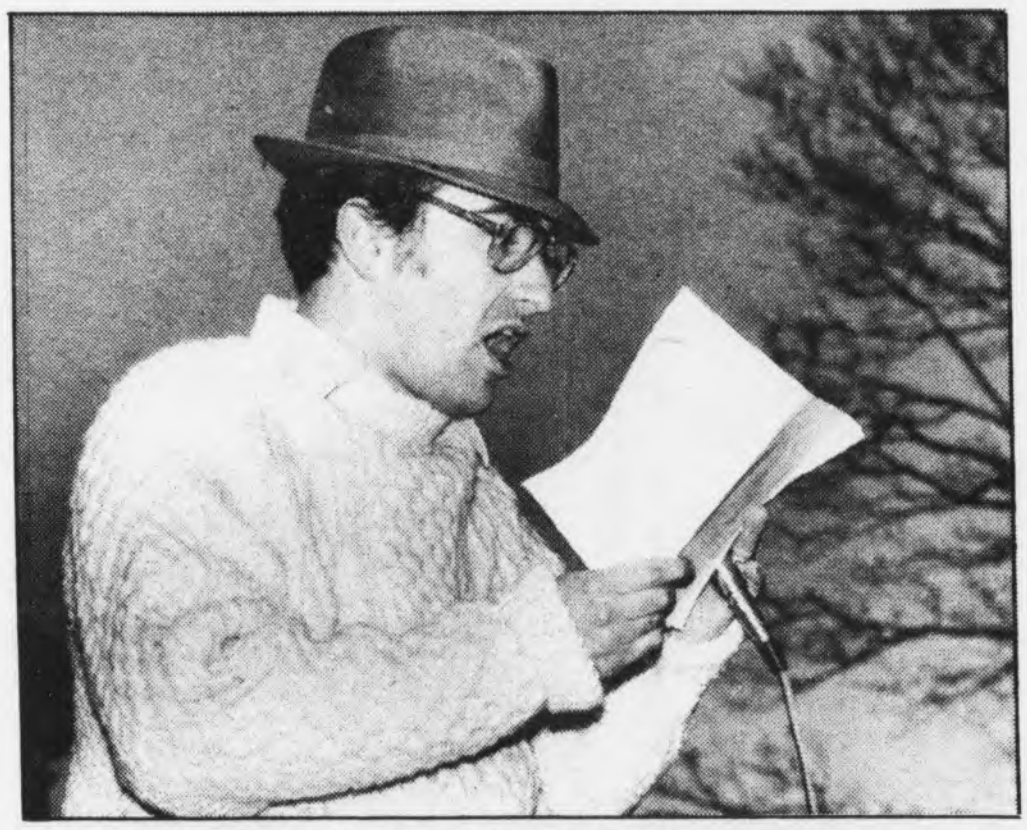
Erika King, one of Santa's main elves, awaited the anxious children who greeted Santa during his visit to Cohasset last Sunday.

Santa Claus has come



Brian Marks, CHS chorus director, leads the crowd in a series of seasonal Christmas carols. After Sunday, everyone is surely in the spirit!

As inevitable as Christmas itself is a bunch of balloons escaped into the atmosphere, caught on a tree along the Common.

Pretty Theresa sits with Mom atop Santa's lap for a family portrait at Cohasset Common.

Chorus stationary sale

The Cohasset Senior High Chorus is fundraising for a trip to Florida this spring. The group's performance locations hope to include world famous Disney World. The Chorus will be holding various activities to help defray the cost. We hope the entire community will support our efforts as we represent Cohasset.

Currently we are selling beautifully etched stationary sets, depicting Cohasset Common and Minot Lighthouse. They're perfect for holiday gift giving or personal use. If you'd like more information leave a message for Mr. Marks at the High School and someone will get back to you.

SADD officers elected

Congratulations to the newly-elected officers of the Cohasset High School Chapter of Students Against Driving Drunk. Mary Leonard is the new president, Carolan Hurley-vice president, Katie Tolini-secretary and Susie Camardo and Erin Powell are treasurers. A SADD rally was held on Tuesday Nov. 18 for all students in grades 7-12. Appreciation and gratitude to the Cohasset Parents for Drug Education for donating the money needed to purchase "Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk" bumper stickers, and also to Peter Cooke Advertising.

United Against Drugs

Cohasset students Jim Cooke, Leslie O'Grady and Derek Jacks and Health Education Coordinator Mike Gill participated in a "Live" broadcast on local cable television which teamed them with representatives from Hull High School as well as many concerned professionals from the South Shore, in a program titled "United Against Drugs" which aired Mon. Nov. 17, from 7:30-9 p.m.

CHS craft workshop

The Art Club will sponsor a Christmas craft workshop at CHS for students and teachers on Dec. 2, 3, & 4 after school in the art room.

Materials and instruction will be available for creating cards, ornaments and gifts. All are welcome!

Field trip to synagogue

Thursday, November 20, the entire ninth grade class at Cohasset High School took a field trip to a synagogue in Newton. There the Cohasset students and their advisors were greeted by Rabbi Richard M. Yellin of Congregation Mishkan Tefila.

For the past several years, students in the ninth grade humanities classes (English and social studies) have visited the synagogue and nearby museum. Rabbi Yellin gave a lecture on Jewish values, religious observances and history. A question and answer period followed his talk.

At the completion of the field trip students were asked to write personal letters thanking Rabbi Yellin and expressing their reactions to his lecture and their visit.

Teachers who accompanied the students were English instructor Fran Cronin and history teachers Joan Foley and Joseph Bouchard.

Students in the ninth grade social studies and English sections study Biblical times and the origins of the world's great religions.

Fashion show Dec. 8

The CHS senior chorus is presenting a Fashion Show, "Class Up Your Act," on Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Clothing and accessories for teens and adults will be featured from the Casual Male in Cushing Plaza, and Stacy's in North Scituate. Apparel will be modeled by students and faculty. Admission price is $2. Refreshments will be available.

Get some great ideas for Christmas gifts as well as for yourself, and help fund the CHS chorus spring performance trip to Florida.

CHRISTMAS BOOK FAIR —

The Osgood PSO is sponsoring a Book Fair to be held in the Library at Osgood School December 8, 9 and 10. A preview of the books to be sold will be held Friday, December 5 during regular school hours. The Book Fair hours will be:

December 8, Monday — 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.
December 9, Tuesday — 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.
December 10, Wednesday — 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

As well as children buying books for themselves, please consider this excellent opportunity for children to buy books as Christmas gifts for friends and siblings and for parents to do their X-mas shopping. Parents — for your convenience shopping hours are extended Wednesday until 7 p.m.

Patrons needed for Godspell

Help the Arts Boosters help the "Arts" at Cohasset Jr/Sr. High School by serving as a Patron for Godspell — a timeless musical play to be performed by the CHS Drama workshop Friday, Dec. 5 and Sat., Dec. 6 at 8 p.m.

Tickets will be $5 at the door (high school auditorium). Or, you can order them in advance for $4 each at the CHS office.

GOURMET BOX DINNERS will be available for your eating pleasure before each performance (6:30-7:30 p.m.) in the "Fine Arts Cafe & Library Gourmet Grille." The price is $6 per box, including beverage.

PATRONS — Any amount you can contribute will be appreciated. The donations we receive during the year are used towards study awards, field trips, the CHS Literary Arts Magazine, Arts Recognition Night and the promotion of all musical, fine and literary arts and dramatic activities at CHS. Your donation must be received by Dec. 1 in order to be listed in the Godspell program. Patrons who contribute $50 or more will be entitled to two box dinners at no extra charge.

Early Release Dec. 11

Thursday, December 11, 1986 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

School	Buses Depart
Junior/Senior High School	12:20 p.m.
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

LUNCH WILL BE SERVED IN ALL OF THE SCHOOLS

This Early Release Day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff members at the elementary schools to conduct report card conferences and the staff at the junior/senior high school to participate in health workshops.

Energy poster launched

Eastern Edison Company (EECo) has launched its annual National Energy Education Day (NEED) poster contest for grades K-12 in schools throughout the service area.

NEED is an annual program designed to inspire students, educators and community members to work together on energy education activities. The goal of NEED is to incorporate energy education in all grades in all schools throughout the U.S. by 1990.

EECo President Arthur A. Hatch said: "This poster contest is one of the many programs sponsored by EECo that bring energy education to the youth in our area."

The contest theme for the 1986-87 school year is "Efficient Use of Electricity." Students should submit their poster entries to EECo by February 13, 1987. First, second and third place winners in four grade categories (K-3, 4-6, 7-8, 9-12) will be announced March 21, 1987.

Cohasset Worship

First Parish programs

Parish News: William Adam Janes born June 12, 1986, son of Ingrid (Gjesteby) Janes and Malcoln Dale Janes, was christened at the Meeting House on Nov. 16.

Married at the Meeting House Nov. 16, were Ronald A. Pavshak and Donna M. Richards.

Village Fair: Thursday, Dec. 4 at 9:30 a.m., the Bargain Bazaar needs the help of men who can spare the time for the transfer of the goods from the rectory to the Parish House. See you at the rectory at 9:30 a.m. !!

Village Fair Wreath Workshops: If you enjoy friendly chatter and good coffee, please come to our wiring and bow making workshops at Carmen Schram's, 28 Atlantic Ave., Wednesday mornings Nov. 19 and 26 from 9:30 until 11:30. There is a job for everyone!! We still need cones, pods, etc.

Music and worship committee:

At their meeting on Thursday, Nov. 13, the Music and Worship Committee developed the following Mission statement: to support the minister and the music director in providing a meaningful worship experience, to encourage lay participation in the creation and leadership of services of worship, and to seek evaluation and response to services from the congregation, and finally to explore ways to educate the congregation with regard to music and worship.

The next meeting of this committee will be on Thursday, Dec. 4, at 8 p.m. in the Parish House.

Community

Wednesday, Nov. 26 at 8 p.m. in St. Stephen's Church, the religious communities of Cohasset will join for a Community Thanksgiving Service. Lay and clergy leaders, musicians and choirs from each of the churches will participate.

The Thanksgiving offering received during the service will be given to Oxfam, America for Salvadorian Relief.

Participating churches include Beechwood Congregational Church, First Parish (Unitarian Universalist) Church, Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Second Congregational Church and the Vedanta Centre. The public is invited to share in this community-wide service. "Come, ye thankful people, come..."

Christmas Concert Tickets: Tickets are now on sale at the church office at $3 for our annual benefit Christmas concert to be held in the Meeting House on Sunday evening, Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. We look forward to another superb concert featuring the Unicorn Singers under the direction of Margo Euler. They will perform "The Christmas Story," Distler's masterpiece based on the familiar "Lo, how a rose e'er blooming" and other a-capella music of the season, as well as carols for all to sing.

Again this year we have designated Rosie's Place, a shelter for homeless women in Boston, as the beneficiary of our concert. To date we have 29 patrons. If you wish there is still time to become a patron of the concert by making a contribution of $25. Patrons receive two complimentary tickets. Don't miss out on this opportunity to benefit a good cause and to enjoy some beautiful Christmas music.

House of Prayer service

Sunday, December 7, House of Prayer Lutheran Church, 916 Main Street in Hingham, will celebrate the Second Sunday in Advent with worship service at 9:15 a.m.

Pastor Grant will conduct the service and preside over holy communion. Pastor Grant's sermon topic will be "On A Clear Day You Can See Forever." Coffee will be served following the service and an Intergenerational Church School/Adult Forum will be held at 10:40 a.m.

The theme of the Forum will be the path to Christmas and will focus on people and events leading up to the birth of Christ. There will be two special presentations about Advent traditions in other countries. Jorge DeLaMora will explain the Mexican tradition called La Pasada. Jorge is from Mexico City and currently an exchange student at Thayer Academy. Cheryl Nixon, a member of House of Prayer, will explain the Swedish traditions surrounding St. Lucia and the Festival of Light.

Coming special events at House of Prayer include the Children's Choir performing "A Night For Dancing" by Hal Hopson during the church service December 14, the cantata "Emmanuel" by Eugene Butler to be presented by the Adult Choir December 21, and the traditional "Living Manger" from 5:30 to 7 p.m. on December 21.

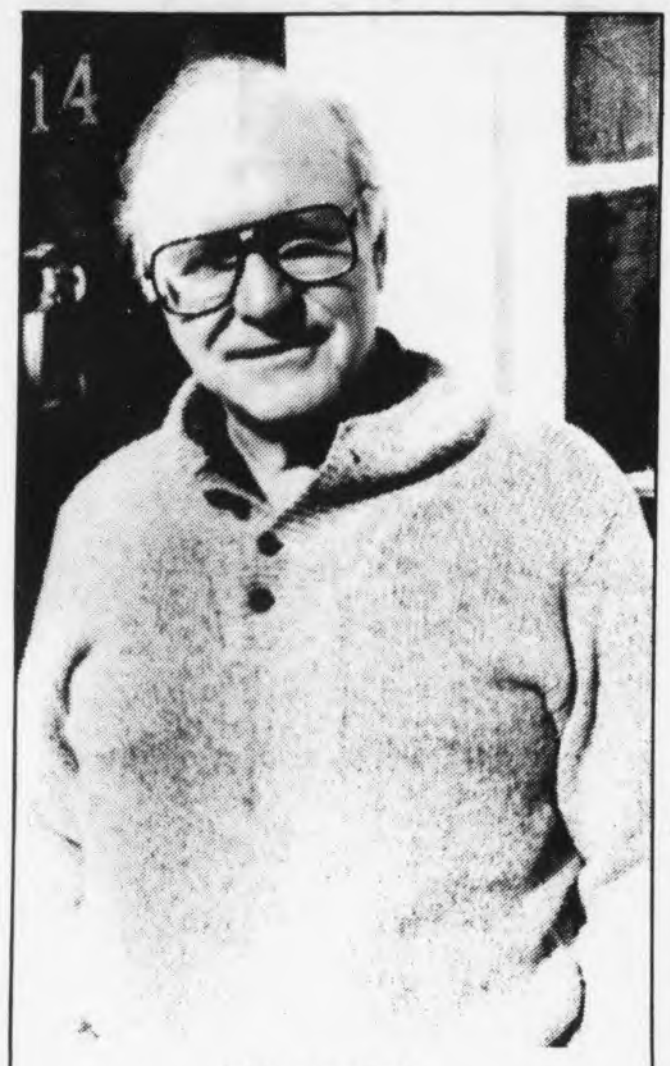
Charles Fink to reorganize Historical Society . . .



Charles Fink

approach it; the committee in charge of creating the fund will have to avail itself of expert consultation."

Currently, the society must pay for the services of curator David Wadsworth and for the maintainance and upkeep of the Captain Smith House, the Maritime Museum and the Lothrop House.

Fink said he hopes the new fund will eventually enable the society to provide a proper home, program and cataloguing for its extensive collection of gowns.

"That gown collection is world class," he commented, "second only perhaps to that of the Smithsonian Institute. We should do something to give it justice."

Fink said such a project would be "no greater challenge than was the acquisition and development of the Lothrop House."

A retired engineer from Raytheon, Fink has lived in Cohasset for 22 years and has expressed his interest in local history, especially marine history. He has served on various town boards, including a 16-year stint as chairman of the harbor committee.

He explained, he finds Cohasset's era of shipbuilding fascinating.

"Photographs from 1860 on, show the area without trees," he noted. "The timber was being used to build houses and ships and to keep people warm."

Fink said he is interested in the effect such activity had on erosion, and how erosion affected the bottom of the harbor.

The society offers harbor walks, as well as occasional house tours. Its museums are open during the summer and by appointment. Furthermore, the Lothrop House, which serves as the society's headquarters is available for meetings and receptions.

Fink said he hopes to continue the society's annual flea market and will continue selling photographic reproductions of the paintings in its collection.

Mount Holyoke anniversary

The Board of the Mount Holyoke Club of the South Shore met twice this fall at the home of Club Chairwoman Marion Barry of Hingham to make plans for the Club's participation in Mount Holyoke's 150th Anniversary celebration.

As the College approaches its sesquicentennial anniversary, the birthday of its founder, Mary Lyon, on Feb. 28, 1987 has been designated "Worldwide Celebration Day." On that day the South Shore Mt. Holyoke Club will join sister clubs here and abroad in honoring Mary Lyon,a pioneer in women's education.

Boston Camerata to perform Dec. 21

Members of the noted Boston Camerata will perform Sunday, Dec. 21 at 3 p.m. at St. Anthony's Church.

The Boston Camerata will present its traditional Christmas program entitled In Dulci Jubilo: Early German Christmas Music Sunday, Dec. 21 at 3 p.m. at St. Anthony's Church.

An ensemble of vocalists, accompanied by an instrumental consort will perform music from Germany that was composed over four hundred years ago, but some of which is still sung today to celebrate the Christmas season. Featured will be Christmas carols, motets and instrumental fantasias, including works by Senfl, Lassus, Praetorius and other great masters.

Ticket prices are $15, $12, and $9 and can be purchased at the Fleming's on 24 Elm St., Cohasset Village, or by mailing a self-addressed, stamped envelope to The Boston Camerata, 25 Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02116. Telephone orders with Mastercard or Visa will be taken during office hours at 262-5459 and with all credit cards through Concertcharge at 497-1118. Rush seats based on availability for $6 will be given to students under 25 with ID and to Senior Citizens at the door.

The Boston Camerata is an internationally-celebrated ensemble of singers and instrumentalists dedicated to bringing alive the music of the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, and the early Baroque.

Creating the old-fashioned way . . .

with wood fittings and pegs.

There is a certain satisfaction to this near forgotten artistry.

The Brines are not on the construction site each morning. Rather, they cut and notch the timbers at his Kingston base, and haul the 26-foot oak beams to the Cohasset location.

Monday, in the brilliant sunshine of the winter sky, Brine paused from the constant thud of his hammer. "I do it mostly for the personal satisfaction. I did a couple of 'stick built' jobs and there was too much hustle to get everything done in a hurry. I like this much more. It's not as quick, but there's a lot more craftsmanship to this type of work."

Brine attended the Corners Store school in Maine where he was taught the craft of construction without the use of modern machines. That was three and a half years ago, he said, and since then his interest has grown into a fulltime profession.

"I was a cabinet maker for a while," he said. "And I always liked working with wood. Creating timber frame homes is working with wood, not construction.

In fact, his home in Kingston was built by his own hand, using the timber frame method.

To Brine, there are two reasons why someone would want a home built this ancient way. "To some, craftsmanship is very important, and this is a unique form. And many people want to have the exposed beam look, and this is the best way to have it. Just looking at this frame right now, lying on the ground, you have a feel of what the interior of this addition will look like," Brine said.

Charles Brine chisels out a notch in the oak timber used to frame the addition at Hub Shipping Co.

That is what owner van der Lugt is striving for. In his plans for the addition, devised by Hingham architect Jim Shipsky, it was the owner's intention to keep the antique look that is so prevalent in the main office building.

Van der Lugt, an avid amateur historian, took a great deal of time and effort to restore the office located near the police station in Cohasset Village. He discovered that the original owner, Thomas Beal, had constructed the original two-story wooden structure. The lines of the home and its interior were very simple, van der Lugt explained during a tour of the office last year. "I wanted to keep this home the way Beal would have wanted it."

It was his firm intention that the 3,853 square foot addition be as closely aligned to the appearance of the original structure. "It's going to be as crooked as hell," he laughed, when asked how the two portions will compare.

A GREAT PERFORMANCE DESERVES AN ENCORE.

Vermont Castings has revolutionized the art of woodburning. Again. They did it the first time with the Defiant, a handsome, efficient woodstove with doors that opened for a view of the fire.

They've done it again with the Defiant Encore. With a strikingly beautiful design that will enhance any decor, a large, clear glass area for fire viewing, a super convenient ash removal system, and an incredibly clean-burning combustion system, the Encore is a tough act to follow.

Kingston builder constructs without nails

The addition, according to plans created by the architect, will not be straight lines, custom-made, plush-carpeted, glass and brick exterior. It will be clapboards, timber beams, tiles, and wood floors.

The finishing touch within the interior will be a huge, central working fireplace. Architect Shipsky actually toured a nearby home to view the fireplace in that antique home. The renovation work inside the main Hub Shipping office had uncovered a fireplace similar to the one in the other Elm Street antique. Once van der Lugt viewed the original masonry, he insisted the replica be added in this new building.

The two-story addition will include a large front hallway (site of the fireplace), and a porch connecting the existing building to the addition. The entrance will include an impressive cathedral ceiling. The second floor will house two offices, ample room to accommodate his cramped employees in the main building.

The owner and his craftsmen agree that completing this job the old-fashioned way is best. Brine, in fact, rarely uses power tools, opting to imitate the methods used by carpenter of long ago. Mallets and chiesels are his tools.

"This way of working keeps us going," Brine chuckled, "but we're not getting rich. Money is not my main motivation."

Completing the frame for an addition this size would take the 'normal' construction crew about three or four days. The Brines began cutting the frame about five weeks ago. They are currently in the process of assembling the beams and joining them on the site.

Hopefully, Brine noted, the frame will be raised by the end of next week. That, he assured, will be "quite a sight.

"It's just like an old fashioned barn raising. Instead of using neighbors to raise it, we'll get some help from a crane. It's pretty heavy with these solid oak timbers," he added.

And because the smooth oak frame will be exposed from the interior, the Brines will be able to sheathe the exterior in a superior insulator. It is called a stress skin panel which is a sandwich consisting of an exterior covering, sheetrock and foam insulation. "It's perfect for timber frames," he said, "and it's an excellent insulation. Most buildings can't be covered with this because the interior frame will show. But that's the whole purpose with timber frames homes. My home is covered with this, and we heat our whole house with a wood stove that we put on a couple hours at night."

The addition will be attractive from the outside, Brine promised. The structure will be covered with clapboards, with a red cedar shingle roof. "It's a unique design, with a dormer on the front and back. That's unusual for a timber frame home, but it will look great," he stated.

In the meantime, the Brines are taking a back seat to modern technology, assured the results will endure and the quality will quiet all critics.

"We have a lot of passersby come along and ask us what the heck we're doing. I think they'll all be pleasantly surprised next week," he confided.

Democrats share with homeless

If you've ever been cooped up with youngsters and no television for a rainy weekend, you can sympathize with the guests at the Long Island Homeless Shelter's latest building - a temporary shelter for women and children.

So the Cohasset and Hingham Democratic town committees pooled their resources with the Scituate Democratic Town Committee and purchased a television for the home.

The brand new color T.V. has been delivered to the shelter.

Obituary

Elmer Hale Pratt

Elmer Hale Pratt, 77, of Cohasset, an architect, illustrator, and authority on the design and manufacture of builders' hardware, died Sunday, Nov. 30 at a Plymouth nursing home, following a brief illness.

Born in Brookline, he had lived in Cohasset for 75 years. He graduated from Cohasset High School in 1926, and studied at the old Boston Architectural Club, now the Boston Architectural Center. He worked as a draftsman for Boston architectural firms, and in 1930 joined the W.C. Vaughan Co., a hardware manufacturer specializing in eighteenth and nineteenth century reproductions. Initially a designer for the Vaughan Company, Mr. Pratt became a partner in 1945 and later became President and sole owner, until his retirement in 1978.

Mr. Pratt became well known for his work in furnishing hardware for President Eisenhower's home in Gettysburg, Pa., restorations which included the Governor Gore Mansion in Waltham, Strawberry Bank in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, the Saugus Iron Works, and Heritage Plantation in Sandwich.

During the administration of Lyndon B. Johnson, the VaughanCompany was called on to replace door knobs in some White House offices after the President complained that he was receiving electric shocks when touching metal knobs after walking across carpeted floors.

Mr. Pratt designed a number of new homes in Cohasset and other communities, as well as several restorations of old homes.

An illustrator of numerous books on firearms and ammunition, Mr. Pratt also provided illustrations for World War II training manuals for the U.S. Army.

During World War II he served as an officer in the local unit of the Massachusetts State Guard, an element of the 26th Massachusetts Infantry. He also served as a military substitute on the Cohasset Planning Board, as a member and Chairman of the Cohasset Advisory Committee, the Zoning Board of Appeals, and the Deer Hill School building committee.

He is survived by his wife Ruth Anita (Jagger) Pratt, a daughter Cynthia Pensinger, of Santa Cruz, California, a son Joel S. Pratt of Solebury, Pennsylvania. Also three sisters, Mrs. Edna F. Pratt of Cohasset, Mrs. Marietta Baynard of Tarpon Springs, Florida, and Mrs. Louise Winsor of Mont Vernon, New Hampshire, and four brothers, Warren S. Pratt and Burtram J. Pratt of Cohasset, Dr. John J. Pratt, Jr., of Wayland and Edwin H. Pratt of Spring Hill, Florida. He also leaves five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

A funeral service was held Wednesday, Dec. 3 at 10 a.m. at the Second Congregational Church, followed by a private burial service at Central Cemetery.

Donations in memory of Mr. Pratt may be made to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, or the Second Congregational Church, Highland Avenue.

In The Dark About The New Tax Law?

Our Free Tax Seminar will shed some light on the subject.

On Thursday, December 11, 1986 Pioneer Financial will offer a free tax seminar at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

Distinguished tax expert Daniel M. Sall, CPA, will be on hand to speak about the 1986 tax law and answer any questions you may have. In addition, all attendees will receive a free copy of the highly respected Arthur Young Tax Letter.

Join Kent Leman and Danise Woolf of Pioneer Financial's Norwell office, tax expert Daniel M. Sall, and many of your friends and neighbors for this free seminar:

Thursday, December 11, 1986
6:30 pm-8:30 pm
South Shore Country Club
274 South Street
Hingham, Massachusetts

With only weeks left in 1986, there's no time like the present to find out how the new tax law will affect the state of your finances. Space is limited. Make your reservation today. Call Jamie Russo toll-free at 1-800-327-6000.

Senior Citizens news. . .

Elder Affairs Secretary Richard H. Rowland today alerted Mass. elders of a new enabling legislation which will eliminate increased property taxes for some homeowners who build additions onto their homes so that elders can live there.

"This bill — filed by Representative James Miceil, was passed by the Legislature in June by Governor Dukakis in July — and will help keep more elders at home by providing incentives for homeowners," said Secretary Rowland. "The more affordable home renovations and additions are for homeowners, the more opportunities elders will have to live at home with families, friends, or within a home environment," he added.

Not all homeowners will be eligible for tax credits, however, and certain guidelines must be met:

1. Although the new tax exemption has been approved by the state, in order for homeowners to claim it, the law must first be accepted by their local town or city government.

2. While housing additions normally will be made to accommodate elder relatives, the resident and homeowner do not have to be related. The resident must, however, be an elder, i.e., at least 60 years of age.

3. The homeowner is free to charge rent to the elder, regardless of their relationship.

4. Only the areas of the house renovated for use by the elderly would be tax exempt, and this exemption applies only so long as the elder is in residence.

5. There is no limitation on the size of the addition, although most additions would include a bedroom and a bathroom, with the rest of the house being shared with the rest of the family.

6. Local housing authorities must verify annually that there is a person 60 years of age or older living in the renovated areas. If the elderly person leaves, the space can be re-occupied by another person aged 60 or older.

7. The person 60 or older cannot be the homeowner.

8. The owner applying for the tax exemption must give local assessors a certificate from the local housing authorities certifying that the improvements were necessary to provide housing for an elder.

9. The act is not retroactive and does not apply to improvements made before the enactment date by the city or town in which the property is located.

For more information, please contact the Senior Center at 383-9112.

A few, fresh real estate ideas turn to profit

It may have been the maverick thing to do back in the declining real estate days of 1981. The market was squeezed dry, but with a few fresh ideas Christoper Ford created a new concept that is catching on.

Five years ago, the former college educator decided it was time to move back to his hometown of Cohasset. It was the ideal type of community in which to raise a family, he decided.

"If I wanted to come back so badly, I had to create work for myself. I had been a legislative assistant in Washington, D.C. for four years. I had my doctorate and had taught at a university for seven years," he stated. "There were no college jobs available here. I decided to get my real estate license. It was actually a bad time to do that, but things were so bad, it was also a time for opportunity."

He began in a small office in the corner of the Cushing Plaza, taking over the former Ceasar's Shoe shop.It wasn't somuch thequaint accommodations that enticed only bemused glances from competing firms, it was the concept of Ford's new business.

Rather than following the accustomed and traditional method of granting sales fees to realtors, Ford decided to "spread the risk" as well as the success.

He proposed to his brokers that they pay an "upfront" operational cost along with a monthly fee which is currently $285. That fee includes the realtor's share of the office rent, utilities, and phone bill. The office total is divided among the number of realtors, in which Ford is included.

Each broker must pay his or her own advertising costs, which Ford explained, is the single biggest expense in a real estate office.

The risk is spread out," he noted, "so the profit is returned to the brokers who make the sales."

Another basis of this business which has proven successful, is that only experienced brokers are accepted into Hallmark 100. The brokers currently occupying the office include realtors with two and three million dollar annual sales. They have several years experience, many with local competitors.

"It's good for us," Ford said, explaining that Hallmark now attracts 'the cream of the crop' in their Cohasset office at 152 King Street (Rte. 3A) and in their Scituate Harbor office at the corner of Brook and Front Streets.

The Cohasset office now boasts of 12 realtors including Ford, who remains an active broker.

"In most firms," he said, "there are two or three superstars. Here, we all sell two or three million a year."

Realtor Jayne Nussdorfer explained, "Hallmark really is like owning my own business. I can work as little or as much as much as I like. I've made more money this year than ever, and I think most of the others in the office are the same way.

"Probably this group of people is the most professional I have ever worked with," the 15-year realtor stated. "I think we all work harder, because we all have a stake in this business."

Nussdorfer, who worked for another local real estate company, said she has made more sales and profits this year than ever before. "I also enjoy it more," she laughed, "because it's as if it were my own business. There's a responsibility there to produce."

The Scituate office of Hallmark 100 opened last August, according to Ford, and includes realtors with at least seven years sales experience. Each realtor paid a mandatory 'upfront' fee of $1,000 plus their monthly maintenance payment.

And now that the market has slowed its pace, Ford said it's imperative he continue as an active realtor.

"In most real estate companies, the owner is not an active realtor. The only way this will succeed for me, is to continue as an active salesperson. I work hard at it, plus I love the activity. I sold more than $5 million last year. This company wouldn't work if the owner did not work on the line like everyone else."

Meet the Hallmark Realty Staff. They include Fred Koed, Chris Ford, Mary Tibbetts, Virginia Harvey, Julie Gailinus, Judy White, Jayne Nussdorfer, Julie Chapman and Joan Hartnett. (Kathy Perlow photo)

The corporate owner continued, "I think this concept is the way of the future, in real estate, travel agencies, and stock brokerage firms. It's a more equitable arrangement. Everyone profits from the efforts of everyone."

There's no resentment among brokers at the office, he said. Because there're no superstars or newcomers, there's no need for jealousies to develop.

"They're not new to this business. They've seen the ups and downs and they can handle it," he added.

In order to keep the realtors free to transact their business, all office problems and procedures are handled by one person. Fred Koed is the office manager for Hallmark 100. He is responsible for reviewing all bills, and securing payment. As the only salaried person on staff, Koed "keeps things going" for the other office brokers, according to Ford, who noted that in addition, Koed is also a successful broker.

Hallmark moved to its current Rte. 3A Cohasset location a year ago, and branched into a second office in Scituate Harbor last August.

"I don't know," Ford said, in answer to a question about future franchising. "There's no doubt I could be successful if I went regional or national. But it's not something I personally want to do."

A former Peace Corps director, Ford said a portion of Hallmark's success is because of a willingness on his part to accept the risk along with everyone else.

"I felt from the start that the owner should participate in the risk," he added. "I'm the one buying the buildings and the equipment. If they were actually starting their own companies, these are the headaches they would encounter. But I handle it for them."

Realtor Zena Plote said in addition, the success of Hallmark is assured because of "team work" among the office brokers.

"If anyone runs into a problem," she explained, "we're there to help each other. It's a wonderful comraderie. We're all professionals, and we've all been in the business for a period of time. We know how to service our customers, and we're able to work with each other.

"All of us at Hallmark have different creative modes of thinking and we continually talk with each other," she added. "We're constantly brainstorming, which is terrific."

When asked what this professionalism will bring to the consumer, Plote answered, "when someone calls Hallmark, they're getting the cream. In other real estate offices, 20 percent of the realtors sell 80 percent of the product. Here, the consumer is getting brokers who have been in business for a time, and this is their business. They are involved and active. There are no passive brokers at Hallmark."

Plote, who joined the office two years ago, noted, "We really work as a team. We're enthusiastic about the concept here, and we know it's a viable alternative to the traditional real estate office. We've been in the business, and we've paid our dues. It's a great team spirit."

Our Mediocre Judges, Part II

Last week I asserted that our judges are still too often chosen for their political connections rather than their judicial qualifications. This week I first want to focus on judges' lack of training and ongoing supervision. Then I will go into some of the administrative problems of the typical Massachusetts District Court.

When a judge enters the Massachusetts courtroom for the first time as a judge, he usually has plenty of familiarity with courts as a lawyer. In most cases he also has sufficient expertise in the law to render competent decisions on matters of law. What he does not have in nearly all instances is any real preparation for the daily bath he will take in the seemy side of life.

Each day when the typical District Court judge enters the courtroom at 10:00 A.M., a voice (probably that of some politician's relative) will call out, "All rise!" From that moment until the lunch hour at 1:30 or 2:00 P.M., the judge will confront 20 to 40 thieves, muggers, rapists, batterers, whores, liars, deadbeats, and drunks, as well as police, court officers, probation officers, lawyers, "experts," victims, plaintiffs, defendants, relatives, and reporters.

The one thing that brings all these parties into the courtroom is trouble. Whether it is the trouble of the victim of a vile crime, or the trouble of perplexed parents whose offspring is an habitual offender, or the trouble of a scared kid who did something stupid, the stench of people's troubles is always in the air in a courtroom.

Out of this chronic den of trouble a judge must separate right from wrong, fact from fiction, truth from lie. He must render rulings that are legally correct, that protect society, that do justice to the aggrieved, and, probably hardest of all, help turn the offender in a better direction. All of that a typical judge must do again and again, day after day, week after week, month after month, year after year. Is it any wonder judges "burn out?"

The most candid recent description of what can happen to a judge in such circumstances came from retired Judge Paul Garrity (who is not to be confused with retired Federal Judge Arthur Garrity of busing notoriety.) Judge Garrity described how by the end of his tenure he had seen so many sordid situations and heard so many lies that there were times when he no longer listened or cared. He would make up his mind about a case before hearing all the testimony, he would interrupt lawyers and witnesses, and he would often lose his temper in the courtroom. He was, as he now freely admits, burned out.

Judge Garrity is alone only in being brave and honest enough to admit what happened to him: the burnout he describes is commonplace. Society's failure is that we presume to make men and women into judges, yet we do not prepare them for the seemy world they will confront every day as a judge, nor do we give them supervisory support once they are in office. Society as well as the legal profession assume that because a person is a qualified lawyer he is trained to be a good judge. The assumption is false—it reflects society's naivete and the legal profession's arrogance.

In fact, the training and supervision judges get suffers greatly by comparison with many other professions. I recall that when I counselled emotionally disturbed, delinquent, and learning disabled adolescents at the Judge Baker Guidance Center between 1967 and 1973, I typically had two hours of group supervision, one hour of individual supervision, and one hour of psychoanalytic training each week. All were dedicated to helping me better understand my interactions with my clients.I still made mistakes—we all did—but with such institutional support we usually caught on to our mistakes before we damaged young lives. Judges have no such ongoing supervision, yet they probably need it more.

Judges, then, need to be trained before they don a black robe. They especially need to be trained in the art of hearing the essence of the testimony of frightened witnesses. They especially need to be trained in the art of sensing when witnesses (whether plaintiffs, defendants, or police) are lying. They especially need to be trained in the effect their incessant exposure to the ugly side of life will have on their own emotions.

Secondly, judges need ongoing supervision. They need to be able to consult with experienced colleagues and to talk their feelings over on a continuing basis. We are all better for guidance, yet today the typical judge probably gets less ongoing supervision than the person who empties his wastebaskets at the end of the day.

Third, judges need ongoing monitoring. Judges should sit in on each other's courts from time to time and review each other's work.Today judges who turn up "out-of-line" in their courtroom behavior usually turn out to have been out-of-line for years. When the case of the bad judge arises, it seems that everyone has known about it for a long time except the judiciary itself.

Fourth, there probably need to be more judges carrying lighter loads. The judge facing his fortieth case of the day on an empty stomach at 2:00 P.M. is probably not going to be at his best.

Fifth, new judges need to be selected from a wider pool of competent lawyers than is now the case. Both industry and government customarily conduct a "search" when they need to fill an important post. Yet judgeships are filled on the recommendation of a tiny number of insiders. The search for good judges needs to be continuous. We constantly need to be looking for good people and competent lawyers—and the focus of the search should be on the "good people" side. At the District Court level, "good" is more important than "brilliant."

Sixth, given the frequency of burn-out, we may want to limit non-appellate judicial appointments to ten years. My guess is that both the courts and the legal profession would benefit from the renewal that would occur if judges went back to practicing law after ten years on the bench.

Seventh, the administration of our courts should be taken away from judges and put into the hands of trained, professional court administrators. It is naive of us and arrogant of the legal fraternity to suppose that a good trial judge will be adept at managing the real estate and the personnel. Judges should be relieved of such peripheral duties in order to better focus on their primary duty: the just disposition of cases.

Eighth, judges' support personnel within our courthouses needs to be upgraded. The problem here is political: courthouses tend to be manned (and insufficiently "womaned") by overpaid no-shows and ne'er-do-wells who typically got their sinecures during one of our notorious Christmastime legislative feeding frenzies. We are in one of those parlous times as I write, and you may be certain that in the next few weeks whilst our normal Christians and Jews are preoccupied with higher matters, powerful legislators will be passing pet bills raising this or that courthouse flunky's salary. The effect of such chicanery is courthouses that are over-populated with rude, callous, and lazy middle-level officials.

Ninth, our courthouses themselves are most of them in want of normal maintenance as we enter the ninth year of the Dukakis administration. I have been in a lot of courthouses (just visiting, mind you), and nearly all of them are depressing, unpainted sties that reek of no one caring. It is too much to suppose that a judge or court official who is mindless of the weeds, trash, and peeling paint all around him will be mindful of the human frailty all around him. Therefore, should the Dukakis administration see fit to invest in some paint for our courthouses, it would be the rare spending initiative that would not get ridiculed here.

Finally, I believe justice would be served if we removed some of the "hocus pocus' from our courtrooms. It seems to me that the forms hocus pocus takes—the throne the judge sits on, his black robe (too much like a white sheet), and the "All rise" when the judge gets to work—functions to intimidate and therefore do not serve justice. The respect that a judge is entitled to as the representative and personification of our constitutional law is contained in the power he wields, and, if he possesses it, in his judicial temperament. Added hocus pocus, as I see it, only serves to intimidate the individual citizen who—whether he is witness,plaintiff,or defendant is usually scared enough to begin with.

Stick to writing about politics

To the Editor:

Columnist David A. Mittell, Jr. should have stuck with writing about politics. He clearly misses the point about the anger showered by fans upon the Red Sox after this year'sWorld Series, in his article from Nov. 6.

Sure it was a great series and an even better playoff. But the end result was the same. Once again a Red Sox manager refused to make any changes. Drop Buckner down in the lineup against left handed pitchers or pinch hit Baylor for Buckner against lefties.

Not since Dick Williams have the Red Sox had a leader who would dare to upset his star players. The story is the same but the names have been changed.

We love the Red Sox and it was a great year but we're tired of settling for second best.

Mr. Mittell says that Dave Henderson's "strong Negroid features, warm smile and outstanding play will probably do more to eradicate the last vestiges of white racism hereabouts." You got to be kidding, Dave! What country are you living in? The Celtics and Patriots have had many black players for years and we're still a long way from those last vestiges, baby.

And by the way we're not the Cleveland Indians. We expect more from our teams and that's what makes Boston the great sports town that it is.

My suggestion is that we will be allowed to continue our criticism of the Red Sox and Mr. Mittell can continue to kick around the manager of this country.

Lots to write about there.

Sincerely,
Ron Zack

DARE Family Servics needs a home for Gregory

Gregory is a very active, enthusiastic and curious thirteen year old white male. He is a friendly and thoughtful child who has a variety of strengths, interests and problems to work on. Gregory was the victim of physical and emotional abuse. He missed out on a consistent, stable and safe home life. To get back on track, Gregory was in a residential school for approximately two years. Gregory responded well to the school structure, supervision and limits. Now, Gregory needs a nurturant, two parent foster family where he is the focus of attention and care on a long term basis.

Gregory tries hard to please the adults in his life. At times he reminds one of a little politician. Gregory loves to attend church and be an alter boy. He has a special relationship with the parish priest. Gregory likes to cook and fish. He also likes to eat and needs to watch his weight and avoid sugar in his diet. Gregory's vast artistic talents require some direction and guidance. At the moment, Gregory loves to draw, work with clay, construct models and make collages. Gregory prefers to ride bikes and fly kites, rather than play independent or group sports. Gregory is a special needs student in a public school who likes to visit the Aquarium, Science Museum and various historical sites.

Gregory is also impulsive and mischievous at times. He requires the supervision and limits one associates with a seven or eight year old child. Gregory hates to clean his room, take showers or do his chores. He has an excellent memory, but a very short attention span. Gregory can wear out his welcome when he whines alot and asks the same question over and over again. It is clear that Gregory needs to accept consequences and take responsibility for his actions. Also, Gregory must learn to respect the rights and property of others. To this end, a stable family with clear limits, expectations and boundaries will help this isolated child to grow and expand his horizons.

Gregory will benefit most from a family where he is the only child, or at least not in competition with younger ones. If you have room in your home and your heart for a child like Gregory, please call Donald Moskowitz of DARE Family Services at 628-3696. Professional training and support, together with medical coverage and a financial reimbursement of $42.00 a day are available.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Dieting our way toward better health

Baseball is no longer the national pastime—dieting is. Those who aren't counting calories are "being careful" as we diet our way toward better health and the bonus of a sylph-like figure.

Lois Lindauer writes that when she began with Diet Workshop she was "haunted by ghosts of hot fudge sundaes past, but as I follow my prescribed diet, my tongue is far more sophisticated, I savor my food slowly and my palate has become attuned to a newer, better way of eating. Now when I cook, I cook something like this:"

STUFFED SOLE

1 pkg. frozen spinach
1/2 c. chopped tomato
1 clove garlic, parsley and rosemary to taste
1/4 c. grated cheese
12 oz. fish fillets
1 onion
1 c. tomato juice
1 egg
Sage, salt and pepper to taste

Cook spinach. Drain well. Chop seasonings, including onion and garlic. Mix together with spinach, add cheese, salt, pepper and egg. Mix well. Place on fish. Roll fish and secure with toothpicks. Bake in 350 oven for 20-30 min. Serves one.

As we go bravely into the holiday season, surrounded on all sides by wonderful, tempting, pound-provoking fare, weight-watchers must steel themselves and toss out the cookies, snacks, sweets and crunchies. Sally forth instead and load up your shopping cart with what's good for you: fresh fruits and vegetables, lean meats, poultry and seafoods, natural cheese and sugar-free honey. Well, seeing it's holiday baking time, company's coming, perhaps just a thin slice of this dessert might not be too terribly fattening.

PUMPKIN RUM CAKE

2 pkgs. (18 ozs.) pound cake mix
1 16 oz. can pumpkin
1 1/2 tsp. pumpkin pie spice
1 c. sugar
1 c. orange juice
2 tsp. cinnamon, or 2 cinnamon sticks
1/4 c. rum

Mix pound cakes as directed, reducing water to 2/3 c. total and adding pumpkin and pumpkin pie spice. Pour into angel food cake pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour and 2 min. Cool in pan for 10 min., then remove to a rack for 20 min. more. Place cake on serving plate and use a long-tined fork to pierce holes over top of cake. Combine sugar, juice, cinnamon in a pan and bring to a boil. Remove stick cinnamon (if used) and stir in rum. Slowly spoon sugar mixture over cake until it is all absorbed.

Men who have a flair for cooking look upon time spent in the kitchen as fun; rather a novelty if they don't have to prepare meals three times a day and secure in the knowledge that the pots and pans they dirty with gay abandon will be there for somebody else to clean up—guess who. George Breen is retired and tackles cooking with the same refreshing enthusiasm with which he enjoys life. Here, at long last, is a recipe he called to ask for:

CREAMED FINNAN HADDIE

1 1/2 lb. finnan haddie
2 T butter
1 T finely chopped onion
2 T flour
1/2 tsp. salt, dash pepper
1 c. light cream
3/4 c. milk
3 hard-cooked eggs
Chopped parsley

Place finnan haddie in saucepan with water to cover; bring to boil, then drain. Add water to cover again, bring to a boil and simmer for 15 min. Melt butter in saucepan and saute onion approx. 5 min. Remove from heat, stir in flour, salt and pepper, gradually stir in cream and milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring until thickened. Preheat oven to 300. Drain finnan haddie, rinse with hot water. Place in casserole. Chop eggs coarsely and place over fish. Pour sauce over all and bake 10 min. Garnish with parsley. Serves four.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

Christmas Toys for '1986'

Child World at Hanover Mall has a remarkable array of toys, overwhelming to any parent or grandparent who enters unprepared. While it sells a great many of the old favorites, it is also totally up-to-date with what a child's world is in North America in 1986. Here are just a few impressions of what is new.

Typical of today's marketing is "Eternia: the Ultimate Battleground Come to Life. Connects with your Castle Greyskull and Snake Mountain sets." The price is $80.

This "toy" has everything. It's big, it's ugly, it's wildly colorful, it contains horrible, human mutants and terrifying, nightmarish animals. It's violent, encourages consumers to buy related items and its characters, from "Masters of the Universe," are seen on television.

Less clear, even from the packaging, is what "Eternia" actually is. It seems to be some sort of plastic castle, with armaments, though I'll bet the most interesting part of it is the picture on the box.

Just beyond the ultimate battlefield are this season's electronic gadgets. "Electronic teachers" are big this year, boxes which talk to children and presumably teach them. Whether they can teach better than a caring adult is doubtful, though buying an electronic teacher may be easier for some parents than actually spending time with their kids.

Electronics have come to stuffed animals in a big way this year, too. "Talking Wrinkles" is a cute doggy that not only barks and howls, but speaks over a thousand different phrases. $60. How many parents speak over a thousand different phrases to their children, not counting barks and howls?

I particularly like the Electronic Voice Changer. For only $10 "now you can sound like a Transformer Robot."

There were a great many walkie-talkies and I was pleasantly surpised to discover, many high quality items like electronic typewriters and cassette decks. Child World carries a lot of good stuff.

After walking through several aisles of Lego's and pre-school toys, I came to a vast wall of hot pink and purple. It was my old friend Barbie.

Barbie doesn't seem to be into new clothes much this year. Like all young, upwardly mobile folks, she's into real estate and interior decorating.

She has several rooms fully decorated and purchased separately. There is Barbie's "Dream Glow Bed. Pink and lacy by day, glowing by night." The price is $14.49.

She has a "Dream Kitchen; everything for glamorous entertaining." Barbie doesn't do anything unglamorous, even in the kitchen.

She even has a "Dream Cafe" for $18.99. Complete with fern. Honest.

Right across the aisle from Barbie and her dream life were stacks and stacks of "Real Babies" for $20. They are 21 inches long and weight three pounds and look shockingly like real babies.

A cute girl of about eleven years old is shown on the box holding one. We read "announce the arrival to your friends by sending out the five enclosed birth announcements." No mention of a wedding announcement, nor are there any pictures of eleven-year-old-boys.

The boys, of course, are supposed to be drawn to the considerable arsenal of weapons a few yards away. The number and realism of violence toys in recent years have multiplied faster than farm foreclosures in Iowa.

Besides G.I. Joe and his friends and enemies (my favorite is the sailor with the tatoo), young children can find everything needed to pretend they are saving Grenadian medical students, training Nicaraguan contras in Honduras or simply standing around idly in Beirut.

The Entertech Line is the brand name of several extremely realistic weapons, like the "Motorized Military Water Pistol with Ammo Pack." Shoots thirty feet, and the price is $16.

Also parts of the Entertech Line are an AK Centerfire, a Double Clip Baretta, the classic M-16 and a rocket launcher.

If Our President had sent a few million dollars of the Entertech Line to Iran, he could have gotten his hostages out before those moderate Iranians discovered they were squirt guns.

There are so many varieties of guns called "Uzi" that one wonders if there are any royalties being paid to the maker of this popular machine gun, preferred by terrorists the world over, as well as by fashionable dope peddlers on "Miami Vice."

Interestingly, the weapons section was the only one which elicited much comment from adults. "Buy him anything but a gun," one said.

"I don't like guns," another told her son.

"Start them out early," a father said, looking at me with despair and sarcasm.

For those who seek a more cerebral, detailed approach to their violence, I suggest a board game called "Fortress America" for $20. The scenario is that the U.S. is under attack in the early 21st century. Star Wars have effectively neutralized atomic weapons, but, having been abandoned by all allies, the U.S. must combat conventional forces attacking on all sides. The only thing lacking is an endorsement by Alexander Haig.

My award for truth in advertising goes to a product called "Slime." This is sold along with your "Masters of the Universe Slime Pit." On the $2 container of Slime we read: "Non-toxic water soluble gel. Slime compound sticks to rugs, fabrics and hair. Dry cleaning will not remove slime. May be harmful to wood finishing. NOT A FOOD PRODUCT."

Some commentators have said this year's toys make Christmas 1986 the year of ugly violence. With the number of Rambo-like toys and inhuman characters from countless poorly animated cartoons, I'd have to agree.

Parents can still resist, but it isn't easy to refuse a child some over-priced grotesquerie that's been pitched over television ten times a day since the fourth of July. The ultimate battleground isn't the eighty dollar toy, but rather the minds of our children.

(Darrell Berger is minister of the First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate.)

A Stone's Throw —— by Paul Steven Stone

The secret life of the American leaf

NOTE: The following is an excerpt from Stone's acceptance speech for the Nobel Prize in Occult Home Sciences.

Honored Dignitaries and Members of the Academy:

Much has been written about the drop pattern of the American Leaf (see Stern's "Up To My Sternum in Autumn," Windblown Press, 1978) but prior to my research it was firmly believed Leafus Americanus fell but once a season.

Today, we of course know it falls not once but on many occasions.

Ironically, it was a casual remark by my lovely wife Karen that ultimately led to that breakthrough discovery. She was lying down at the time examining oval blisters on both her lovely palms. Upon my suggestion that she return to our yard and continue raking leaves, she replied, "You should live so long. I'll wait till after they refall."

"Refall," I said to myself. "Refall." The word echoed and re-echoed through my mind. "Was it possible?" I asked myself. "Could leaves actually fall more than once?"

Within minutes, I organized a press gang of laboratory assistants (my three darling children) and together we marked all the leaves in our yard. Then, leaving my assistants to dispose of the test specimens in the woods behind our house, I went inside to pursue a parallel investigation I'd been conducting on the National Football League.

The first returns on our efforts were quite dispiriting. Although a voluminous colony of leaves did reappear on my property, and the trees above remained as starkly bare as before, none of the new arrivals bore any of our test markings. Chagrined, I went into the woods and measured the piles of marked specimens, surprisingly discovering they had diminished quite dramatically in height.

Here then was a double mystery. Not only could I not account for the new leaves on my lawn, I was at a loss to explain the apparent disappearance of some of my test subjects.

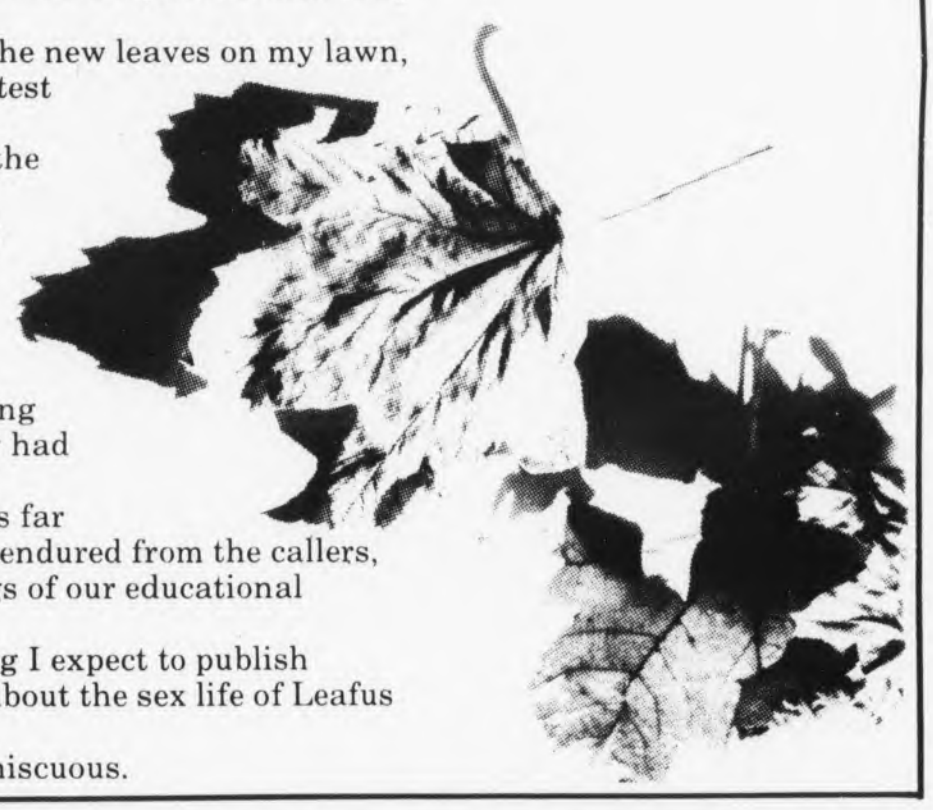
A week later, both mysteries were solved with a single phone call, the first of many I was to receive.

"You Paul S. Stone?" the caller asked; he appeared to be breathing heavily. Assured that I was indeed Paul S. Stone, he began displaying a limited vocabulary of expletives regularly interposed with suggestions as to what I might do with all the leaves I had dumped upon his property.

At last, the breakthrough I'd been seeking! And it was more startling than I had ever hoped. For not only had my leaves fallen again, they had actually traveled two and a half miles to do so. Later phone calls confirmed the discovery, revealing migratory patterns that ranged as far away as six miles from the test site. The threats and foul language I endured from the callers, however, had a far more limited range, a sad testimony to the failings of our educational system.

You'll be happy to hear that my research continues, and before long I expect to publish preliminary findings that will cause all of us to reassess our beliefs about the sex life of Leafus Americanus.

All I can say at present is that the little fellow is surprisingly promiscuous.



Volunteers sought for giftwrapping

Friends of The New England Home for Little Wanderers will be giftwrapping again this year in two locations on the South Shore. Proceeds from these projects will benefit The New England Home for Little Wanderers, a private child welfare agency offering numerous programs and services for troubled children and their families.

From Dec. 15 through Dec. 24, the friends and volunteers will be giftwrapping at Hanover Mall from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sundays. The giftwrapping tables will be located in front of Zayre Department Store this year.

To volunteer your services for one or more of the 4-hour shifts suggested please call the following: Mrs. Marge Damon at 878-2449 in the Hanover area; Mrs. June Osborne at 834-9677 in the Marshfield area; Mrs. Sandra McGowan at 826-6673 in the Norwell/North River area; Mrs. Ann Phelps at 878-9238 in the Rockland area and Mrs. Audrey Watts at 337-2207 in the Weymouth area.

The second giftwrapping location on the South Shore will be at Pleasant Shops, Route 18, South Weymouth, with the giftwrapping table located in front of Marshall's in the Mall, beginning Dec. 13 through Dec. 24, from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays and from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

On the day before Christmas giftwrapping will be offered until closing. The Weymouth Chapter of Friends of The New England Home for Little Wanderers will be co-ordinating giftwrapping services in this location.

Four organizations will be sharing the giftwrapping services. In addition to the Friends of The New England Home there will be the Weymouth Mother's Club, the Weymouth Newcomers Club and the Norfolk County Legal Secretaries Association/Scholarship, at Pleasant Shops.

To Volunteer your services to help any of the participating organizations at the South Weymouth location please call the following: Mrs. Nancy Connolly for the Weymouth Mother's Club at 331-3125; Mrs. Barbara Devine, Civic Chairman of the Weymouth Newcomer's Club, at 337-1986, or Mrs. Audrey Watts at 337-2207 in behalf of the Friends of The New England Home for Little Wanderers or the Norfolk County Legal Secretaries Association/Scholarship.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Grandma's guide to raising perfectly perfect children

"You're really doing it?" the Dragon asked. "You're actually writing a guide to raising perfect children? You?"

I bristled. "Why not? Ours all turned into fairly respectable citizens. And if I made a mistake or three along the way, maybe others can benefit from my experience.

"The main reason, though, is that now our children are having children, and I feel they may find my advice invaluable. I'm not about to tell them what vitamins to give their kids. They can get that from Spock or their pediatrician. No, I'm going to hand out genuine, you're-in-the-real-world-now,—kids advice.

"Take Rule No. 1, for example."

The Dragon surpressed a shudder. "And Rule No. 1 is?"

"Lie." I said firmly. "When you have a child, everyone is always on your back. They want to know if he eats all his squashed bananas; how old he was when he rolled over; how much he weighs; how high his I.Q. is. Then they tell you that their kid eats more; rolled over sooner; weighs twice as much and reads William Buckley for entertainment.

"So you lie. Lie to your sister, lie to your neighbor, lie to the lady you meet in the pediatrician's waiting room, lie to your mother. Well, may be not to your mother. But lie to everybody else.

"Tell them that little Philbert always eats every speck of his squashed bananas, then begs for cereal. Tell them that your obstetrician said it was the first time he ever saw a baby roll over in the delivery room. Tell them his weight is exactly the same as Sylvester Stallone's at that age. Tell them you don't want to talk about it, because you want him to have a normal childhood, but he's the youngest person ever to be admitted to MENSA.

"They won't bug you anymore. Guaranteed."

"Sounds good so far," the Dragon admitted. "Got any more rules?"

"Of course. Rule No. 2 is a corollary of Rule No. 1, only you use it on your kids. Rule No. 2 is "Dazzle Them with Statistics." Obviously no one can remember every pertinent statistic, so you use a little creativity. Like, 'Are you aware that 5,827 children lost their vision in 1976 because they ran through the house holding scissors?' Or, 'Did you know there's a special hospital in Toledo, Ohio for boys whose faces froze while they were trying to scare their sisters with horrible grimaces?' Or, 'Scientists agree that the reason there is famine in certain parts of the world is because the children there didn't eat broccoli when they had the chance."

"And Rule No. 3?" the Dragon asked politely.

"This one is indispensible," I assured him. Rule No. 3 is "Overlook a Great Deal." Never ask 'Why does that dog look nervous?' You don't want to hear that someone was trying to force feed him wheat germ. Never say 'Why is there a puddle in the living room?' You may not be able to cope with the explanation that someone invented a plant-watering apparatus involving an enema bag. Above all, never, ever say 'What was that noise?' You don't want to know. Trust me. All you really want is for it to stop. So you fix them all with a basilisk stare and say 'I assume your room is immaculate?' It never is; the kids immediately remember pressing business elsewhere, and the crisis is over. Works like a charm.

"Of course," I added, "this ploy is useless if you aren't in your own house. For example, when we went to Mary Claire's for Thanksgiving dinner last week, and all of a sudden she said, 'Food Fight!' and Breida threw a cucumber at Larry, and Mary Claire threw a sticky biscuit at someone, and Eileen put one down the back of my shirt. There would have been no point to telling them to clean their rooms then."

"So why do you think you're the person to write a book on child-bearing," the Dragon asked. "You've just admitted that Rule No. 3 won't always work. And since Breida is 19, Larry is 22, and Mary Claire is 32, maybe you ought to admit the Rule No. 3 is about as effective in stopping food fights as selling arms to Iran is in stopping terrorism. Maybe you should just throw in the towel."

"Never," I told him. "We had a perfectly lovely time Thanksgiving. The children and the grandchildren all behaved perfectly. Siobhann is the first six week old baby I've every known to be toilet trained. No one demonstrated judo holds or played 'Ninja' in the living room. See how beautifully it works? When all else fails there's always Rule No. 1.

Elder Affairs Secretary Richard H. Rowland is sponsoring a Diagnosis Related Group at the Weymouth Council on Aging from 10 a.m. to noon Thursday, Dec. 4.

The hearing officers will be Senator William Golden, Secretary Rowland and Susan Young, Executive Director of South Shore Elder Services.

"Over a year has passed since the DRG prospective payment system was introduced in Massachusetts. Although it was designed to limit hospital costs, many fear that its cost-cutting edge may be slicing into health care quality," said Secretary Rowland.

Testimony will be heard from Ombudsmen; Elder Advocates; professionals in the fields of aging and health; workers in clinics, hospitals, home care corporations, home health agencies, and nursing homes; and, people who have indirect experience with the DRG system or whose friends or relatives have been affected by this system.

"It is critical that the quality of care as well as the effectiveness of the DRG system be constantly monitored and examined. We can encourage this end by holding such hearings and encouraging those affected to speak out," said Secretary Rowland.

Mariner photo reprint policy

Photographs taken by staff photographers and appearing in the Mariners are available for reprints.

Photos are printed black and white on glossy paper either 5"x7" size of 8"x10". Orders should be phoned in with date of publication, the page number on which it appeared, and if possible, the name of the photographer.

When reprints are ready, you will be contacted (usually about two weeks) to pick them up at the Mariner office on Main St. (Rte. 3A) in Marshfield at your convenience.

Prices are $6 for 5"x7" and $8 for 8"x10". We recommend reproduction in 5"x7" except for special purposes.

Remembering the land given to war veterans

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Young, strapping men returned from the war forty years ago. Filled with dreams and desires, the only thing they lacked was a home.

That was soon to change. One voice, that of Otis Jason, spoke loudly for the returning heroes of World War II.

On the floor of the 1947 town meeting, Jason "turned things upside down," Bertram Pratt recalled, by proposing that the town give away land to Cohasset's war veterans.

There was no precedent for such a suggestion. No other town, to the knowledge of anyone at that meeting, had bestowed such a generous gesture. But the townspeople loved it and as Pratt said, "this really threw a monkeywrench into the entire meeting."

And today, the houses still stand along a 20-acre tract of land that winds around Clay Spring Road, Bayberry Lane, Tupelo Road and Arrowwood Street, evidence of what Jason called a "living memorial" to the soldiers of that war.

Pratt, who in 1956 wrote volume II of the Narrative History of Cohasset, remembered that voters were asked at that town meeting, to approve the sale of the old 'town poor farm" land to developer Charles Howe for $100 a lot.

A previous warrant article, number 24, had granted selectmen authority to make such a transaction. The meeting then jumped to article 54 which requested approval for the sale of the town farm land to Howe for $100 a lot. The land stretches behind Pond Street and abuts Rte. 3A.

Instead, Jason jumped up and suggested that in honor of Cohasset returning war veterans, the town instead sell the land at $100 a lot to these men and their families.

As Pratt noted in his book, "When a veteran's spokesman protested, the private party withdrew and a resolution, whereby the land would be subdivided and sold to veterans at not more than one hundred dollars a lot, was passed instead."

A committee, which included Pratt, who himself had just returned from war duty, was formed to Permit granted to 51 Jerusalem Rd.

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Although a special permit was granted last week, construction work at 51 Jerusalem Road will be delayed.

Walter Sullivan, attorney for Distinctive Homes Trust, said last week's zoning board decision must now be submitted to Superior Court.

"We can't go ahead before the court goes through it," he said, "then we will have to get a revised building permit."

The special permit given to Andrea Merrill and Julie Gailinas authorizes them to complete renovations to their property at 51 Jerusalem Road, despite the objections of their neighbors.

John Roy, attorney for the abutters, had no comment on the zoning board's ruling last week.

When the two trustees first went before the board, they had already begun to add a second story to the dwelling. They had received a building permit from Building Inspector Edward Poskus, but the board said they needed a special permit for the project and denied

Teens meet new friends from the senior center

The room was filled with people, with lively conversation and laughter. It was a room filled with people enjoying each other.

The room within the First Parish Meeting House resembled a classroom, with talkative teens chatting excitedly. But it was not a classroom. It was an introduction between people who had never before met.

Tuesday afternoon marked the beginning of the Spanning the Gap program, a cooperative venture between the guidance department at the high school, and the town's senior center. It was the start of a program designed to help teens understand the senior citizens of their town, and for the elderly residents to become acquainted with the young people of their community.

Senior center director Kathy Bryanton last year attended a seminar in which "intergenerational" programs were explained. She learned how a retired newsman from one community was brought into a local high school to discuss writing with several students. As they brought in their writing samples to the informed man, he reviewed them with a critical eye.

"They learned invaluable skills from this professional writer. And he in turn, was made to feel needed again. No doubt it helped him as much as the students," Bryanton said.

While employed at South Shore Elder Services, Bryanton was involved in a program which joined together a sixth grade class in Hingham with the 'luncheon group' of seniors in that town.

"They talked about nutrition. The children talked about the foods they ate, and the seniors explained how they often don't eat as well as they should because they often tend not to cook for one," she said. "They met and got to know each other, and everyone decided they'd really try to eat better."

About a year ago, Bryanton went to the high school's guidance department and introduced the subject to counselors Mary Bababian and Ann Porter. They decided this was a program that would mesh with the goals and issues discussed by the school's peer counseling group.

"They were very supportive of the idea," Bryanton said, noting that several Council on Aging members and senior center participants are former teachers.

"Some seniors were very receptive when I discussed the matter with them. Some are reserved about it. We'll have to wait and see," she added, noting that during the first week of the senior center opening last year, the most popular event was a performance by the high school chorus. "They talked for days here about how they'd like to see more of the students.

"You know," Bryanton continued. "we're a very Special gift items abound here

By Ruthann Turner
Mariner correspondent

A local choir belts out favorite Christmas carols between the produce section and deli counter.

Customers meander around the holiday displays, helping themselves to snacks offered at various gourmet stations.

It's Saturday at J. Bildner and Sons at the Cushing Plaza.

Patrons hurry in for a few items, others are shopping for the week. And a growing number of customers, according to manager Dan Onishuk, are taking care of their Christmas shopping for friends and relatives at Bildner's.

By 1990, Bildner's will have approximately 70 stores nationwide, says Onishuk, explaining that the biggest advantage to customers will be the gift basket and catering service, in which they'll be able to send breakfasts and lunches across the country.

"More people are getting away from giving conventional gifts," Onishuk says, noting that one of the most popular holiday gifts this season is sending that special someone a month of catered breakfasts, along with the Sunday Globe. The customer can create his or her own menu, or gather a number of ideas from Bildner's chefs, he adds.

The Continental breakfast typically includes a choice of fruit breads, croissants, assorted muffins or bagels, a variety of jams and butters, fresh-squeezed juice, fresh fruit and Bildner's Blend

Planners want traffic study

Despite objections from the developer of the proposed Stop and Shop project, the planning board voted last week to contract another traffic study of the plan.

Developer Donald Staszko has proposed to construct a 50,000 square foot super-supermarket on the site of the former Cohasset Motors property. The planning board has rejected the plan, citing increased traffic impact as a primary reason.

Staszko has since filed two lawsuits against the town, arguing against the rejection of his plans. No determination has yet been made in the litigation.

At the planning board's meeting last week, Staszko requested permission to discuss the matter with the traffic engineer selected by the board. He was denied by board members who reminded him that they were involved in litigation.

Town counsel had advised the board that before the town decides to proceed with the case in court, another traffic survey should be completed. Walter Freedman of Edwards and Kelcey of Boston was selected to complete the newest traffic study.

Liquor license renewals

Selectmen voted Monday night to renew the annual liquor licenses to the following establishments. No objections to the issuance of the licenses were made by the police, fire or building departments.

Licenses were awarded to: the Central Market, Hugo's Lighthouse and Scott's Liquors. These three businesses have applied for a transfer of the liquor license to new owners. As soon as the application is approved, the 1987 license will be transferred to the new owners.

Also, the Cohasset Golf Club, Harbour Liquors, the George Mealy American Legion Post, Kimball's, Koko Island, Log 'n Line, Papa Gino's, Riddle's, Sea 'n Cheese, Red Lion, and With Richards, were granted the annual licenses.

Does anyone know the location and name of this building? Submit your Peek at the Past answers to the Mariner's news drop at the Colonial Pharmacy or the Cohasset News Store.

Transfer request approved

Selectmen approved a request from Veterans Agent Noel Ripley for a $9,500 budget transfer.

Executive Secretary Don Andrew explained that more benefits are being paid out this year. Because the amount was lower in previous years, the advisory committee had cut the veterans' budget, and there is now insufficient money to cover the additional benefit claims.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle insisted all the benefits claims are legitimate, and that the veterans agent carefully screens all applicants before deciding whether it is a proper claim.

The veterans' agent must now seek the transfer amount from the advisory committee, with selectmen's endorsemcnt.

D.A.'s office rules no meeting violation

In a reply to a complaint lodged last month by Maria Plante, the district attorney's office has ruled there was no violation of the state Open Meeting Law by selectmen.

Mrs. Plante wrote to the district attorney's office last month, complaining that Selectmen Chairman Diane Sullivan violated state law by discussing public information in confidence to the other board members before the meeting was opened to the public.

In a letter to the editor of the Mariner, Mrs. Plante called for an investigation of the alleged violation and recommended that chairman Sullivan offer her immediate resignation from the board.

The matter concerned the appointment of a police officer to the Cohasset department at the Nov. 3 meeting. When the subject was discussed in open session, the vote on the appointment was split by the four members and thus, no appointment was made.

In a reply to Mrs. Plante, assistant district attorney Charles J. Hely noted that she "overheard Ms. Sullivan report that the Marine Reserve promotion of a police candidate and state that "this is the kind of person we want." You have also informed me that someone else in the room suggested that she stop talking about the matter. An open meeting was then called to order and Ms. Sullivan repeated her comments regarding the applicant."

According to Hely, "Ms. Sullivan reports (through Town Counsel Richard Henderson) that she had just obtained by telephone some Marine Reserve information on the candidate because the executive secretary was not available at the time. Ms. Sullivan states that she reported this information to the other board members without soliciting their support.

"There is no evidence," he continued, "that any-one other than Ms. Sullivan spoke on the matter and she was promptly asked to defer her comments until the meeting began. Ms. Sullivan accepted this suggestion and immediately opened the meeting and repeated her comments on the candidate."

The brief comments made by the chairman, according to the assistant district attorney, did not amount to a deliberation or a verbal exchange, as defined in the open meeting law. "It follows that Ms. Sullivan's comments did not amount to a private 'meeting' in violation of the Open Meeting Law. Even if it were assumed that Ms. Sullivan's comments were a meeting or a verbal exchange, Ms. Sullivan promptly corrected any error by immediately opening the meeting and reporting the same information or opinion," Hely stated. No further action is necessary on the complaint.

State of the art explained by chimney sweeper

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

It sounds like a locomotive train running through your living room. Chimney fires can be dangerous and scary.

Cohasset resident Jeff Ludlow knows. "We had one in our house," he said. "Even though we have a good system, I got panicky."

As president of the August West Chimney Company at 190 Lincoln Street in Hingham, Ludlow is well acquainted with the dangers dirty chimneys can be.

"Most chimney fires start when the soot and creosote on the back wall of a fireplace ignites," he said.

As the fire spreads up the flue, temperatures can reach 2,500 degrees.

"I've seen it melt the mortar between the fire tiles," Ludlow said; "it can almost turn a stainless steel liner into tin foil."

The biggest danger, he explained, is that since masonry is not a good insulator, heat transfers quickly to the outside of the brickwork and will ignite any wood framing in contact with it.

"It's a time-bomb in the making if you don't care for your system," he said. "If people could look inside and see what is accumulating from their wood stoves, fireplaces and oilburners, they would be more concerned with maintainance."

The classic image of the chimney sweep is that of a soot-faced man in top hat and tails performing a rooftop balancing act with long wire brushes.

Ludlow said his August West chimney sweeps will show up in top hat and tails upon request, but modern methods and baseball caps are the wave of the present.

But Ludlow considers himself a traditionalist. "The fun part of the job for me," he said, "is putting soot on my face and putting on a top hat. It's fun for the kids and it can be an icebreaker when going into someone's house.

We set up most of our equipment inside at the fireplace," he said. "We dismantle the damper, which controls the draft, and we use a high-powered industrial vacuum system as well as wire brushes to clean the smoke chamber and flue from bottom to top."

Ludlow explained, "Most chimneys can be cleaned from inside the house, but chimneys from wood stoves and oilburners still have to be cleaned from the top."

Cleaning chimneys can be dirty work, but Ludlow said the job is rarely a dull one.

"It never ceases to amaze me," he commented, "how many animals we find in flues, especially in the springtime.

"We've found squirrels, birds, bats... Raccoons have a tendency to give birth to their young in chimneys," he added.

"Now, gas appliances don't get dirty," Ludlow said; "they emit carbon monoxide, but the smoke isn't as pungent as it is from other sources.

"In the winter," he explained, "birds will sit atop those chimneys to get warm and will be asphyxiated from breathing the carbon monoxide, then they will fall down the chimney. That's when we're called in."

Ludlow recommends the installation of screen guards atop chimneys to prevent the Noah's Ark phenomenon. It offers the added benefit of acting as a spark arrester, limiting the potential for a roof fire.

People are becoming aware of the importance of maintaining a safe chimney," he noted, "much more so than when I went into business 10 years ago."

Ludlow recommended, if you use your fireplace infrequently, you should have it cleaned every 50 to 100 uses.

The length of time between cleanings depends on several factors, he said, such as the quality of the wood you burn and the length of time you leave a fire going.

The National Fire Protection Association recommends having all chimneys cleaned once per year, Ludlow explained, however if you maintain your oilburner properly and the controls don't go haywire, the flue may not need cleaning for ten years.

But if the oilburner is running wrong, he said, it could get dirty enough to require a cleaning in two weeks.

Ludlow advised, wood stove systems should be cleaned at least once per year.

The job generally takes August West chimney sweeps from 30 minutes to an hour to complete, he said, and costs from $60 to $90 depending on the type of chimney involved.

Some of the systems in Cohasset's older homes can be complicated and more difficult to clean.

"Many times," Ludlow said, "blockages will occur in old homes built before central heating, because it was common to use the chimney as a venting system for oilburners."

He explained, the old method of conversion to oilburners left unnecessary bends in the flue, which allowed soot and creosote to build up.

"With the advent of building codes," he said, "that type of construction isn't allowed anymore.

After a decade in the business, Ludlow commented, "There never seems to be a slow-down in unusual circumstances and challenges."

In that time, August West has expanded its services beyond sweeping, to include lining additions, chimney repair and the construction of new chimneys and fireplaces.

"One of the biggest drawbacks to this business," he said, "it's very seasonal. I only wish people would be as concerned about their chimneys in the spring and summer as they are in the fall and early winter. We can work pretty much year round without a problem.

Ludlow concluded, "My advice is, maintain your system. Just because you can only see the outside of it, doesn't mean it doesn't merit your concern.

"If you keep it clean," he said, "you will avoid unexpected problems on a zero-degree day."

DeSantis defends sewer plant staffing

The local Sewer Commission is working to unclog the lines of communication between Cohasset and the state.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) recently cited the town for non-compliance with its regulations regarding staffing at the local wastewater treatment plant.

According to the DEQE, their investigators found inadequate staffing at the plant October 15, as there was no certified operator supervising the facility.

The department found a similar problem October 28 and requested the Sewer Commission present a staffing plan for the facility.

Charles DeSantis, Chairman of the Sewer Commission explained Tuesday, he met with the plant's superintendent to find out what was going on during the DEQE's visits.

On the first occasion, the supervisor was on vacation and the other certified operator took a sick day, leaving a utility man, who is not a certified operator in charge.

DeSantis defended the action, saying the man on duty previously had been given emergency certification, which had expired by the time of the DEQE visit.

The uncertified operator, he added, "is the best we've had."

Though the man in question is an eighth-grade drop-out and has reading difficulties, DeSantis said he is very mechanically inclined.

"He can pick up in six months, what it takes most people two years to learn," he added.

"It's hard for us to get someone well qualified," he explained, "Marshfield recently took our second certified operator."

On the second occasion, the supervisor was overseeing a sewer project, while the other certified operator was picking up lab results.

DeSantis commented, the plant is staffed by only two full time operators and one part time operator.

The plant is manned during regular business hours, and is checked on weekends, he added. "Someone is always available to respond."

DeSantis explained, the plant has an alarm system and the fire and police departments can reach the operators by radio anytime.

"Just because no one was there when the DEQE showed up doesn't mean we can't respond," he said.

DeSantis said the Sewer Commission will send the department a staffing plan for the facility, and hopes to work out the misunderstandings.

busy society, and we often don't have the time to be with an aunt or uncle or grandparent like we used to. But seniors have so much of value to share."

The elderly residents, on the other hand, will receive friendships from the association, she predicted. "I think some seniors are somewhat leary of teens and this may help to dispell some of that fear. I think this will benefit the boys and girls coming in here who don't know any elderly people."

Once inside the parish house Tuesday afternoon, high school counselor Bababian introduced the 20 teens who would be participating in the program.

The peer counseling group was initiated five years ago. The purpose, she explained, is to have kids assisting kids at the school. Fourteen juniors and seniors are selected each year from 75 applicants.

They are, she said "tutors, a big brother or sister, or like a host to another student who is new to the community. We train them in listening, responding and problem-solving, so they may counsel younger students," she said. "They know how much they can do, and what they can't do. The students who are selected need to give a lot of time to the program."

One boy said the peer counselors develop skills to "enhance our ability to communicate with others." He described activities they participate in which help "break the ice" between the group members.

One girl noted that the counseling skills they learn will endure after high school. "The value lasts," she said. "Problem-solving and listening skills are important. It's important to hear what people are saying. It's something you'll take with you as an adult. As a result of this class, I'm very conscious of listening now. These are skills I will take with me the rest of my life."

Another teen explained that the students who are deemed "the best listeners" are selected for the peer counseling program. Each year, seven junior and seven senior students are selected, so an experienced group of counselors participate each year.

A senior student said she's changed since her first days in the program. "Now there is a strong bond between us. We're all friends, and we're all close," she noted. "And the same thing will happen with next year's students."

CHS student Caitlin Staunton listens to Noel Edwards during a Tuesday introductory luncheon at the First Parish House.

One girl noted she was shy, but soon found the other students in the group "had the same qualities as me, and acquired the same skills."

"I'm not as apt to impose my opinions on anyone else," another girl stated. "I realize now that everyone is different, that we all have differing views."

Explaining how students counsel younger students, she added, "I have learned how to draw their problems out. Maybe I won't resolve them, but I can offer solutions and help them make decisions."

After listening to this explanation of the high school counseling program, the seniors were invited to sit down with the teens, one-to-one, for a brief introduction.

Animated conversations began as teens quickly turned to sit down with an adult. For a minute, they exhanged names and brief statements.

Then, as an 'ice breaker,' name tags were switched as each person assumed the identity of the person they were talking with. It was confusing, some seniors protested, but with a shrug of their shoulders and a chuckle, they proceeded.

Once again, the room was filled with chattering adults and teens. And once again, name tags were switched with a third person who assumed that foreign identity for another moment of conversation.

It was a strange mix, as jeans and sneakers were viewed alongside tweed sports jackets, polished shoes and handkerchiefs.

As counselor Porter begged an end to the conversation so that lunch could proceed, one woman stood to make her opinion heard above the crowd.

"There is nothing in this program that is negative," Jacqui Moores stated. "There is not one thing in this program that won't benefit you and someone else for the rest of their life. In school, there are always some subjects we didn't like, but we used them at some point in our lives. But this program is teaching kids how to cope with their problems while they're helping others. It's a two-edged thing, and that's wonderful."

As she approached the table where she would dine with her old and new acquaintances, Moores turned. "And I love that boy I talked to today. He's a doll!" she laughed.

ZBA delays decision on Autohaus expansion

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Autohaus wants its operation on Route 3A to grow, but the Zoning Board of Appeals wants to see evidence the proprietors there have green thumbs.

The car dealership has signed a lease on the old Bergson's Restaurant building next door, and is seeking to expand its sales and display area to that site.

In addition to its 130-vehicle inventory of new cars, Autohaus usually accomodates an average of 15 used cars, 15 employee vehicles and 30 cars brought in for service.

Presently, separate plans are pending for Autohaus to expand to an additional site across the highway.

The board expressed concern that the commercial stretch of Cohasset might become "another automile, like Route 1 in Norwood."

Chairwoman Myrna Putziger explained, the board is interested in beautifying the Route 3A area and she told the Autohaus representatives they must submit a landscaping plan, before the board votes whether or not to approve an expansion to the Bergson's building.

Charles Humphreys, the attorney for Autohaus told the board, the car dealership intends to display 37 vehicles on the forward half of the 28,000 square foot parcel adjacent to Route 3A. Four or five vehicles also will be displayed within the old Bergson's building.

Autohaus's expansion would benefit the area, the attorney argued, because "it would relieve incredible congestion on the Autohaus lot. They would be able to keep open traffic, display and fire lanes."

The business has suffered from the overcrowding, Humphreys said. Cars have been damaged and delivery trucks have had to unload on the street and have been turned away.

He added, traffic movement at the new site would be four or five times less than the traffic generated by the restaurant business there previously.

There also will be no problems with sanitation or drainage on the site, which had a history of septic problems during restaurant operation, Humphreys said. "There won't be a problem with this industry; it will result in an overall improvement for the area."

The ZBA isn't so sure.

The plan, Humphreys said, is to return the building's facade to red brick, so it will resemble the existing Autohaus building. A vehicle entry door also will be added to the building and fences will be erected on the old Bergson's site.

Board member Terence Farrell noted the area is all paved now and there are no plans for screening or green spaceand he criticized Autohaus for what he called its "lack of responsiveness to the town."

Farrell pointed to the continued presence of a trailer at the Autohaus lot, which he said should have been removed two years ago per town requests.

The Autohaus representatives told the board, the trailer is temporary.

As for green space, the apron between the parking lot and the highway has been recently resodded, they said.

When the board pressed for bushes and trees, they argued the site will be used for displaying cars, "making them visible to the traveling public."

The board was not satisfied.

"Would you prefer we propose a landscape design," Putziger asked, "or will you submit one?"

Humphreys told the board, they would have to talk with their landlord to see if they can present to the board, a uniform approach to the entire operation including both lots.

In addition to landscaping, the board questioned the legality of Autohaus's present practice of parking vehicles at the old Bergson's site, while no decision has yet been made by the town as to whether or not the dealership can expand its operation there.

The representatives assured the board they are only storing cars there now, not selling them from that site.

Building Commisioner Donald Robbins backed their claim.

Putziger concluded, "It will be useful to your case if you do not illegally use Bergson's and if you do remove the trailer."

The hearing will be continued at the board's next meeting, January 8.

around town

☐ A round of applause for Tim Chamberlain, son of Tom and Leslie Chamberlain of King Street, Tim is a senior at Thayer Academy this year, and received his varsity football letter for the second consecutive year. He and his teammates went undefeated with a seven win, no loss record. They also won the 16 team Independent School League Championship. To top all of that off, Tim was chosen All-League honorable mention defensive end! Good work Tim.

☐ Henry Kennedy wants his Cohasset (and Mariner) friends to know how very much each message, each persons name and each card so well chosen meant to him on his 90th birthday, which he celebrated at the Del-Manor Nursing Home Nov. 11. He sincerely thanks you all. Elinor joins in with sincere gratitude and thanks for the many prayers that were said in her behalf, after her devastating automobile accident. After four weeks she is grateful for the many cards, messages and friends who helped bring her through this long and painful time. As the Kennedys say, "This could only happen in Cohasset!"

☐ John Pattison certainly was surprised last Saturday night! He went to a party at the Legion thinking that it was for a friend when in fact it was a surprise birthday party for him, held by his family. Everyone had a lot of fun, there was tons of yummy food, and the "roast" was especially funny! Happy birthday to a fine man, and many more! And, hats off to your sons for pulling off such a fun-filled night . . . we're sure you won't forget that!

☐ Congratulations to Kevin Quilty, who was recently elected captain of the hockey team at Lawrence Academy. That's not all folks, Kevin was also captain of the soccer team (He was named all-league for that sport this year), and has been voted captain of the baseball team! That's really an honor, and one to be pround of. Our only regret is that he isn't playing these sports at CHS!

Skylar Ralston is overjoyed to meet the season's main man, Santa. Dad, Rob, seems pretty happy about the situation.

☐ Bon Voyage to Tony and Edna Finegan. They are enroute to Tallahassee, Florida for a special event. The Finegan's oldest daughter, Carol, is receiving her PHD in Clinical Psychology, and they are simply busting their buttons with pride! Its a double bonus, as its nice and warm in Tallahassee!

☐ Judging by the colossal crowds, the Village Fair had to have been a huge success! A real treat for all ages, the Common was bustling with children waiting to visit Santa, or have a chat with the Gingerbread man. Every table was full of beautiful things, there were treasures for everyone! All of your hard work paid off, ladies, it was grand!

☐ Mrs. Charles C. Ford and Mrs. Terrence H. White sure are busy gals lately. They are Museum Ladies Committee at the Museum of Fine Arts, and are in charge of the recently renovated and revitalized Evans Wing for Paintings receptions. The wing will open to the public on Dec. 12 (there were receptions and previews from Dec. 3 to 11 for Museum members.) The museum building is regarded as one of the most beautiful museum buildings in America, and the Wing was designed by Guy Lowell. It originally opened in 1915, and displays nearly 1,000 paintings throughout the galleries, which represents the history of Western art from the Renaissance to the present day.

☐ Everyone is envious of Samuel Polito, who won the grand prize of the Surf-Sailor Windsurfer in Bay Bank Norfolk's Grand opening contest! By the way, he has never been on a surfboard, much less a windsurfer! We're sure you'll love it!

☐ Hear that the cast of Godspell is to be congratulated on a fine performance! Everyone that attended the shows loved them and couldn't believe what a wonderful job they did! Hope this is the start of a yearly tradition!

☐ Glad to report that Joanne Egan is home and definitely on the mend. She looks super, and feels better every day.

☐ Three Cohasset realtors were recently honored by Hunneman and Co., Inc. Barbara Weisenfluh has achieved a residential sales volume of over $4 million: Claire Watts has achieved a $2 million volume, and Betsy Horak has reached a $1 million sales level.

Recognitioin of these accomplishments were given by Saul B. Cohen, president of Hunneman and Company, Inc., at a recent sales associates meeting held at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Danvers.

☐ A resident from Cohasset, Melissa Weier is performing in The Nutcracker as a Polichinelle. The production will be performed at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts, Dec. 4, through Jan. 4.

☐ A standing ovation for Phil Pisano . . . after handing all of us a thrilling season, he received the recognition that he so rightly deserves when the Boston Globe named him "Coach of the Year" in Division IV!!

☐ That's the news from here, please let us in on your latest events.

'White Christmas' a success

The Chamber of Commerce has spent the week resting up after their successful third annual "White Christmas in Cohasset" event, held Sunday, Nov. 30. Paul Barry and Joe Quinn were this year's co-chairmen.

Santa arrived at Cushing Plaza by helicopter at 11 a.m. to greet people, hand out candy canes and have his picture taken with the children aboard a float decorated by Judy Mantz of Judith Gale designs, with the help of Andrea Merrill and AFS students from Cohasset High School. The children also enjoyed pony rides and the hundreds of helium filled balloons.At 1 p.m. Santa boarded a fire truck and the festivities moved on to the Village Common after a brief stop-over at Tedeschi Plaza.

On the Common there were more pony rides, a hay ride and a moon walk. A beautiful team of matched horses pulled a red and white hay wagon filled with people around the entire common. The ponies, led by Jennifer O'Day, Erica Mahoney and Nancy Nevil, all 14, circled the duck-filled pond carrying smiling children on their backs.

The ladies from the Rockland Trust Bank looked festive in their red berets and aprons collecting tickets. The food was super and the smell of popcorn along with the sound of Christmas carols put everyone in the holiday spirit.

At dusk, Chamber President, Wayne Sawchuk, threw the switch to illuminate the hundreds of white lights on the trees around the common that he installed along with Paul Barry, Dick Straley, Ron Goodwin and Don Staszko. Area merchants donated items and services for a Christmas raffle and children in the crowd pulled the winning tickets for Sawchuk to announce.

Quinn and Barry wished to express their thanks to selectmen, the fire department, the police department, and the tree and park department; without their cooperation this event would not be possible. They also wish to thank residents and members who sponsored this event with a donation to the raffle and the Christmas carol booklet. On behalf of the entire Cohasset Chamber of Commerce they expressed Season's Greetings to all!

Peek at the Past

A lasting symbol

This is a special time of the year. Parents and children will partake of the joy and celebration that is soon to arrive.

Christmas is the holiday most anxiously awaited and celebrated within our communities, our schools and of course, our churches. Years ago, that was the single emphasis of this season.

Now, in deference and respect for the other religions within our community, we also highlight the celebration of Chanakah. It is important to remember that our Jewish friends and neighbors stand beside us in joyful observance of this time of year.

Parents delight when their children return from school, singing "Jingle Bells" and "To Grandmother's House We Go." And it is enriching and educational for us to listen to their Chanakah songs, words that many of us never heard before. Kindergarten children learn about the festival of lights and without hesitation they will recite the songs they have learned in school.

This is indeed how we should celebrate this season. It is a time for all to enjoy, a time of goodwill and a special feeling of humanity for people of all religions.

We have heard, however, from many teachers not only in this community, that many parents object to the heavy emphasis still placed on the Christian celebration of Christmas. They object to the religious overtones in school pageants and have requested that teachers eliminate all presentations and performances in single observance to Christmas.

This means for many children, no more "Night Before Christmas" renactments, no more references to Santa sliding down the chimney to fill our stockings with deserved rewards.

We have gone too far.

Yes, Santa was the creation of a Christian tradition. Strictly speaking, he is not associated with the Jewish celebration of gift-giving.

But he is a symbol that has endured in the hearts of children for generations. He is not Catholic, Jewish, Episcopalian or Unitarian to the anxious children waiting for their special day. He is hope in a desolute winter. He is comfort for the lonely, and Santa is the innocent and pure love in a child's eye.

Why must we take him away? Santa does not favor one religion over the other. He does not love one child more than the next.

He is the good in everyone. He is our hope that the adults of the future, the children of the present, will continue to carry out his message of peace and love. Why must we deprive our children of this magical creation?

Yes, children, there is a Santa. And despite what others say, he is here to stay.

Central America has effect here

Letters

To the Editor:

Accepting the fact that Central America and its problems are far removed from the normal day to day events and news of interest to South Shore readers, I am compelled to invite attention to the fact that events unfolding in Central America will have profound effect on all of us, if the fighting there expands significantly. Central America holds the potential of being another tragic "Vietnam" for the United States.

Conversely, if we choose to apply methods of cooperation, Central America can become the testing place and laboratory for learning the process of peacemaking that is so badly needed throughout the Globe.

In October Pope John Paul stated that "peace was a fundamental part of the teachings of Christ. . ." and that "Catholics have not always been faithful to this affirmation of faith." The Pope went on to condemn what he called the "culture of contempt" that regards other cultures as primitive, insignificant and unworthy; that such an attitude leads to a "culture of death, a culture of violence and a culture of evil."

His words echoed a call by the 1985 General Synod of the United Church of Christ USA for "local churches to organize their common life so as to make a difference in the achievement of a Just Peace and the ending of the institution of war."

For some of us on the South Shore these pronouncements have evoked reconsideration of how we Americans view our Western Hemisphere neighbors. Here is another statement that jarred us: "Americans are already fighting and dying in Central America." (Bill McGlashan, former White House Fellow and now Vice President for International Affairs of the Beyond War Foundation.) How's this report strike you?

Personally I found myself asking: "by what right do I as a US citizen reserve for myself the name 'American'?" "Do I value Central Americans less than North Americans?" "If I value us equally why am I willing to pay taxes to support one group of us killing another group of us?" "Can I cope with the knowledge that the weapons I supply maim and kill many fewer soldiers than civilians, the majority of whom are innocent children and women?"

Major John Brimsfield, USA, West Point history professor prior to the Nuclear Winter studies, projected 100 civilian casualties for each military casualty in the major war for which we are training uniformed US citizens. Our past clandestine policies are described by most knowledgeable statesmen and historians in the Americas, as those policies most likely to bring down on the heads of central Americans and others the fruits of this horrendous civilian to military casualty ratio. (a result analogous to what you could expect if we routinely used guns to settle family arguments). Is that really what we want for ourselves and our neighbors.

I am compelled to wonder: has our culture fostered in me a tendency toward violence in problem solving? Do Pope John Paul's words about "a culture of contempt" have some relevance for me? Does war determine who is right, or only who is left?

Fortunately this painful questioning can lead one to start learning less violent methods of problem solving in international as well as personal affairs. Our Nuclear Weapons predicament vis a vis the Soviet Union suggest that I will have to learn such gentler methods if I want to survive in the Nuclear age.

With the world now as tightly interconnected as this small area we call the South Shore, we are all called upon for a new mode of thinking: understanding that if war is not yet obsolete, it sure has become completely impractical.

Information on radon detection

By Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

Technology has brought about significant improvements in many aspects of the quality of life, chief among these being medical advances resulting in improved health care. In tandem with this, technology has also vastly increased awareness of what is health threatening. Each year new substances are found to pose possible health risks, and oftentimes these are substances unknown to most of the people they may affect.

One such substance currently in the news is radon, a radioactive gas which is a product of nature and eludes sight, smell and taste. In most instances, there is no cause for alarm over this invisible substance, but since it is potentially dangerous in some cases, awareness is important.

Radon detection can be performed with two different types of commercially available devices ranging in price from $10 to $50. Further information on detectors and other aspects of radon and its effects can be obtained from the Department of Public Health's Radiation Control Program, 150 Tremont Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02111, 727-6214. A detailed pamphlet, "A Citizen's Guide to ıdon," is also available.

Homes built by war veterans . . .

oversee the planning and subdivision of the land.

"We moved quickly," Pratt said, recalling the urgency of the situation. Veterans who envisioned one day living on that land, meanwhile rented homes or lived with in-laws.

Three veterans of World War II were named to the committee, Ronald Beal, Eustis James and Pratt. They were joined by World War I vets Edward A. Mulvey Sr. and Norman Card. Their assignment was to have the land surveyed, plot out the properties, and recommend a method of distributing the land.

The land was surveyed by Perkins Engineering. In fact, Pratt stated, he recently met Clark Perkins, an owner of the company and one of the land's surveyors. "I met him about a year ago, and when I told him who I was he quickly remembered surveying the land at the old Town Farm. He said that was the hardest survey he ever did. He told me the briars were so thick there, he had about ten men hack through them for ten hours a day and they'd only get a few feet into the property, Then they had to bring in a backhoe. This was news to me," Pratt said. "I never realized the land was like that. And he told me this, 40 years later!"

By July of 1947 the land had been surveyed and the property was divided into 50 lots, each averaging $16,000 square feet.

"There was no zoning in the town at this time," Pratt stated. "And later, we were criticized for cutting the lots too small. In retrospect, our critics were probably right. Considering the drainage problems they've had there, we probably should have made them larger."

The method of distribution was simple. Lottery numbers were to be drawn from a hat, and the veterans who put down their $100 in cash, were allowed to pick a number. Twenty-one men picked a number that Saturday night.

"Only 21 veterans participated in the lottery," Pratt said. "I'm not sure why more weren't involved. Probably the number of veterans wasn't that great. As the year progressed, selectmen assigned the lots as they were requested. Some non veterans were assigned the latter lots."

Subsequent town meetings appropriated money for the construction of roads and utilities. Members of local womens' groups toured the land and selected appropriate names for the new streets, indicative of the vegetation they found along the land.

By 1949, 28 lots were claimed. Seventeen homes were being built, seven were already lived in. And of those 17 homes, only two were built by contractors. The veterans, for the most part, constructed their homes by hand.

Pratt remembered the night of the land lottery. "My good friend, Austin Ahearn was hoping to get an early pick because he had a hillside lot selected. He had sketches for the home he wanted to build there. And now, I'd say, he has one of the more beautiful homes in that area."

Ahearn also recalled how he acquired his home on Clay Spring Road, where he still resides.

"I sure did get the one I wanted! It's high on the hill, looking down on the land below," he said. "I built 90 percent of the home myself. My wife and I both worked on the house at night after work. It was a year and a half before we could move in, and even then it was unfinished. The kitchen sink was on saw horses. It was a mess, but we had to get in. I was paying $50 a month in rent, and that was about all I was getting paid."

Ahearn figured he was about the 15th person to move into the developing neighborhood. A native of the town, Ahearn wanted to remain in Cohasset. "I didn't know any better, I hadn't lived anywhere else before," he laughed.

The Ahearns remain in the seven-room Cape. Since they moved in, he has built additions to the home and landscaped the property.

"They're going to have to take me out of here feet first," he said. "I've always loved this neighborhood. I'm comfortable here . . . always have been."

Another 'original' resident of the area is Charles 'Pat' McCarthy of Bayberry Lane.

He was 30 years old and had three children when he began constructing his colonial seven-room home. While he was renting a home in Cohasset, McCarthy worked on the home, with carpenters completing the work he could not finish on the weekends.

The McCarthy family moved into their finished home Christmas night, 1948.

"I love this neighborhood," he said, almost 40 years later. "There's no baloney here, everybody's truthful. We were all friends here when we first moved in. We'd have little parties at our homes and invite the neighbors. Most of the neighbors have changed, though."

"The house is big for me, now. I just use the kitchen and den and the bedroom. But I'm glad I stayed in Cohasset. I had a lot of friends here and my kids had a lot of friends. It was a nice place for them to grow up."

The Town Home, built 1906, torn down 1943

Jim Rosano drew lot number 22 in the lottery hat. He had property on Tupelo Road already selected. "It's on a little knoll, where the drainage could flow on either side. I was born in Cohasset, and love this town. I had opportunities back then to move to Scituate where my wife came from, but I wanted to stay here," he said.

A construction crew framed the five-room, one-level home, and with help and tools from friends Cliff Dickson, Rusty Jenkins, Pat McCarthy, Richard Salyards, and Johnny Rhodes, his home was completed.

"Sometimes I wouldn't see my wife for a week. I'd start on the house right after work and stay here until 1 or 2 in the morning. I was the first person to dig a cellar, but I didn't move for another year and three months. Meanwhile, I was renting a place on South Main Street," he recalled.

"I like my home. That's why I've never moved," he continued. "I've always felt secure in this neighborhood. My friends were here, and we all worked together. My brother-in-law, Leo Feori, Rusty Jenkins and Richard Salyards, we all built our own homes. We traded tools and helped each other."

Rosano considered the land a "memorial to the town's veterans. It was really a gift they gave us when we returned here," he said. "A hundred dollars was big money in those days. We weren't about to invest $100 without building something."

The Cohasset native recalled the notoriety the lottery brought to this tiny town. "Everyone in the state heard about what Cohasset had done for its veterans. We'd been working on the house on weekends, and there'd be a line of cars moving down the street. All these out-of-towners were a pain in the neck. There was a lot of interest because we were original. Sundays they'd come while we were all working on our homes and stare and ask us questions. What a pain!" he remembered.

"I think that neighborhood is just what we had envisioned," committee member Pratt stated. "It's a pleasant area. The homes are all different, according to the tastes of the individual builders. It's not a typical subdivision, and it has its own identity. The people who live there are happy."

Lagrotteria seeks assessor post

James W. Lagrotteria, a former advisory committee member, will seek the office of assessor.

For the past fourteen years he has held the position of business manager at Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham. He has been a cubmaster and scout leader, and printer of "Cohasset-the-first-100-years."

He served eight years on the Cohasset advisory committee and was chairman of that board for two years.

Lagrotteria is the father of eleven children and resides at 104 Howe Road. His wife is Dorothy R. (Oliver), a longtime resident of Cohasset.

Born in Cohasset at 161 Hull Street, Lagrotteria attended Cohasset schools and was class president of the first class to graduate from the high school in 1952.

He attended Boston College and Northeastern University prior to Military Service. He graduated from Ranger/Officers training school at Ft. Benning, GA in 1955. He has an extensive background in the printing trades and for five years held the position as a board member of the Craftmen's Club: the largest printing/managers club in New England.

Presently he is a member of the advisory board of Brandon Woods, a retirement community planned in Hingham.

Nuclear moratorium bill

State Senator William Golden (D-Norfolk/Plymouth) has filed legislation which, among other things, would put a moratorium on nuclear plant construction in Massachusetts until a high level radio active waste disposal site is developed.

Golden has filed four pieces of legislation dealing with energy and nuclear power. The first would increase emergency preparedness zones around nuclear power plants from ten to forty miles, with a majority of voters approving emergency preparedness plans.

The second bill would require utilities owning nuclear power plants in Massachusetts to pay all costs associated with emergency response plans, based on data provided by the State director of Civil Defense.

them the permit they needed.

The trustees' original plan would have more than doubled the size of the pre-existing house, which was already a non-conforming structure that was built before zoning bylaws were adopted by the town.

After the board's denial, Merrill and Gailinas went to the Superior Court, where Judge Roger Donahue remanded their application to the Cohasset ZBA for a rehearing.

According to the board's new decision, the trustees were "mindful of the board's objections to the prior renovation plan" when they submitted "schematic design plans for a more limited alteration and enlargement of the existing structure."

In the revised plan, three of the four existing walls enclosing the basement of the house will be removed and replaced with open railing.

"By so altering the configuration of the lowest level of the structure," the board said, "such level will cease to be a 'story' of the building as defined in the bylaw, thus clarifying the height as not exceeding two stories."

Merrill and Gailinas will demolish a 23-foot long portion of the top floor they previously added, leaving the area exposed as an open deck enclosed by railing.

And they will pitch the roof of the remaining addition to provide a lower roof line.

The board said, in its first decision denying a special permit to Merrill and Gailinas, "we were particularly concerned that the forward and vertical extension of the preexisting structure significantly increased the actual and perceived detriment to the neighborhood."

The height of the house prior to renovation, the board added, in relation to the level of the roadway of Jerusalem Road "was such that the top of the structure was not visible from the road or from adjacent property."

So the original building's non-conformity "was of less significance since it was not visible from most vantage points," it said.

When the building was extended in height, however, the board said it felt the alteration of the non-conforming condition was intrusive.

The board agreed, the alterations and enlargements as shown in the revised plans do not increase "the degree of nonconformity.

"The board's most significant objections to the character of the prior renovation have been removed," it explained.

Along with the potential obstruction, of view, parking related perils at the site were of great concern tro abutters opposed to the project.

The parking area is a patch of pavement approximately 27 feet wide and 30 feet deep. Motorists using this parking area must back onto Jerusalem Road when leaving the parking area, because of the limited amount of parking and maneuvering space.

The location and dimensions of the parking area violate a couple of town bylaws, but the board noted, it is a preexisting condition, which will continue in its current state, even after the building is renovated.

The board hoped to quell the neighbors' disgruntlement by stipulating two additional conditions in granting the trustees a special permit.

First, Merrill and Gailinas must seek the necessary approvals from the town of Cohasset to install, at their expense, a sign along the southerly side of Jerusalem Road warning motorists of the existence of a blind driveway.

Finally, the trustees must make sure the rail enclosing the second-story deck "is constructed to the lowest possible height and with the least possible density of enclosure, which will comply with the requirements of the state building code (to help preserve the neighbors' views)."

Morning with Santa Dec. 13

The Cohasset Community Center will present a "Morning with Santa" Saturday, Dec. 13 from 9 till 11 a.m. at the Deer Hill School.

A continental breakfast will be served. Santa will arrive at 9:45 a.m. There will be activities for children, and photos with Santa will be available. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children.

Tickets must be purchased in advance at the Center from 9 a.m. - 1 p.m. or by calling 383-0048.

Legion Christmas party

December 13, the American Legion Auxiliary invites its members' children and grandchildren 10 and under, to their annual Children's Xmas party.

All members of the Auxiliary and Post are asked to call Jill at 383-0372 with the names and ages of the children.

The party will be held at the Legion function room from 1-3 p.m. A strict deadline date will be Dec. 5.

Calling Santa

Attention, all children! If you want to talk to Santa Claus or Mrs. Claus at the North Pole, just dial 545-4000 any time between 5 and 9 p.m. Monday, Dec. 8, through Thursday, Dec. 11.

Arrangements for a telephone connection between Scituate and the North Pole were made by Robert P. Magner, a director of the Chamber of Commerce, which annually sponsors this Yuletide activity.

Amateur Gardeners meeting

The members of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Tuesday, Dec. 16 at 1 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Ruthven Walsh for a Christmas party and gift exchange. Mrs. Helen Goodwin will be co-hostess.

Boston Cameraata concert

The Boston Camerata will present its traditional Christmas program entitled In Dulci Jubilo: Early German Christmas Music Sunday, Dec. 21 at 3 p.m. at St. Anthony's Church.

An ensemble of vocalists, accompanied by an instrumental consort will perform music from Germany that was composed over four hundred years ago, but some of which is still sung today to celebrate the Christmas season. Featured will be Christmas carols, motets and instrumental fantasias, including works by Senfl, Lassus, Praetorius and other great masters.

Ticket prices are $15, $12, and $9 and can be purchased at the Fleming's on 24 Elm St., Cohasset Village, or by mailing a self-addressed, stamped envelope to The Boston Camerata, 25 Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02116. Telephone orders with Mastercard or Visa will be taken during office hours at 262-5459 and with all credit cards through Concertcharge at 497-1118. Rush seats based on availability for $6 will be given to students under 25 with ID and to Senior Citizens at the door.

The Boston Camerata is an internationally-celebrated ensemble of singers and instrumentalists dedicated to bringing alive the music of the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, and the early Baroque.

Children's movies at library

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will present a Christmas film program for children at the library at 1:30 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 11, an early release day. The program is suitable for children in grades 1-3. The films are:

A Christmas Gift
The First Christmas Tree
Mickey's Christmas Carol

The program is free; however, because of limited space, no child will be admitted without a ticket. Tickets must be picked up beforehand by a parent. There is a limit of 75 tickets.

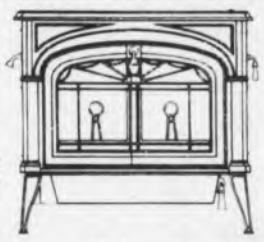
A GREAT PERFORMANCE DESERVES AN ENCORE.


Vermont Castings has revolutionized the art of woodburning. Again. They did it the first time with the Defiant, a handsome, efficient woodstove with doors that opened for a view of the fire.

They've done it again with the Defiant Encore. With a strikingly beautiful design that will enhance any decor, a large, clear glass area for fire viewing, a super convenient ash removal system, and an incredibly clean-burning combustion system, the Encore is a tough act to follow.

See the Defiant Encore and our complete line of Vermont Castings products today:

Present Laughter audition

Auditions for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter production of the Noel Coward comedy, Present Laughter, will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall, Sunday, Dec. 14, from 2 to 5 p.m. This play will be directed by Judy Holmes of Hingham. Production dates are planned for Feb. 27 and 28, and March 1, 6, and 7.

Playbooks are available for sign-out at the Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset.

'Marshalairs' to sing

Marshfield High School's "Marshalairs" will present a program of Christmas music at the meeting of the South Shore Republican Club Monday, Dec. 15, at the First Parish Church hall, Norwell Center.

The 1 p.m. program will be preceded by a social at noon. Hostesses will be members from Scituate.

All members are reminded to bring handcrafts, baked goods or white elephants to be sold at the Christmas boutique, the club's major fund-raising activity.

Musical concert Dec. 11

The next concert of the Boston Morning Musicales will be held Thursday, Dec. 11, at 11 a.m. in the Oval Room of the Copley Plaza Hotel. The performing artists will be The Brass Ring, a brass quintet.

Mrs. N. Frank Neer, Jr. of Cohasset is the Musicales Chairman of the series of concerts, held for the benefit of Tufts University's Boston School of Occupational Therapy. Mrs. Raymond A. Remick of Cohasset, is a member of the Advertising Committee.

Art Center wins $25,000 grant

For a second year, the South Shore Art Center has been named a recipient of a major grant from the Joseph Drown Foundation, a Lost Angeles-based philanthropic group.

The $25,000 grant has been earmarked by the Center, at 103 Ripley Road, in Cohasset, for use to expand its satellite art program already underway in several communities of the South Shore.

The grant awarded last year enabled the Center to embark on a program of taking its children's classes out to the communities of Scituate, Hingham, Hull and Norwell.

As a result of the original grant the Center has a full schedule of courses for young artists offered in these communities.

With the current grant the center will undertake a three-fold expansion of its original concept. The first step has been to provide an artist for the special needs class in the Cohasset school to work with the students on various art projects. The special needs class at the Deer Hill Elementary School is a collaborative class serving students from Hull, Scituate, Weymouth, Quincy, Norwell and Cohasset.

Artist Nancy Connolly goes once a week for six weeks to this class and works with the students on special art projects such as using wax resist crayon together with tempera or making masks.

Such a program should expose the students to a whole new world of expressing one's creativity through painting, working with clay or making a mask. The results of their efforts will be on display at the Center during the Winter Open House in January.

A second part of the expansion is a traveling art exhibit, on a small scale, of work by successful South Shore artists. The first such exhibits will hang in the corridors of Quincy High School, N. Quincy High School, Hull High School, Cohasset High School and Weymouth North High School. The exhibits will hang from two-to-four weeks and will change monthly. Additional schools will be selected for the traveling exhibit program.

A third part "Art Is Art" will commence once the Center is in its new facility which is around the corner from its present site. The idea of "Art Is Art" is to show students the link between the visual arts and the performing arts — music, drama, video, dance, etc. Students will gain a better understanding of how the visual arts are woven into the other forms of art and the interdependence of the arts on one another.

With the first grant from the Drown Foundation the center was able to open up new avenues for bringing art out to the communities. And with the second grant the Center is able to expand these channels of exposure to the visual arts. Grants such as these are awarded annually by the Drown Foundation to fund educational, medical and scientific projects.

The South Shore Art Center is also supported in part by a grant from the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Recreation programs . . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for dog obedience classes to be taught by Laurie Ann Cleveland.

All classes will be held at the GAR Hall in Scituate, and will begin Sunday evening, Jan. 11. Beginner class will be Sundays at 6:30 p.m., intermediate/advanced class will be held Sundays at 7:30 p.m.

The purpose of beginner classes is to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and rsponsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The indermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the recreation department beginner class.

Owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars are allowed!!

It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session.

For all classes: the fee is $25 per dog for the eight-week, one-hour lessons. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age. There is no maximum age. To register please call the recreation department office at 383-6791.

Ski Trips - 1987

Registrations are now being conducted for the Gunstock Ski trip scheduled for Monday, Jan. 19, Martin Luther King Holiday. The cost is $28 per person for the lift ticket and round trip, motor coach transportation. Payments must be made by Wednesday, Dec. 17. You may call the recreation department office, at 383-6791, to register.

All ski trips are conducted through the recreation department's revolving account fund for self-supporting programs. However, should anyone have financial problems regarding the fee, contact Jack Worley and confidential arrangements can be made to waive or discount the fee.

Aerobic exercise classes

Margaret Watson's 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., Aerobic classes on Tuesday and Thursday evening's will begin a new session Tuesday, Dec. 16, at the Town Hall Auditorium.

However, Margaret will offer one free class Thursday evening, Dec. 11, from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. and anyone may attend.

Sessions are eight weeks and cost $32 for two evenings per week, or $18 for one evening per week for eight weeks. You may register at the free demonstration class Dec. 11, or the Dec. 16 class.

Morning Aerobic Classes

Beginning Tuesday and Thursday, from 9 to 10 a.m., Jan. 6, and 8, Sandy Wiggans will hold her morning aerobic classes.

School news . . .

Early release day

Thursday, Dec. 18, will be an Early Release Day for the Cohasset Elementary Schools only. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

School	Buses Depart
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served

This Early Release Day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff members at the elementary schools to complete report conferences.

CHS Christmas concert

Music lovers of all ages are invited to attend the Cohasset High School Music Department's Holiday Concert, Wednesday, Dec. 17, at 7:30 p.m. at the high school auditorium.

The Junior and Senior classes and Barbershop group will perform under the direction of Bryan Marks. Steven Shirosky will conduct the Junior and Senior bands and Jazz ensemble. The music dept. also promises some fun surprises (members of the faculty carry a tune?) plus a chance for alumni to sing along.

Refreshments will follow the performance. Come support CHS music, you won't be disappointed!

Dates to remember

Thursday, Dec. 11-Early release, all schools. Deer Hill Holiday Concert at C.H.S., 7:30 p.m.
Saturday, Dec. 13-"Godspell", 8 p.m., CHS Auditorium. Cohasset Community Center "Breakfast with Santa,"9 to 11 a.m.
Tuesday, Dec. 16-Christmas Sing-a-Long, Osgood School, 10:30 a.m.
Wednesday, Dec. 17-Jr./Sr. Christmas Concert Choral and Instrumental, C.H.S., 7:30 p.m.
Thursday, Dec. 18-Early release day, Osgood and Deer Hill Schools-parent conferences.
Friday, Dec. 19-Schools close at end of day. Christmas vacation begins.

CCC programs

The Community Center-will present a "Morning With Santa" Saturday, Dec. 13 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Deer Hill School. A continental breakfast will be served and Santa will arrive at 9:45. There will be activities for children and photos with Santa will be available. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children. Tickets must be purchased in advance at the Center from 9 to 1 Monday through Friday or by calling Kathy Pratt at 383-0048.

Children's Movies at Library-The Paul Pratt Library will present a Christmas film program for children at the Library at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 11, an early release day. The program is suitable for children in grades 1 to 3. The films are: A Christmas Gift, The First Christmas Tree and Mickey's Christmas Carol. The program is free; however, because of limited space, no child will be admitted without a ticket. Tickets will be available at the Library's main desk beginning Saturday, Dec. 6 and it is requested that tickets be picked up by an adult as there is a limit of 75 tickets.

Deer Hill poster artists pose along the artwork they completed through the summer. The artists who drew original creations from the "My Little Pony" character included: Anne Lindgren, Christa Ansberg, Bonnie Krueger, Bethany Maciel and Anne Senechal.

Art Club slides

Sally Hurtig of the Cohasset High School Art Club presented slides of England Tues., Dec. 9 at 2 p.m. in the AV studio at the High School. Tea & crumpets were served.

The Christmas Crafts Workshop sponsored by the Art Club the first week in December was a huge success. Projects included stencilled cards, ornaments, origami, candles and much more. All agreed it was a great way to get into the Christmas spirit.

Author at Deer Hill

Stephen Harris, author and actor will appear on Tues., Jan. 6 at the Deer Hill School for grades 5 and 6 from 8:40 to 9:30 a.m.; and at the Osgood School for grades 3 and 4 from 12:45 to 1:40 p.m.

The language arts teachers are interested in the concept of "writing as a process." During January, the sixth graders are involved in the creative writing contest.

Stephen Harris is an actor who uses music, juggling and magic to dramatically demonstrate the writing process.

UnitedWay raises a record $42 million in 1986

The United Way of Massachusetts Bay wrapped up its 1986 fund-raising drive on November 25 with a record $42,216,787.

A total of 3,206,547 new dollars was raised in one of the best United Way campaigns in the country. This was the fifth consecutive year that the local United Way has raised more than 3.2 million new dollars.

The campaign met 97.5 percent of its goal of $43.3 million.

Employees in the South Region—which includes 21 communities south of Boston—contributed $1,011,012 or 107 percent of their $944,000 goal.

Leading this successful drive was John C. Hartnett of Needham, United Way south division chairman and president of Shawmut Quincy Bank in Quincy.

Strong support for this year's drive came from local organizations including: CIBA/Corning Diagnostics Corp. of Medfield—a 170 percent increase; Multibank Financial Corp. of Dedham—13 percent increase and an average give of $118; The Talbots of Hingham—a 23 percent increase; BayBank Norfolk County Trust Co.—raised more than $57,000; Quincy Cooperative Bank of Quincy—34 percent increase; Boston Financial Data Services, Inc. of Quincy—410 percent increase and a $95 average gift.

Campaign contributions will benefit 190 agencies—many of them in the local area—serving 81 cities and towns in eastern Massachusetts. Last year, more than 100,000 residents in the South Region were served by United Way agencies.

Toys for Tots at NAS

The local Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots program is currently underway by the Marine unit located at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

The Toys for Tots program is an annual toy-collecting drive spearheaded by Marines located in more than 180 cities throughout the United States. The toys are given to less fortunate children at Christmas time. Last year, the Boston area program reached 56,000 needy children.

The local Toys for Tots spokesmen are Lieutenant Garrett Sylvain and Gunnery Sergeant Cliff Reuling. Local businesses assisting with this year's program include Greater Boston Cable Company, Midas Muffler, Ground Round Restaurants and Northern Bathroom Tissue.

Marines will be establishing collection points throughout surrounding communities. They appreciate local donations of new, unwrapped toys for the drive.

On Saturday, Dec. 13, most of the toys will be distributed throughout the Boston area by 30 pick-up trucks donated for that purpose by the New England Chevrolet Truck Association. The trucks will leave here after a brief ceremony at Hangar 2 (Marine Hangar) at 9:30 a.m. The rest of the toys will be distributed through Dec. 22.

Seahawks Gold Mite B team victorious

The Seahawk Gold Mite B team had a successful weekend with two victories.

On Saturday, the Gold overpowered their opponents from Hingham 7 to 1. Their front line exploded for four goals in the first period.

The first of three goals by Marcus Willy was sensational. He stole the puck from two Hingham defenders, hit it to center ice, outraced another Hingham player and, despite almost being tripped from behind, regained his balance soon enough to fire the puck from the right side of the slot just inside the far post.

Willy's second goal came when the Seahawks had a three on one break. Marcus was leading the pack, stick handled around the last defender, deked the goalie and slid it into the open net.

Anthony Wigmore was on fire all day. Playing on right wing, he lifted one from the top of the circle and bounced it past a befuddled goal tender. Wigmore's second goal came on a beautiful feed from Charlie Keyes, deep in the corner. Keyes got it to Wigmore, parked in the slot right in front of the goal. Wigmore took the pass on his backhand and slid it into the open half of the net.

It was super passing like that from Charlie Keyes that earned him a play marker's badge for three assists in one game.

Meanwhile, the defense was doing its job keeping Hingham off the scoreboard. Teddy Malley was especially outstanding. On two different occasions, he broke up potential scoring threats of two on one. He may look small, but Malley, has the knack of challenging the puck carrier, getting right in close and even leaning into the opponent so that they can't get off a good shot or pass. Then he's sturdy enough that he manages to skate even the biggest of opponents out of the play and toward the corner.

Finishing out the scoring for the Seahawks was Kurt Wright with an assist by Brian Reilly and Nicky Esposito with an assist by Ryan Curry. That gave the Seahawks their first victory of the weekend.

Sunday's game was more of a squeaker over a much improved Weymouth squad. Weymouth got the first goal, but Marcus Willy came right back on a nice feed from Charlie Keyes and scored on a hard shot from the right circle. The score at the end of one period was 1 to 1.

Near the end of the second period Kurt Wright got a pass from Heller who was behind the net and quickly fired it past the Weymouth goalie.

Throughout the third period both teams battled furiously, and the pressure mounted as the time dwindled down. Jimmy Glennan was spectacular in net and made several key saves. Then Anthony Wigmore scored off a Marcus Willy rebound with only 23 seconds left in the game.

At that point there was an almost audible sigh from the fans of both teams. But what looked like an insurance goal turned out to be the game winner as Weymouth never gave up and scored at the buzzer to make the final Seahawks Gold 3, Weymouth 2. It was Mite hockey at its best, and both teams can look forward to the rematch.

Hingham hockey jamboree

Eighteen teams will compete in the jamboree in Hingham, Saturday, Dec. 13, at 5 p.m.

The first game will feature Blue Hills Regional vs Hull. Other games include: Weymouth North vs Duxbury at 5:20 p.m.; Silver Lake vs Abington at 6:10 p.m.; Weymouth South vs Cohasset at 6:30 p.m.; Hingham vs Rockland at 7:20 p.m.; Marshfield vs Boston Latin at 7:40 p.m.; Archbishop Williams vs Needham at 8:30 p.m.; Scituate vs South Boston at 8:50 p.m.; Braintree vs Westwood at 9:40 p.m.

Christmas Poinsettia - Once again we are looking for donors for poinsettia to decorate our chancel table Christmas Sunday and Christmas Eve. Please call the church office, 383-1100 or Barbara Bliss, 383-0247.

Christmas Concert Tickets - Tickets are now on sale at the church office at $3 for our annual benefit Christmas Concert to be held in the Meeting House Sunday evening, Dec. 7, at 7:30 p.m. We look forward to another superb concert featuring the Unicorn Singers under the direction of Margo Euler. They will perform "The Christmas Story," Distler's masterpiece based on the familiar "Lo, how a rose e'er blooming" and other a-cappella music of the season, as well as carols for all to sing.

Again this year we have designated Rosie's Place, a shelter for homeless women in Boston, as the beneficiary of our concert. To date we have 47 patrons. If you wish there is still time to become a patron of the concert by making a contribution of $25. Patrons receive two complimentary tickets. Don't miss out on this opportunity to benefit a good cause and to enjoy some beautiful Christmas music.

Save On Taxes - For many of you, charitable gifts made this year will generate larger tax savings than gifts made last year. You may save money by paying off the balance of your pledge (operating budget or building fund) before December 31. Please write separate checks if you are contributing to both at the same time and clearly mark them either operating budget or building fund.

Parish Personals - During the summer on July 14, Ryan Wescott Norwood, born April 11, 1986, son of Kenneth Westcott Norwood and Anne Adams (Woods) Norwood, was christened in the Meeting House. This is the third generation of the Woods family to be christened at the Meeting House.

Second Congregational

In The Family - The church extends its sympathy to the family of Elmer Pratt who died last Sunday.

When Christmas Comes -

Have you any old grudge you'd like to pay?
And wrong laid up from a bygone day?
Gather them all now, and lay them away
When Christmas comes.
Hard thoughts are heavy to carry, my friend,
And life is short from beginning to end;
Be kind to yourself, leave nothing to mend
When Christmas comes.

First Parish Services

Warner Bros. $ -

Eric Kluz, Bill Bell and Robert Leary have agreed to serve as a screening committee to decide how to use the $25,000 received from Warner Bros. for the use of the Meeting House for the filming of The Witches of Eastwick.

During the next two weeks, all groups that have an interest in how to use these monies should present a written report to this committee. The report should include a statement of your group's exact intended use, substantiated with accurate costs. After the screening committee reviews all of the ideas submitted, we will call a meeting to discuss in more detail all suggestions.

If ideas are not submitted to the screening committee, they will not be considered for allocation of any part of the $25,000. Please organize your plans and collect the necessary data to submit your report to Bobbie, Eric or Bill by the two-week deadline.

If you have any questions, please call me.

Music Notes -

The Unicorn Singers Christmas Concert at First Parish is early this year, and comes right after the Christmas Fair, so we need to work especially hard to have a large audience. Usually this is the concert that knocks me out for the season, because it involves carols for audience, carols for chorus, funny descants, little pieces of paper with notes on them ("2nd verse in A-flat!") — some of them sideways — and a big piece that requires non-stop logistical coordination by mirror from the organ. This year is different, however. There are still lots of carols to sing and hear, and there is still a long piece in the middle; but the carols are mostly familiar, and one set is accompanied by guitar only, and the long piece, by Distler, is totally unaccompanied, consisting mostly of variations on "Lo, How a Rose E'er blooming." The effect is sort of a warm glow which should make a perfect finale to the Christmas Fair.

By attending the concert you will be donating money to Rosie's Place in Boston, one of the most active agencies in aid to the homeless in the area. You don't have to walk around Boston long to see that the need is enormous. Please come, both for a lovely Christmas experience, and to give help to those who cannot help themselves.

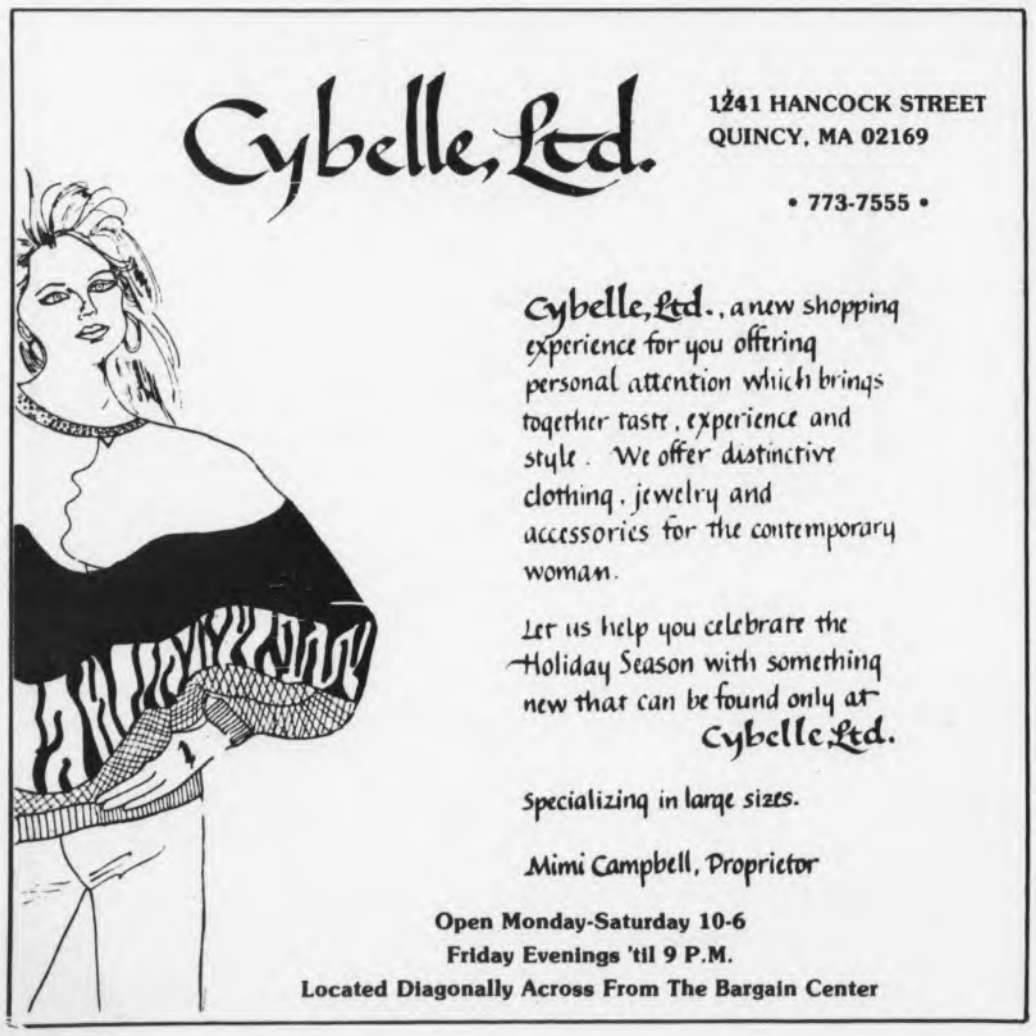
(early release day). Grade 3 & up: In preparation for Christmas, confessions will be heard for all students and their families on Saturday, Dec. 13, at 4:00.

Everlasting Light-An excellent Christmas concert by the "Saints and Singers", a 50 member choral group from Cape Cod, will perform on Sunday, Dec. 7, 4 p.m. at St. Anthony's. There is no admission charge but donations will be accepted.

Pilot Subscriptions-Please mail directly to the Pilot Publishing Office, 49 Franklin Street, Boston, MA. 02110 (not to the rectory). Thanks.

Christmas Fair-Special thanks to all who contributed to its success.



Obituaries

Clement Titcomb

Private funeral services were held for Clement Titcomb, 71, who died Tuesday, Dec. 2 at New England Baptist Hospital in Boston.

Mr. Titcomb was former president of New England Foundation, a company that laid forms for construction of building foundations. He was president of the company, which was founded by his father, Albert Titcomb, until his retirement in 1985.

Born in Newburyport, he lived in Cohasset for more than 50 years.

He leaves his wife, Mary "Polly" (Long) Titcomb; five sons, Clement Titcomb Jr. of New York; William B. Titcomb of Florida; A. Cushing Titcomb of Ipswich, Richard L. Titcomb of Virginia, and Nathaniel B. Titcomb of Connecticut; a stepson, Jonathan Chase of California; two sisters, Joan Perkins and Elizabeth Blow, both of New York, and 13 grandchildren.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 1105 W. Chestnut St., Brockton, 02401, or to the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, 43 Althea Road, Randolph, 02368.

Vivian Belcher

Funeral services were held Sunday, Dec. 7 at the Sparrell-McNamara Funeral Home, for Vivian E. (Webb) Belcher, 84, who died Friday from injuries suffered that day in a car accident. Burial was in the Washington Street Cemetery.

Mrs. Belcher was a member of the Congregational Church of Scituate and the Senior Citizens of Norwell and Cohasset. She was a former resident of Scituate and Norwell.

Born in Quincy, she was a Cohasset resident for many years. She had lived in Scituate and attended school there.

Wife of the late Everett E. Belcher, she leaves a nephew, Howard R. Burleigh of Rockland; and four nieces, Marion C. Smith of Cohasset, Priscilla Demello of Scituate, Mirneva Davenport of Norwell, and Mae Woodworth of Rockland. She was the aunt of the late Wilson E. Burleigh.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 1105 W. Chestnut St., Brockton, 02401.

Frances Leone

A funeral Mass was celebrated Friday, Dec. 5 in St. Anthony's Church for Frances (Suits) Leone, 82, who died Tuesday, Dec. 3 at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mrs. Leone retired 25 years ago from the New England Telephone Co. An accomplished pianist and artist, she was well known for her children's portraits in oils and pastels.

Mrs. Leone was a member of the 60 Plus Club of Cohasset.

Wife of the late Jeremiah J. Leone, she leaves three stepdaughters, Bonnie Leone of North Scituate, Gerry Henry of Cohasset, and Laurie Gonsalves of Andover; a sister, Jean Suits of Florida and seven grandchildren.

Martha Leikus

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday, Dec. 9 at the Sacred Heart Church in Weymouth Landing for Martha (Marklis) Leikus, 81, who died Saturday at home. Principal celebrant at the Mass was Rev. John J. Ronaghan of St. Mark's Church in Dorchester, a cousin of Mrs. Leikus. Burial was in Cedar Grove Cemetery in Dorchester.

Born in Hopkington, Mrs. Leikus was a longtime Weymouth resident. She moved to Cohasset 11 years ago.

Mrs. Leikus retired from the Boston and Framingham offices of the New England Telephone Co.

Wife of the late Charles J. Leikus, she leaves a daughter, Martha E. Auallone of Whitman; a sister, Ella Hill of Bel Air Bluffs, Fla., and a granddaughter, Evelyn Daughery of West Bridgewater. She was also the sister of the late Paul Markis.

Marilyn Cohen has a lot to 'glitter' about

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

For 14 years, Marilyn Cohen has recited the children's poem, "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," to her Scituate kindergarten classes.

Now, she's taking that nursery rhyme in a more literal sense.

Two weeks ago, Cohen, a half-time kindergarten teacher at the Hatherly School, and her best friend, Harrie Quint, opened a unique business that's bound to create a lot of attention.

Nestled in a cozy corner inside Hingham's Anchor Electronics, 207-211 Lincoln St., where seafaring gear and equipment is the mainstay, is the headquarters of Lots of Glitter. It's about as far-removed from anything nautical you could ever find.

"Isn't it something?" Cohen said, directing the grand tour of the one-room business. "You come into Anchor Electronics where they have all this boating equipment, and then you walk right into our store, with all this glitter! It's terrific."

What actually glitters inside their store, beside the two effervescent owners, is the product they sell. And that is simply, glitter, and the machine that makes you glitter.

Lots of Glitter sells rhinestones, glitter paint, studs, sequins, appliques, material cut outs and the easy-to-use stapler that will transform the drabbest pair of jeans, the dullest sweatshirt into a dazzling work of art.

"Believe me," Quint insisted. "Anyone can do this with the machine we sell. You don't have to be artsy-craftsy, because I'm not. That's the great part about this."

Cohen, who admits to having created a few knitted and crocheted items in her lifetime, added, "What I love about this, is the instant gratification. I knit, and it takes a long time to complete a sweater or whatever. But putting rhinestones and studs on a sweater takes about 20 minutes. It looks great, and its done quickly."

Lots of Glitter is a roomful of bangles, spangles and shine "that will make your $20 sweater look just like a $200 sweater from Neiman Marcus," according to Quint.

In fact, the two women display a number of items from their wardrobe, none of which were purchased from Neiman Marcus, Bloomingdale's, and I. Magnin.

"See that blue sweater over there?" Cohen inquires, pointing to a bright royal blue, cowl-neck sweater on the rack. "I bought that at Marshall's and wore it a couple of times. Then one day, I was looking through Bloomingdale's catalogue and saw the exact same sweater with lots of rhinestones on it and I said to my husband, 'I have a sweater just like that.' I got out my machine and a little bit later, I really did. They look exactly the same," she said, pointing to her sweater's replica cut from the Bloomingdale publication.

"And you know," Cohen interjected, "this style is great for the full-figured woman who has a very difficult time finding anything like this in her size.

"We're talking $200 to $300 for something like this in a store," she noted.

Harrie Quint (l) and Marilyn Cohen

"And it's great for the medium and petite woman," Quint added."The teens absolutely love glitter. They design and paint sneakers, belts, jeans, and jackets."

Anyone can glitter just about anything, they said. The list includes headbands, shoes, pocketbooks, shirts, dresses, socks, hats, stationary, cards, and towels.

'Lots of Glitter' at Anchor Electronics store. . .

The idea for Lots of Glitter germinated in Florida when Quint and Cohen chased down a woman in a department store and asked where she bought the machine for her hand-studded sweatshirt. It took two hours to travel across the state to get the 'glitter machine.'

Once back in Boston, Quint and Cohen knew they had hold of a good thing. Glitter is 'in' in many states, including Florida and California. It has yet to hit hard in this state, and they wanted to be the ones to bring it to the public's attention.

They have the 'glitter machine' for sale, along with hundreds of rhinestones and sequins.

"It's seeing other people's excitement," Cohen said, explaining why the two women began this venture. "We sit with the customer right here and teach them how to use the machine. We help them with designs and then they can go home and do it themselves."

Quint said the credit for beginning the business must be shared with her husband, Steven, owner of Anchor Electronics, and Cohen's husband, Dennis. "They've helped us set this place up, after I pleaded with my husband to give up his office to us," Quint explained. "They put up the counter and set up the display area. They're here if we need some help -they can do this as well as us!"

Lots of Glitter is open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sundays until Christmas from noon to 4 p.m.

"We'll show you how to decorate everything in your wardrobe," Quint said, "and even the most unlikely artist will be amazed."

All around New England

you'll find Ruderman's customers and the reason it's simple and it all comes down to one word VALUE.

There isn't any other furniture company anywhere in New England that does it the way we do. the others talk about the old days the new days but, we just keep on doing it our way. The customer services, the variety, the looks and the famous guaranteed brand names such as Thomasville, Sealy, Broyhill, Simmons, La-Z-Boy, Lane, Mersman and above all the price. Always specially priced and when we have a sale it's below that GUARANTEED!

Just consider for a moment how terrific we feel about our new Hanover store. It's our second new showroom in two years. Now we've got five. That's not bad when you opened your first showroom seventy-four years ago.

But, what's really unique about our story is that we did it in New England. Of all the areas in the Country, convincing a New Englander they are getting the best in value and having them keep coming back is the test and we've done it for 74 years.

So, from one New Englander to another, be impressed, drop in for a visit!

Coffee or tea. The cost for one breakfast: $12.95

"In this store, we're only four weeks old in the kitchen, but within a year, catering will be half of the store's business," Onishuk says.

Aside from breakfast, catered meals include luncheon platters, salads, sandwiches, specialty dishes and dessert trays. When creating either meals or gift baskets, for home or business, customers are encouraged to ask for floral arrangements or wine if they wish. If a requested item is not in the store, Bildner's will purchase it elsewhere to make the gift complete, Onishuk adds.

If the customer wants to know the ingredients of the food, or how it's prepared, he or she has access to the chef's master menu book, he notes.

Other holiday gift items found at Bildner's include Perugina chocolates, Lindsay Farms condiments, Crabtree and Evelyn jellies and condiments, Crowley Vermont cheeses and maple syrup, New England truffles, gourmet coffee - with 24 flavors to choose from and a full bakery - now featuring Christmas candy.

For the customer shopping for a wide selection of wines, cheese and fish, Sea 'n Cheese, also located in the Cushing Plaza, offers "gift baskets made to order, party platters and a varied selection of seafood," says Cynthia Peters, whose son, Rick, is the owner.

Some popular items include salmon mousse in creative shapes or by the pound, gourmet cheese balls, champagne, imported beer from around the world and a large assortment of wine.

The most requested wine this holiday season, Peters notes, is Beaujolois Village Nouveau, which is made with grapes of all vineyards.

Other holiday requests from Sea 'n Cheese are gift baskets and party platters, which include any choice of seafood, cheese and wine, Peters says, noting, "I have a tremendous amount of platters to make."

She further notes that Sea 'n Cheese will deliver gifts within the Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate area.

Need to satisfy someone's sweet tooth? On Main Street, a chocoholic's frenzy can easily strike inside Sharon's Chocolate Factory, where chocolate Santas, candy cane wreathes and Christmas chocolate lollipops are selling fast, reports employee Lauren Kalita. Owned by Sharon Greene, the store specializes in sending chocolates all over the world. Sharon's has so far received many chocolate orders from local customers with long distance friends and relatives, says Kalita.

Sharon's also features custom molded chocolate, made into the patron's logo or design, she adds.

Other holiday treats include stockings stuffed with an assortment of Sharon's candies, Christmas M&M's, homemade fudge, hand dipped chocolates and nuts.

Anyone who has children on his or her Christmas list will find a collection of wooden toys at The Red Balloon. Baby sleighs, train sets, and easels are favorites, according to owners June and Will Stonier, "Wooden toys are popular with us."

Other popular items are Osh Kosh clothes, children's books and Gund plush animals, say the owners.

Will Stonier speculates the early snow before Thanksgiving put people in the holiday spirit early, "It's been busier than usual this time of year," he says, "we're expecting a good turnout."

Sue and Dick Straley of Cards and Shards agree the holiday spirit set in early this season.

"This is the most inventory we've ever carried this time of year," Sue Straley says, "we expect business to hold up."

Cards and Shards, known for its jewelry, novelty gifts, vast assortment of cards and local artwork, offers "special attention to detail" when helping the customer find the perfect gift, she notes.

The number one seller this year?

A five-minute timer - a novelty item, Straley says, attributing the gift's popularity to its unusualness.

The eight-year-old Main Street business also offers sterling silver handcrafted jewelry, Dean sweaters, a "full Christmas room" and ornaments galore," she points out, adding that gift wrapping is also available.

Shoppers looking for Christmas plants and homemade wreaths can find an ample selection at Forget Me Nots, located on Elm Street.

Poinsettias have been selling very well, says Holly Koopman, daughter of owners Fred and Jean Koopman. Other sought-after gifts include Christmas bears, Porcelain dolls, clothing for dolls and Christmas potpourri.

Koopman also reports that Sandicast animals (well known clay-sculptured pet favorites) have been very well-received by customers. A large exhibit of the appealing creatures adorn the front glass counter at Forget Me Nots, where Koopman often hears shoppers point out the animals that resemble the pets they have at home.

Also located on Elm Street, a short distance from Forget Me Nots, is Fleming's, where collectibles from around the world have been a big attraction to holiday shoppers, says four-year owner Frank Smith.

Steinbach nutcrackers are a popular gift, as well as assorted keepsakes from Scotland, Germany, France and Ireland. "We specialize in handcrafted items from all over the world," Smith says.

Aside from the imported collections, Fleming's also displays a variety of local novelties, such as town wreaths, clocks and tiles - all sporting favorite scenes of Cohasset and Scituate.

Papier-mache ornaments are also big sellers, as well as weather vanes, brassware and "fun items for kids," Smith says. For example, Fleming's carries teddy bear banks that dance after a coin is deposited.

More extraordinary gifts can easily be found at Kit and Kaboodle, located on Main Street. The gift store and gallery, owned by Bill Fester, displays a large proportion of local artwork - from pottery to woodwork, to photography and drawings.

"More than 100 artists and craftsmen all over the South Shore are featured in the store," says Fester.

Items such as several lines of handcrafted jewelry, art tiles with Christmas designs, limited edition prints of Cohasset, Cohasset tiles and note pads, wild fowl prints, aerial photos of the South Shore, wooden folk art pieces, handcrafted toys, duck decoys and pottery are local favorites, he says.

Conversation pieces are always great holiday gift ideas, Fester continues, pointing out a "Tall Taper" candle - a four foot candle of all colors that fits into a special holder, made of either wrought iron, brass or ceramic.

Also featured are log holders, constructed of a solid wood frame with a "genuine steerhide saddle that holds the logs," he notes.

More gift ideas?

The Cohasset Garden Club Cookbook, all kinds of Christmas scented candle, coffee mugs, potpourri in Christmas baskets, Christmas tins for cookies, candy and napkins and ornaments, Fester suggests.

Asked how business at his store has been, he reports customers were Christmas shopping in October. "We've been very busy this year," he says, "and we're continuing at a good rate."

Chamber committee prepares for King award

The Award Committee is making preparations for the second annual Forrest E. King Memorial Award. The winner of the award will be presented with an engraved plaque at a gala dinner dance in February.

Last year's winner was Dan Leahy of Kimball's by the Sea. Ballots will be mailed to all chamber members this week and the award committee as well as the board of directors are urging all members to cast their ballots for a nominee for the award.

The three nominees receiving the most votes will be placed on a final ballot to be mailed out in January. Nominee ballots must be back to James Kearney, Treasurer, no later than the close of business on January 7, 1987 in order to be counted.

The Forrest E. King Memorial Award, named for Valerie King's late father, the longtime proprietor of King Jewelers of Cushing Plaza, will be presented annually to the member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce (either an individual or other entity) who has demonstrated during the previous year the highest standards of business ethics, management, employee and public relations and civic responsibility consistent with the goals of the membership and to the credit of the member, their business organization and the Cohasset community. Forrest King's high business standards prompted the Chamber to name the award in his memory.

Ms. King, as well as Janet Mahoney, Andrea Merrill, Joe Quinn and Sue Straley of the Award Committee are hoping for full chamber participation in the selection of the nominees. They added that everyone is looking forward to the final results of the voting which will be announced at a dinner dance ceremony at Kimball's by the Sea on February 18, 1987.

Chamber members who do not receive a ballot or who wish more information may call Valerie King at 383-1755 or Joe Quinn at 383-9753.

The news copy deadline for the Christmas issue is Friday, Dec. 19 at noon.

The ad deadline is 5 p.m.

Jay O'Callahan has a South Shore saga to tell

We have salt in our socks on the South Shore, we have marshes and rivers and sea,
we have awful thick fogs and cranberry bogs,
we have salt in our socks by the sea.

The South Shore is a special place for Marshfield's Jay O'Callahan, storyteller extraordinaire who has traveled the world to perform his original tales.

He mines details from his surroundings, no matter where they may be, and unearths gems which enrich experiences a listener might otherwise consider ordinary.

For instance, O'Callahan last summer toured the South Shore with state Sen. Bill Golden of Weymouth, Jean Christensen, executive director of the South Shore Coalition, and Joel Bard, then acting director of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

It was an all-day tour through the towns that are part of the coalition — Weymouth, Rockland, Hanover, Norwell, Marshfield, Duxbury, Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

He was conducting his research for a story he was to present at the coalition's seminar on managing growth and change on the South Shore.

"It was a wonderful tour,"said O'Callahan, expressing the same delight that he easily displays on stage as he tells his stories.

Golden apparently was the perfect tour guide, arranging ahead of time for individuals to be at certain locations who could share their reminiscences with O'Callahan.

"We motored down the Back River in Weymouth so we could sense the way it was thousands of years ago," he said. "There I met Mary Toomey" who worked long and diligently in an effort to protect the area.

Golden also shared some personal memories of his family, especially his grandfather, Albert Golden, a restaurateur in the North End of Boston, who later ran the Black Rock House in Cohasset.

This is Albert Golden, grandfather of Sen. William Golden. A Boston restaurateur, Albert ran the Black Rock House.

Golden's grandfather also was the man who brought the carousel to Nantasket.

What struck him most was the unspoiled beauty he saw.

"I really am drawn to the marshes, the beauty of the marshes. There's an ancient power," he said.

As he spoke, he gazed out his third-floor office window overlooking the colorful marshes of the South River, a winding river that flows through Marshfield, into the North River and the Atlantic.

The beauty of the South Shore and the ongoing changes provided the backdrop for his story about Cab Tilling, a man long ago who latched onto the idea of selling marsh hay to his neighbors and traveled on a circuit throughout the South Shore.

The story is short but carries a message. For as Tilling became well known, people turned to him as a leader. And he brought people together to work toward one goal.

"Albert brought a real spark to this yarn," said O'Callahan as he explained the process of developing a story.

"I wanted real people to talk of their memories and combine that with my own feelings about the South Shore and why it's special," he said.

His own sentiment about the area is revealed through the character of Cab Tilling. Singing the catchy chorus, O'Callahan swayed back and forth to the rhythms, completely lost in time:

We've got salt in our socks from the South Shore,
we've got mountains and rivers and seas,
we've got awful thick fogs and cranberry bogs,
we've got salt in our socks by the sea.

More recently, O'Callahan created Morning Farm for the dedication of a George Grenamyer sculpture

O'Callahan has a story to tell. . .

depicting Daniel Webster as the gentleman farmer of Marshfield.

It's a story, along with the tale of Cab Tilling, he hopes one day to tell around the country in a collection called New England Portraits.

"I'm getting very interested local lore," he said.

In order to get a sense of what Daniel Webster was all about, O'Callahan talked at length with Anne Philbrick Hall of Marshfield, who took him around to places Webster knew.

"Webster spent a lot of time on Cherry Hill," a not-too-distant site from his office, he said.

"He gave his last speech there and planted a lot of trees."

Philbrick also gave O'Callahan several letters Webster had written from Washington (while serving as Secretary of State) to Marshfield.

"I began walking the area, reading the letters, then reading them while traveling throughout the United States.

"He was a farmer who really thought about the earth," O'Callahan observed, recalling one letter instructing those at the 1200-acre farm to make sure they used kelp and plowed it into the earth.

There were other letters concerned about the livestock and about the apple orchards.

"Morning Farm is a story of a stateman deeply influenced by the earth," said O'Callahan solemnly. "He saw a great need for union.

"It's conceivable this country is one instead of two because of Webster. He was amazing.

"But he suffered. In 1850, when he was 68, he thought he would be President and voted for a compromise with the South which enforced the fugitive slave law.

"He hated to do that, but he thought by voting this way the country would stay together.

"He was called Lucifer, Benedict Arnold. Ralph Waldo Emerson and William Longfellow were among those who turned against him," said O'Callahan.

"Well, it stayed 10 years, but during that time the North industrialized while the South did nothing. The North might have lost (the Civil War) in 1850," he conjectured.

"Webster's thinking was influenced by his thinking of his farm in Marshfield. He wrote home to Marshfield almost daily," O'Callahan said.

"His great achievement was to keep this country one.

"I think because he saw union everywhere — ocean and earth — he had a clear vision. There is union on a farm, in a marriage, in a country.

"When a union breaks, its strength is gone. He saw it everywhere."

O'Callahan likened his craft to that of a farmer building a compost heap, as he takes images from a wide range of places and tosses them onto the humus, then watches them heat up to a rich soil to be spread about.

O'Callahan has not always been a storyteller.

And yet he has.

As the oldest of three children, he fondly remembers telling his brother and sister imaginative stories to pass the time.

And as his own family began to grow up, Ted, now 16, and Laura, 14, were a ready and captive audience.

O'Callahan said his storytelling came out of his writing.

Some 15 years ago, he gave up teaching and decided to try writing as a career.

He worked part-time as a caretaker at the Marshfield YWCA on Ferry Hill Road while his wife, Linda, served as the Y's director.

"It was writing that led to my storytelling," O'Callahan said. "It was decided the stories I was writing had to be told, performed, rather than frozen into print."

Today at 48, O'Callahan has a 1976 published short story to his credit. His two novels lie on the shelf unpublished.

But his office bookcase is crammed full of cassettes of his entertaining stories; his desk is covered with literature about upcoming engagements and past accolades.

Most recently, he was awarded first prize in the 1986 National Educational Film Festival for his video of Six Stories of Little Heroes, featuring Michael, the grasshopper, and two wonderful bears, Wiggums and Woggums.

O'Callahan has appeared in concert with the symphony orchestras in Boston, Detroit and Greenville, N.C. and last month in Indianapolis.

O'Callahan. . .

Overseas, he has performed in Africa under the auspices of the U.S. Information Agency within the State Department.

As for his future plans, O'Callahan has several options.

He can continue to accept commissions from symphonies or communities like Harvard, where he wrote a tale for the town's 350th birthday.

Or, he could expand his Artana Productions to include videotapes along with his cassettes of his storytelling.

But one thing is for sure: He has hundreds of more stories to tell.

"I'd like to be working on a children's story, but I don't know what it will be," he said. "I've made up thousands of stories.

"Most of the stories I told to (my) kids, and they were gone as soon as I told them. I'd like to begin working with kids."

The Black Rock House, once operated by Albert Golden. His grandson, Sen. William Golden, helped Jay O'Callahan gather his perspective on the history of the South Shore.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

James Howell: He fought the law and he won

If you are of my age and peculiar musical taste you may remember the country-western tune in which, presumably in the shadow of the gallows, a gunslinger repents his life of crime with the mournful refrain: "I fought the law and...(rest)..the law won...yada, yada!" Alas, in Massachusetts we consider country-western justice and music beneath us. Here "Justice is mine" . . . saith the influential. For, in the case of James Howell of the Bank of Boston and other notable affiliations, the legislature has rewritten both song and law to read: "He fought the law and he won!"

The facts of this interesting, important case are simple, although the ramifications of the basic facts are sufficiently complex to justify differences of opinion among honorable men and women. First, the basic facts.

James Howell is the chief economist of the Bank of Boston. A native southerner, he has become involved in a variety of non-profit institutions in Greater Boston including Boston University, where he is a trustee, and the University of Massachusetts, where he is a regent. Last May the U-Mass Board of Regents had before it a proposal to create a graduate nursing program at the University of Massachsuetts in Boston. This proposal was about to be voted on when, to the extreme annoyance of several other board members, Howell moved for postponement of consideration.

The reason soon became obvious. At the regents' next meeting the provost of Boston University, which has an ongoing graduate nursing program, appeared and argued against the creation of a program at the University of Massachsuetts that would compete with the extant one at Boston University. However when the delayed vote was finally taken, the proposal passed unanimously with Howell abstaining—he had been warned early-on that to vote on the matter would put him in violation of the state's 1962 conflict of interest law.

But aside from moving for postponement at the May meeting, Howell did argue against the proposal on the ground that it would create a duplication of services. This "lobbying" was itself believed by many to be a violation of the 1962 law. A complaint was made to the state Ethics Commission alleging that Howell had used his position as a U-Mass regent to do the bidding of Boston University's President John Silber—who is a man with a reputation for aggressively defending B.U.'s "turf."

The Ethics Commission concurred to the extent of instigating an action against Howell. Enter then the legislature. The House and Senate (in that order) quickly passed a bill exempting members of the Board of Regents from the conflict-of-interest law. This legislation was vetoed by Gov. Dukakis. Then, with rather overwhelming majorities, the legislation was voted a second time over the governor's veto. Howell is thus off the hook; and there, except for ongoing recriminations, the matter stands.

Now for a few of the "complexities." Howell's supporters point out that two other members of the U-Mass Board of Regents are employed by private colleges. Those two voted in favor of the U-Mass nursing proposal, yet they were not prosecuted. (Under the old law how a person voted was irrelevant; if he had an interest in a competing institution he could not vote.) Moreover, there have apparently been numerous other instances of regents voting while serving as trustees of private colleges. The charge, therefore, is that Howell was singled out for prosecution.

Secondly, the general argument is made that a person worth making a regent must have other community commitments—if he doesn't he probably isn't distinguished enough to be a regent. For this reason, it is argued, the old conflict-of-interest law tended to drive away the best and the brightest. By exonerating Howell many in the legislature believed they were sending a message to the vast talent pool in private industry that public service is safe.

There is much to be said for that argument; and much, therefore to be said for the considered—I repeat considered—reworking of the conflict-of-interest law. But the rushed recision of the law late in the legislative session and in the interest of a single powerful party who should have understood the law to begin with, and was repeatedly warned about it as the episode unfolded, is in my view an abomination. Among other things:

...It gives the message that the "know somebody" system still thrives on Beacon Hill. If you are a prominent person who knows George Keverian and Billy Bulger you can fight the law and, unlike the aforesaid hapless gunslinger, not have to worry about the law winning.

...Moreover, the law was not changed as it applies to public officials other than regents. If you are some obscure planning board member who unknowingly votes on a proposal your alcoholic brother-in-law has a part interest in, you may be assured you will not have the combined clout of the Bank of Boston, the legislature, and John Silber on your side.

...The change in the law came at the very beginning of the Ethics Commission's action against Mr. Howell. He might well have been exonerated. As it is he is merely "off the hook" deservedly or not his reputation will suffer from the fact that it took special interest legislation to "beat the rap against him.

...Since the proceeding is now stopped, we will never know whether or not Howell was indeed "selectively prosecuted."

...The spectacle of the legislative branch interfering in a quasi-judicial body it has created by law is a terrible precedent, one that is larger than this case and all its participants. It is a precendent that both the cynical and the criminal are likely to use as an excuse for holding a jaded view of our political system.

Indeed, the Howell case is one of those political events with such an attached stench that the immediate winners may be the ultimate losers and the immediate losers the ultimate winners. Among the "losers" who will probably be winners:

...Gov. Dukakis, who expended political capital in vetoing the special interest legislation before him. This was Dukakis at his absolute best: it was the expectation of this sort of principled act by Dukakis that first attracted him a devoted following when he was a young legislator in the 1960s. Moreover, Dukakis,' veto was an important augury for his third term. Third terms tend to be decadent—for example the third term was when former Boston Mayor Kevin White fouled his nest. This action by Dukakis is a strong indication that he means to have a firm hand on the tiller during his own third term.

...Two of our South Shore legislators are winners. Sen. William Golden of Weymouth voted against the tide in the Senate. Golden is a refreshing if unusual creature—an unjaded politician. He is a straight shooter whose earnestness sometimes gets nervously teased, but is really respected.

Another member of the unjaded breed is Rep. Frank Hynes of Marshfield, who was particularly articulate in leading opposition to the "abomination" in the House. Hynes is a legislator for whom my respect grows and grows, and no list of likely future Democratic leaders would be complete without his name.

Among the "winners" who were losers:

...As indicated above, Howell himself lost because his vindication was pock-mocked with political "insider trading."

...B.U.'s John Silber's reputation as a bully in academe has been reinforced by B.U.'s unsuccessful attempt to thwart a rival nursing program.

...Speaker George Keverian, who appeared to regard the issue as primarily a turf fight between the legislature and the governor. Keverian appears to be increasingly preoccupied with and petulant about the fact that Gov. Dukakis can't agree with him 100% of the time. One hopes Keverian will not instigate a vendetta against this governor who is at the peak of his popularity, for Keverian will really be the "loser" if he does.

...Sen. President Bulger enhanced his reputation as a leader who cracks the whip by whispering sour somethings into the frightened ears of his flock of senatorial sheep. There is no evidence that Bulger really threatened anyone in this instance—Keverian seemed to be far more exercised about the matter than Bulger. But for the sake of his own reputation, Bulger would do well when matters of principle such as the Howell case arise, to butt out and publicly encourage his senatorial colleagues to vote according to conscience.

...The Republicans were losers, for by majority vote in both houses they went along with the Democratic leadership. In doing so they may have announced that when the chips are down they mean to be the playthings of the Democratic leadership. A surprising number of middle-of-the road Democrats who would like to see the Republicans become a cohesive opposition party are likely to be disappointed. As David Nyhan of the Globe has pointed out, the only opposition party today is the press. And that is not how it should be.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Advice on rearing the perfect child

The Dragon looked over my shoulder. "Are you still trying to write advice on rearing perfect children? You must have had 50 calls from people who tried everything you said, and their kids still aren't perfect."

"Of course they aren't," I responded. "They should be more patient. One week wasn't enough. Perfection sometimes takes as long as two weeks."

"And furthermore, some of these people aren't satisfied with your garden variety perfection. They're ready for more advanced perfection. They're ready for Stage Two."

The Dragon groaned. "Didn't Stage One get you in enough trouble?

"Certainly not. When we were raising our nine children, everything I did was scientifically calculated to get a specific result. Last week I shared the first three rules with my readers. This week I will give them another three.

"Rule Four, for example: "Always Have a Plan."

"You will recall," I continued, "that when the kids were little, Maureen used to steal food from Eileen's plate. This gave rise to Rule Four. Whatever I wanted Maureen to eat, I put on Eileen's plate. Worked like a charm."

"Sure," the Dragon replied, "until Maureen got a little more sophisticated. She realized her appetite was a marketable commodity, and she told Eileen and the other kids that she wouldn't eat their vegetables unless they gave her their desserts, too."

"No rule is perfect," I agreed. "Especially since it finally occurred to Eileen that she could sneak her vegetables to the dog and get to keep her dessert.

"Rule Four helped me out there, too. I used to put carrot juice in the brownies and wheat germ in the toll house cookies. It worked until I got a little out of control and tried mixing dessicated liver and brewers yeast in the jello."

The Dragon shuddered. "I remember that night. Our kids referred to it as 'Jonestown Revisited.' Got any more Rules?"

"Of course. Rule Five: Make Them Put it in Writing.

"You may recall that, perfect though they may have been, our children occasionally had a, um, difference of opinion. There were times when one might actually say that they argued."

"There were times," the Dragon reminded me, "when their 'differences of opinion' registered on seismographs.

"There were times when you wouldn't go to war movies with me, because you said if you wanted to watch treachery, violence and mayhem you'd stay home with the kids."

"Yes, well. On those occasions I found it helpful to give them paper and pencil and send them to different parts of the house. They were told to write complete accounts of the precipitating incident, paying close attention to the rules of spelling and grammar, and then submit their reports to me for consideration. Those too young to write were allowed to present pictorial documents. Neatness would also count."

The Dragon nodded. "It was amazing how two kids could have completely different recollections of the same incident. How did you ever decide who was right?"

I shrugged. "Who decided? They'd usually get giggling so hard while they were writing that the argument was over. If they didn't, I'd take the matter under advisement. By the time the next, um, difference of opinion occurred, they'd have forgotten all about the first. And I had a valuable supply of resource material for future columns."

The Dragon looked impressed. "Sometimes you almost make sense. Do you have any other Rules?"

I nodded. Rule Six: Give Them a Creed to Live By. I posted a list of typewritten commandments on the refrigerator. This was very important, because it documented what was and wasn't allowed. I don't remember them all, but I know some of the precepts were "Unless it's Raining, Cats and Kids Belong Outdoors," "Be In the House by the Time the Street Lights Go On," "Stay Out of Federal Institutions," "Do Not Hit Each Other with Fireplace Tools," "Do Not Leave Footprints on the Ceiling," "Use Things as They Are Intended to be Used," and "Don't Ask for a Bandaid Unless You Can Show Me Blood."

"All very utilitarian," the Dragon said. How come our youngest child is 18 years old and we still have footprints on the ceiling?"

"Aha!" I responded. "You're forgetting Rule One. There are no footprints on the ceiling, and our children always behaved perfectly. As Rule One advises, when all else fails, lie."

From the kitchen — by Joan Pinkham

Male recipes find a spot in a busy kitchen

Only 20 years ago it was considered very "sissy" for a man to spend any time in the kitchen. Today men think of cooking as a creative, imaginative art and even the demanding profession of medicine can be forgotten for a while when relaxing over a hot stove. I'll always remember Dr. Tony Ionta when he gave a course in Italian cooking. It was in the evening at the YWCA and he was certainly enjoying himself puttering in the little kitchen and his enthusiasm was contagious.

He was as familiar with the array of kitchen utensils he unearthed while yanking open cluttered drawers as in the O.R.

While busy at the stove he told of favorite restaurants in Rome and of trips to Boston's North End for nothing but the best of Italian ingredients. Here is one of his dishes we sampled that night and a favorite at our house ever since.

SPAGHETTI CARBONARA

1 - 1 1/4 lbs. spaghetti
SAUCE
5 oz. bacon
1 oz. butter
Tsp. oil
6 eggs
3 oz. grated parmesan cheese

Dice bacon, saute in oil and butter and reserve. (Not too crisp). In platter scramble eggs (just mix yolks with whites), add half amount of cheese and freshly ground pepper. Cook spaghetti, drain and add to egg mix. (Hot spaghetti will cook eggs). Add bacon, drippings, cheese and more pepper to taste. Serves approx. eight.

Professor Clinton MacCoy says he boiled an egg once when he was 10 years old and has been cooking ever since. Now that he is retired, he pursues his hobby of mycology and his illustrated lecture shows a variety of edible mushrooms that are ours for the picking. An authority on this fungi, he warns that just one bite of the wrong mushroom the size of your little fingernail could be deadly, so those of us who are mushroom maniacs will probably get ours at the supermarket. Mushrooms can be frozen by sauteing to sub-tender, spreading on a cookie sheet to freeze and then storing in freezer bags by the cupful. But here is how Prof. MacCoy makes a delicious

POLISH MUSHROOM SOUP

A. 1T butter and 1/4 C. chopped onion
B. 1 1/4 C chopped mushrooms
C. 1T flour, 1/4 tsp. salt and pepper to taste
D. 2 C. chicken stock
E. Sherry to taste

Saute A until tender. Add B, saute 10 min. Blend in C; slowly add D. Cook covered 30 min. Add E toward end.

When men emerge from a few hours in the kitchen, they usually leave something special behind and I don't mean a sinkful of dirty dishes. Men are flocking to cooking schools and it's a whole new world to them — probably why they're more enthusiastic than women. Annemarie Huste says of her husband: "He treats it as a hobby and, as they do in golf or sailing, they spend lots of time and money on it. Men are fascinated with appliances and usually want the very best, so once a woman has her husband interested in cooking, she never has to worry about good equipment in her kitchen." Richard Mieli's love of experimenting has led to this interesting dessert which he calls simply:

RASPBERRY MERINGUE SQUARES

In a large bowl combine:
2 1/2 C. flour, sifted
1 1/2 C. sugar
2 sticks (1 cup) butter, softened
2 egg yolks

Press dough into well buttered 15x10" jelly-roll pan, prick it with a fork. Bake in 350 oven for 15 to 20 min., or until golden. Spread 3/4C raspberry jam over the baked layer. In a bowl beat:
4 egg whites until they hold soft peaks. Add:
1/2 C. sugar, 2 T at a time and continue to beat this meringue until it is very stiff. Fold in:
1 1/2C ground blanched almonds.
Spread the meringue over the jam. Bake in 350 oven for 25 min. Let cool and cut into 24 squares.

Just think — two weeks from today we'll be up to our knees in tinsel and wrapping paper! Not too much time left for Christmas baking, so when you get out a favorite family recipe, do share it with us!

From the Garden

Early sunsets signal the beginning of Old Man Winter

By Joan Pinkham
Special to the Mariner

When it comes to New England weather, December can be as full of surprises as Santa's bag of gifts. One can awaken to a morning that is icy and cruel, or calm and beckoning as in the two-week period known as Halycon Days which began on the 11th.

Sunsets are often a brilliant contrast to the slate-grey rivers and barren trees and as an encore, Venus, the Evening Star, is radiant in the western skies. The full Beaver Moon is high in the evening sky at the beginning of December and we are gifted with the Wolf Moon at year's end. Mother Nature's cornucopia of gifts is there for us all; the trick is in finding time to stop to enjoy it.

When winter is at its bleakest, it's comforting to cling to the thought that the days start getting longer Dec. 27; only a minute or two, but a turning point in the winter's solstice.

Before we are blanketed with snow, take a turn around the garden, making sure the perennials are mulched; rose canes protected with mounds of dirt or those new rose collars being sold at your nursery.

If your Christmas tree will be a living tree, dig a hole before the ground freezes, place the soil in a plastic bag and store inside. Cover the hole with black plastic to keep it from freezing before you plant your new tree.

Not too far away is the world-renowned Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University, but how many of us know that they sponsor more than a hundred courses, workshops, lectures and symposia during the course of the year?

Some events open to the public are free, such as a recent luncheon when guests were asked to "brown bag" it before hearing a noted speaker on flower arranging. Others, such as last week's demonstration of flower arrangements in winter, cost $25 and that doesn't include purchase of a container.

Dec. 13-14 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. the Arboretum will sponsor a holiday bazaar in the Hunnewell Visitor Center located at the junction of Rtes. 1 and 203, The Arborway, Jamaica Plain.

The holiday gift-giving season is upon us and if your list has a question mark after the name of that certain person who has everything, why not a plant?

It doesn't have to be a poinsettia, but if you should choose this traditional flamboyant plant, it's nice to know that if well-cared for, it should hold its leaves and colored bracts well into March.

Other Christmas plants should be selected with the owner in mind, for it's no fun receiving a sun-loving cactus if your only window is shaded by trees, or faces north.

If the person is a beginner, try to select a never-say-die plant such as coleus, Swedish ivy, spider plant or dracena. However, if the recipient is already a knowlegeable plant lover, something more exotic might be welcomed, such as an orchid or a new species of African Violet. In fact, a basket of variously colored African violets, sporting a colored ribbon on the handle, is a gift to be welcomed anytime. One plant gift is a package of five to 10 paper-white narcissus bulbs with pebbles and a pretty container to grow them in. The attached card could include planting directions.

If anyone asks me what my favorite house plant is at this time of year, I have my answer all ready —a cyclamen. To my way of thinking, they are far more welcome than the holiday poinsettia, for their bright blossoms of either pink, red or white are striking with holiday greens and they do not require direct sunlight — something our house-plants don't get in the winter.

By setting the pot out in the garden in late spring, cyclamens will flower again indoors. Barbara Prouty suggest hibiscus for its showy red or pink blossoms and Ethel Page is enjoying her magnificent gloxinia purchased at the Stone Estate greenhouses.

Christmas cactii are ever-popular for their colorful blossoms as enjoyed by Flora Lawrence. Her showy plant was grown from a cutting from daughter-in-law, Ruth's cactus. A kalanchoe flowers freely at this time of year and mine is about to blossom into a bright red plant, a second flowering since it was given to me for Mother's Day by No. Two Son.

Bird houses are also high on Christmas gift lists and seed merchants have broad smiles as this hobby grows, for they are selling about 35 million pounds of seed in our state alone.

Mass. Audubon has a number of booklets on birding and one names three general categories of birds which a feeder may be expected to attract: 1. Permanent residents such as blue jays, black-capped chickadees, downy and hairy woodpeckers and purple finches; 2. Winter residents such as tree sparrows, pine siskins and evening grosbeaks; sead-eaters which breed to the north, moving south to our feeders, in a highly unpredictable manner; 3. Irregular winter visitors include a number of common summer residents encouraged to linger when they have bird feeders to visit. Cardinals and robins are sometimes seen and, speaking of the latter, did you know the robin was named our national bird in 1960?

Birdwatchers who arm themselves with field guides and binoculars, bundle up and traipse our shores where they are rewarded by glimpses of brants, bitterns, snow geese and sometimes a hawk or two. At North Scituate 200 purple sandpipers were spotted at the start of the month, 12 rednecked grebes and a drake Barrow's golden.

Two snowy owls were seen at Plum Island and Bev Litchfield says everyone is hoping to see snowy owls when they go out on the annual Christmas Count. She'll be with the South Shore birders who will be out at dawn Dec. 20 covering an area from Quincy down to Plymouth. Nationwide, birders will be out until the light fades, spotting various species during the two-week period devoted to the annual count. Different teams will be assigned their time and place, but call the South Shore Audubon Sanctuary if you wish more information.

Legislature prepares solution to landfill crisis

By Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

There are currently 202 operational landfills in Massachusetts, most of which are quickly approaching their capacity. The result is a trash disposal crisis, recently addressed by trash haulers from around the state, which threatens public health and safety, clean drinking water supplies and the economy.

In response, the House Ways and Means Committee has approved a $250 million trash disposal bill that would give the state increased powers to locate regional solid waste facilities over the objections of local communities.

Specifically, the bill would provide $160 million in grants to municipalities to clean up water supplies contaminated by landfills and 50 percent matching grants for expansion of existing municipal dumps. In addition, it offers $50 million in loans to municipalities for new landfills and no interest loans for closing sites no longer useful; these could be replaced by regional facilities. Another $35 million would be offered to deal with solid waste pollution and there would be an increased emphasis on recycling reusable trash, which makes up about 17 percent of materials disposed in landfills.

Obviously the biggest stumbling block to the trash crisis is finding locations for landfill sites. Prisons and landfills are similar in this regard - everyone agrees we need them, but nobody wants one in his or her backyard. The House bill promotes regional sites over the out-moded system of individual community landfills, stressing the need for more long-range solutions.

However, trash haulers have warned that additional landfills are needed immediately to avert furthering the crisis. They blame the Dukakis Administration for dragging its feet, noting that a crisis has been looming for several years.

Administration officials said they are exploring ways to add additional space to existing landfills and to reopen old ones - all of which might provide temporary solutions as early as next week. There are approximately 500 landfills statewide, 298 of which are now closed and could potentially be reopened.

At least one factor contributing to the immediate crisis occurred in September when Rhode Island refused to allow Massachusetts communities to continue to dump their waste in Rhode Island's landfills. Although this was unexpected, it certainly should not have come as a surprise. Other states are trying to cope with their own trash problems.

No one denies that a significant trash problem exists in Massachusetts and that it requires immediate attention and a great deal of cooperative effort among state and local communities.

Holiday Shoppe offers sculptures

Capture the heart of someone special by giving him or her young or old a soft sculptured whimsical animal created by artist Joni Jensen for the South Shore Art Center "Holiday Shoppe" at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

These little fellows excite the imaginations of children and adults.

Working under the name of Custom Costumes, Jensen exhibited her soft sculptured animals at the Brockton Art Museum's show of children's toys. She has produced soft sculpture props and costumes for a number of organizations on the South Shore.

Shoppers are welcome in the Center's "Holiday Shoppe" Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturday's 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The 1986 "Holiday Shoppe" collection includes hand painted blue and white miniatures by the late Peter Anderson, a noted Time-Life magazine photographer; finely embroidered wall hangings by the Hmong women of Laos; pre-Columbian artifacts from the Tom Lucas collection; handcrafted pottery by Judith Rossman, Marsha Klein, and Sandy and Ralph Terry; holiday wreaths and ornaments; and works of art.

We are serious cash buyers of gold, silver & platinum; both old & new diamonds, estate & antique jewelry, sterling flatware, gold filled items, industrial precious metals, dental gold, old & rare coins, tokens & medals, postcards & collectables. Our evaluation & gold & silver assay tests are free & at no obligation while you wait. We will meet or beat any legitimate offer to buy published locally, nationally, or internationally. Many local dealers claim to be the "highest buyers" so shop around & see us last. We may be a little further away but the few extra miles are worth the effort. We also exchange all denominations of foreign currency & coin on the spot. Banks send their customers to us for just that purpose. We have the most competitive prices on new jewelry in New England & also do expert jewelry repair & appraisals.

PRAYER THROUGH APPLICATION OF HOLY SPIRIT — Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I may attain my goal, you who gives me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you, even and in spite of all material illusion. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine.
The person must say this prayer for 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the favor requested will be granted even if it may appear difficult. This prayer must be published immediately after the favor is granted without mentioning the favor. Only your initials should appear at the bottom. S.C. (12/10)

Get All You Need To Succeed
Why are so many people switching to careers in Burger King® Management? We ask them, and here are some of the reasons they gave us...
SALARIES: "Burger King® management salaries reflect their rising sales...they're among the best in the industry."
BENEFITS: "It's not just the benefits package that's good, it's the intangible benefits, like company support."
PEOPLE: "Burger King is atypical in the fast food industry—they really care about their Managers."
Maybe you should consider switching. A Burger King Franchise needs dynamic, promotable Restaurant Managers now especially, because of new store openings, record sales and an expansion plan that has made the fast food industry stand up and take notice.

DARE needs homes for Jennifer & Gregory

Jennifer is an intelligent, friendly and attractive seventeen-year-old white female. She studies culinary arts in a vocational high school. Jennifer is an articulate, responsible and cooperative young woman with serious goals for the future.She plans to complete her high school education and move on to college.

However, family conflict, illness, financial hardship and stress sidetrack Jennifer's ability to accomplish these goals. At the moment, Jennifer lives at home and gets stuck in an angry and adversarial relationship with her parents. Both Jennifer and her family need a break from each other for the next year.

Jennifer will benefit from the space and neutral environment a foster home can provide. Foster parents will help Jennifer to pursue her dreams. Jennifer will respond to positive role models in her life. Jennifer will try hard to please and meet a foster family's expectations, but they must be fair and reasonable ones. In return, Jennifer will require attention, guidance and direction from sensitive and supportive adults.

Jennifer will be an asset to any family. She is able to make attachments and commitments to others. Jennifer has begun to move beyond past experiences with drugs and alcohol. She likes to dance, listen to music and spend time with friends. Jennifer enjoys and relates well to younger children. Jennifer is ready to gain greater control over her young life. A foster family will help Jennifer prepare for a future life of independence, educational growth, and responsibility.

Gregory is a very active, enthusiastic and curious thirteen-year-old white male. He is a friendly and thoughtful child who has a variety of strengths, interests and problems to work on. Gregory was the victim of physical and emotional abuse. He missed out on a consistent, stable and safe home life. To get back on track, Gregory was in a residential school for approximately two years. Gregory responded well to the school structure, supervision and limits. Now, Gregory needs a nurturant, two-parent foster family where he is the focus of attention and care on a long-term basis.

Gregory tries hard to please the adults in his life. At times he reminds one of a little politician. Gregory loves to attend church and be an alter boy. He has a special relationship with the parish priest.

Gregory likes to cook and fish. He also likes to eat and needs to watch his weight and avoid sugar in his diet. Gregory's vast artistic talents require some direction and guidance. At the moment, Gregory loves to draw, work with clay, construct models and make collages. Gregory prefers to ride bikes and fly kites, rather than play independent or group sports. Gregory is a special needs student in a public school who likes to visit the Aquarium, Science Museum and various historical sites.

Gregory is also implusive and mischievous at times. He requires the supervision and limits one associates with a seven or eight-year-old child. Gregory hates to clean his room, take showers or do his chores. He has an excellent memory, but a very short attention span. Gregory can wear out his welcome when he whines alot and asks the same question over and over again.It is clear that Gregory needs to accept consequences and take responsibility for his actions. Also, Gregory must learn to respect the rights and property of others. To this end, a stable family with clear limits, expectations and boundaries will help this isolated child to grow and expand his horizons.

Gregory will benefit most from a family where he is the only child, or at least not in competition with younger ones. If you have room in your home and your heart for a child like Gregory, please call Donald Moskowitz of DARE Family Services at 628-3696. Professional training and support, together with medical coverage and a financial reimbursement of $42 a day are available.

So. Shore Men of Harmony elects officers

The South Shore Men of Harmony, 1984 Division IV Championship Barbershop Chorus, directed by Phil Carter (Hingham), held their 36th installation of officers, banquet and dance at the Elks Home of Weymouth Saturday evening.

Outgoing president Bill Fitzgerald (Braintree) served as master of ceremonies.

The new officers are: President-Al Willis (Randolph), Membership Vice President-Jerry Diegel (Scituate), Program Vice President-Bob Lewis (Hingham), Music Vice President-Bud Moffatt (Pocasset), Secretary-Chuck Manausa (Carver), Treasurer-Dave Annis (Plympton) and Member-at-large-John Murphy (Marshfield).

Receiving the coveted Barbershopper of the Year award was Don Leggat (Hingham). Silver Pitchpipe awards were given to Joe DeCastro (Marshfield), Dave Fitzgerald (Randolph), Al Lundren (E. Weymouth), Chuck Manausa (Carver), Bud Moffat (Pocasset), and George O'Brien (Hingham).

The chapter is the second largest in Division IV with 98 members who live in 27 different towns on the South Shore from Dorchester, MA down to Lincoln, RI and out to Brockton and Randolph.

Entertainment was furnished by four chapter quartets: The Touchtones with Bob Talbot (Lincoln, RI) tenor, Dave Fitzgerald (Randolph) lead, Clay Stone (Abington) bass and Ken Miller (Rockland) bari. Sound Foundation, 1985 Div. IV champs—Paul Malley (Marshfield) tenor, Jerry Diegel (Scituate) lead, Mac McCorrison (Brockton) bass and Leo Harrison (Norwell) bari. Yankee Ingenuity, 1983 Div. IV champs—Barry Murphy (Whitman) tenor, Don Taylor (Whitman) lead, Bud Moffatt (Pocasset) bass and Ken Siroonian (E. Weymouth) bari. Mellow Expression with John Brennan (Bryantville) tenor, Manny Dias (S. Weymouth) lead, Bill Fitzgerald (Braintree) bass and Bill Hanks (Rockland) barr.

Any male who enjoys singing and can carry a tune is welcome to sit in with the South Shore Men of Harmony chorus and spend a very pleasant time any Thursday evening at the community center, 70 South Street, Hingham.

The Men of Harmony will be giving a free concert to the children of Cardinal Cushing School, Thursday, Dec. 11 at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Fishermen denounce town-financed marina

Local fishermen reacted strongly against a proposal to float a 72-slip, town-funded marina in Cohasset Harbor.

The Harbor Study Committee presented the $300,000 town marina plans to selectmen Monday night. Town officials must now hold a public hearing on the project. "And if all goes well," according to committee member Charles Fink, there will be an April town meeting article requesting money for the engineering and design of the marina.

If the project is approved by town meeting, the marina should be in the harbor by the 1988 boating season, he added.

According to preliminary plans, the marina will be located in the inner harbor, off the Yankee Oil Co. property in the cove. The committee estimated that 12-15 commercial fishermen will be displaced by the mooring system.

The project will be completely town-funded, according to Fink, who presented the plans before selectmen and several fishermen who crowded the meeting.

Although committee members investigated the use of state money for construction, the idea was discarded. An agreement signed in November, 1983 with Yankee Oil Co. allowed the town's use of a section of their land abutting Cohasset Cove. That provision restricted the land to use by town residents.

The harbor committee has proposed to use the lot for marina parking. Thus, Fink explained, because the lot is restricted, state money can not be used to construct the facility.

"We would really like to retain the property for parking purposes," he said, "but the lease says it

Cohasset officer endorses plan for dog shelter

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Animal control officer Richard Yocum has offered his endorsement of plans for a regional animal shelter in Hingham.

Like many towns in the area, Cohasset has a serious problem. "We have a lot of stray dogs roaming free," Yocum said. "I would have no problem picking up 25 to 30 dogs per day, but I have nowhere to put them."

A committee in Hingham has proposed building a $350,000 animal shelter to serve six area towns including: Cohasset; Scituate; Norwell; Hanover; Hull and of course, Hingham.

"We need a shelter desperately," said Paul Murphy, Hingham's animal control officer. "All I have is four chain-link kennels in my driveway, and no place to bring strays."

Yocum noted Scituate will soon be in similar straits when the Marshfield kennels it has been using close.

The proposed Hingham shelter would be a completely enclosed structure on Beal Street, off Route 3A near the Weymouth line.

Staffed seven days per week, Murphy explained, the shelter will not be a 'dog pound,' but could service dogs, cats and even wild animals from the adjacent Bare Cove Park.

The Beal Street site was chosen for its easy access from Route 3A, which Murphy said would be of benefit to the other member towns. The fact that the Beal Street location is not in a residential area perhaps will make the proposal more palatable to voters at Hingham's Town Meeting.

"I am 100 percent in favor of this proposal," Yocum said. "I don't think any town wants to pay $200,000 to $300,000 to build a shelter by itself."

Yocum added, he believes the selectmen would support Murphy's plan, but "the cost to each town for this project will be the clincher.

"Animal control traditionally has been at the bottom of the budgetary barrel," he said, "but we will have to do something sooner or later. A regional shelter is the cheapest way out for all the towns."

Yocum noted, "I think we have a high rate of dog-bite complaints; we always worry about rabies."

Such health concerns may prompt the towns to act more forcefully with regard to animal control than in the past.

"There hasn't been a rabies case in this state for a long time," Yocum said. "But there is an epidemic spreading Washington, D.C. through Pennsylvania and upstate New York. If it moves this way, it could be a major problem."

He cited the state's laws, vaccine programs and clinics for Massachusetts' good rabies record, but added, "We're one of the luckier states."

School test scores prompt change

The school committee voted Monday to increase junior high school English to nine instructional periods within a six-day cycle.

Superintendent Stephen Hart explained, the three additional English periods will supplement students' regular English curriculum.

The move was spurred in part by the results of recent assessment testing, which showed the seventh grade reading program to be the weak link in Cohasset's educational coat of armor.

"We've looked at the reading scores on SRA tests and on other diagnostic tests," Hart commented. "The assessment scores were another substantiation and strengthened the position for the recommendation, which the school committee agreed to.

"We've talked about filling that need for a year or so," he said.

The committee's vote means junior high school students will attend reading labs on 90 of each 180 school days.

"Our hope is that the reading labs include more than just reading," Hart added. "We would like to see the composition of a program which includes language arts, reading and writing."

Secretary Barbara Bliss hailed the committee's decision.

"This move will allow students additional time to fulfill all the goals of the junior high school language arts program," she said.

"It will help students meet the demands they will face in ninth and tenth grades," she added. "I think they find

The perfect gift for everyone

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Every family has one.

There are just a few shopping days left 'til Christmas and you've been good; you've bought presents for everyone on your list... Everyone except that one hard-to-shop-for special somebody.

Aunt Margie, Uncle George, Grandpa or dear, sweet Mother-in-law. Every family has one, but no one knows what to buy them for Christmas.

Here is an idea. Why not purchase "Old Loveable" a Maserati 425 luxury sports car.

Or maybe Grandma is dreaming of a red Christmas. Couldn't you see her zipping down the highway in the cockpit of a Ferrari Testarosa, doing a cool 160 m.p.h.?

If you are getting inspired to purchase such a stocking-stuffer you need look no farther than Route 3A

Permit and license renewals

The board of health reminds all licenses who fall under the auspices of this office that permits and licenses expire Dec. 31.

It is the responsibility of license owners to renew their permits and licenses prior to this expiration date. The fee schedule will remain the same as last year. Application and renewal can be made during normal town hall working hours: Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. The office is closed for lunch from 12:45 p.m. to 1:45 p.m. and will be closed Dec. 25.

The board of health offices are not located at the town hall, but at 43 Elm Street. Call 383-1664 if there are any questions concerning the fees.

Not a state problem

A state public safety official told Jacqueline Wirth of Red Gate Lane that the state has no jurisdiction or control over the use of Wheelwright Park.

In a letter to Wirth, Secretary of Public Safety Charles V. Barry, said the Executive Office of Public Safety has "no jurisdiction regarding the use of municipal parklands."

Wirth had written to Barry, requesting help in closing the park to horse riders and the Cohasset Riding Club. She has repeatedly complained about the unsanitary conditions of the park, caused by members of the riding club. But Barry answered that any solution to the problems must be obtained on a local level. "This is a matter of local, not state jurisdiction," he wrote.

King Street complaint

Selectmen have received a complaint issued by King Street resident James Hamilton, regarding the "hazardous" intersection of King and Beechwood Streets.

In a letter to selectmen, Hamilton said there is a problem when a car coming from King Street onto Beechwood Street bears left. There is a tendency "to get into the left hand lane, which poses a potential hazard to cars traveling north on Beechwood and entering King Street," he stated.

Because there is no posted sign or painted arrows on the pavement, Hamilton said it is a confusing driving situation for cars exiting or entering King Street.

In addition, he said, ground water seeps across King Street and freezes in winter, adding to the protential of a serious accident. He noted that in the 17 years he has lived there, there's been a significant increase in the traffic because of the heightened activity at Cushing Plaza and the number of new housing developments in the Beechwood area of town.

He forwarded several suggestions to selectmen for their consideration, including construction of a traffic island at the intersection, painted arrows on the pavement, a stop sign for cars exiting King Street, and construction of catch basins and sewers at the intersection.

Christmas holiday deadlines

All Mariner Newspapers will be published Monday, Dec. 22.

The deadline for all advertising is 5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 19. That is also the deadline for all news copy to be delivered to either of the Mariner main offices in Marshfield or Braintree.

Community editors will be picking up copy at local drop spots at various times Friday, Dec. 19. For more information, call your respective town editor.

The advertising deadline for the New Year's issue is Saturday, Dec. 27 at noon.

The Mariner wishes everyone a joyous holiday season and a prosperous New Year.

Fees to be abated

Based on a recommendation from the town treasurer, selectmen voted this week to abate $1,814 in fees owed to the town.

The list, which dates back to 1975, includes fees incurred by residents to various town departments. Although the town has attempted for years to collect the fees, they have been unsuccessful. Treasurer Elizabeth Ripley suggested that the accounts be abated so they can be cleared from the town's books.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said it would be expensive to have an employee sit in small claims court for one day to clear up two of the accounts at a time.

Selectmen voted to abate the fees, with the stipulation that the list be reviewed annually by the board. The list of accounts receivable include: Jean Beale, June 19, 1980, $480 to the Highway Dept.; James H. Wenners, May 7, 1975, $6.35 to the Tree and Park Dept.; Robert B. Babbitt, Dec. 9, 1975, $28.50 to the Tree and Park Dept.; Ann L. Creamer, Dec. 9, 1975, $125 to the Tree and Park Dept.; Charles C. Wheelwright, Dec. 9, 1975, $25 to the Tree and Park Dept.; Fritz J. Kohler, Dec. 9, 1975, $250 to the Tree and Park Dept.; Bernard M. Collins, April 22, 1977, $80 to the Tree and Park Dept.; Robert J. Raffa, May 12, 1977, $348.25 to the Tree and Park Dept.; Victor J. Hunt, Sept. 29, 1977, $265 to Tree and Park Dept.; Frank Quinn, Dec. 26, 1978, $205 to Tree and Park Dept.; and Cohasset Swim Center, Jan. 1, 1975, $1 for town rentals.

Health board objects to Rep. Murray's intervention

The health board has criticized two town officials for participating in the appeal by Walter Sweeney to construct a septic system at 31 Bow Street.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray countered by saying, "I'd do it again."

In letters to Rep. Murray and sewer commission chairman Charles DeSantis, the board of health stated its opposition to their "intervention" in the review of Sweeney's application.

The health board voted last month to deny permission to the former resident to construct a septic system on the property where his family's home once stood.

In the letter to Rep. Murray, health board chairman C. Michael Bliss stated, "your intervention appears to be a strong contradiction to your long standing concern for home rule. These kinds of requests can do nothing but weaken the entire home rule process."

Dr. Bliss was referring to Rep. Murray's request that state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) assistant deputy director Thomas McLaughlin, review the Sweeney plan and discuss it with the local health board.

McLaughlin walked the Bow Street property, reviewed the engineering plans for the septic system and told the board there was no reason to deny the application.

But the local health board, in its letter to Rep. Murray stated, "the board of health was concerned over your intervention with the Commonwealth, specifically the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, regarding this matter. . . There is no provision for an administrative appeal or review process."

But Rep. Murray denied she was requesting that the state overrule the local board's decision.

"It was simply a case of my constituent (Sweeney) requesting my assistance with a state agency. I would do that for any of my constituents, and I have always done so. I simply asked them to review the situation, which they did. I will always go to bat for my people, that's my job."

She continued, "I'm not trying to overstep any bounds. I know the importance of that from being a former town official. But it's my responsibility to help the people of my district. I was asking a state department to talk with a constituent of mine."

Recalling how she often receives action once her official state designation is mentioned, Rep. Murray added, "the average taxpayer should have the same response. I would do the same thing again. When someone calls me and asks me to look into a problem, I'll do it again."

In a separate letter to sewer chairman DeSantis, Dr. Bliss stated, "the Board of Health was surprised that you declared yourself as 'representing the Sweeneys' at its most recent meeting of Nov. 24, 1986.

"Aggressive, argumentative, and threatening tactics create nothing but an air of animosity and are not becoming of any individual, particularly an elected official. In your position on the sewer commission, you should be well aware of the ongoing pollution problems of Little Harbor, the significant number of failing septic systems in the town due to the types of natural occuring soils, and the continued desire of the Board of Health to implement sound environmental programs to address these situations. Misguided interference by any state or local official, such as yourself, serves no purpose but to cloud and confuse the issues at hand."

The health board chairman noted, "In conclusion, we would hope that any future dealings you may have with this board will be conducted in an improved manner of decorum and amenity."

During a heated discussion of the Sweeney plan last month, DeSantis argued in favor of the variance application. He could not be reached for comment regarding the health board's letter of Dec. 8.

The Cohasset Mariner will be published Monday, Dec. 22.

The Mariner wishes everyone a joyous holiday

Alternative ed. students share their thoughts

The School Committee Monday learned a lesson about educational alternatives from a group of extraordinary students.

A group of 15 juniors and seniors from the Alternative School Program shared their experiences and observations with the board.

"I have found the alternative school is good for me," said Robert Manns. "Regular school was okay, but here we're treated on an individual basis."

Like most of his classmates, Mann keeps very busy; he works three jobs and helps to support his family.

Though he no longer lives in Cohasset, Mann told the committee the program is worth his commuting here from Cotuit.

"When I was in the ninth grade," he said, "I earned only 20 credits. When I switched to the alternative school program in the tenth grade, I was able to earn 40 credits.

"The program," he explained, "helps people who need individual attention, students who would otherwise fall through the cracks."

According to program director Allan MacDonald, Cohasset High School's Alternative School was established in 1972 by a steering committee of parents and teachers who felt a number of students were not learning to the best of their abilities.

Our goal, he noted, has always been to maximize learning.The program offers students greater educational flexibilty and freedom than regular school, but demands the responsibility of higher productivity.

The family-type atmosphere of the program has given great support and encouragement to students such as Erin Linsey.

"Before I joined the alternative school program," Linsey said, "I had a lot of personal problems and was getting "F's" on my report card. But since I've been in the program, my grades have gone up."

Linsey leaves the high school at 11 a.m. each day to work as a volunteer at a wildlife sanctuary.

"A lot of people think it's a dumping ground for kids who can't make it in regular school," she said, "but volunteer work requires a lot of responsibility."

Linsey told the committee, she appreciates the support she receives from MacDonald and from her classmates.

"It's like a family," she said.

Marlissa Clapp praised the popular English teacher for the program's success.

"Mr. MacDonald does a great job with all of us," she said.

Along with her six major classes, Clapp has been learning visual arts at Boston University this year. She also has doubled up her courseloads in English and physical education to acheive an early graduation.

Despite her busy academic schedule, Clapp also works two or three jobs outside school.

"I really enjoy it," she told the committee. "It takes a lot of the pressure off."

In her spare time at school, Clapp has helped classmate Terry Stoner with her accounting.

When she is not tackling accounting, Stoner works in the school's athletic department as a secretary to Athletic Director Clark Chatterton. She also holds a job with a number of her classmates at J. Bildner and Sons.

Next year, Stoner hopes to take an advanced accounting class at Quincy Junior College.

Chris Flood recently earned his purple belt in karate. He works with Linsey at the Wildlife Center in Norwell.

Like most of his classmates, Flood acheived better grades after enrolling in the alternative school program.

Jenna Emmons decided to join the program in her senior year.

Shuttle bus volunteers honored at luncheon

The "tremendous commitment" of the 70 drivers who contribute to the daily success of the senior shuttle bus was recognized at a special luncheon this week.

With the help of Kimball's general manager Daniel Leahy, a luncheon was held there Tuesday afternoon. The voluntary drivers and their coordinator, Ray Remick, were honored guests at the event.

This was the first time the shuttle bus drivers received the official gratitude and "a pat on the back" by the town, according to senior center director Kathy Bryanton.

She explained that the shuttle bus was first organized by the Social Service League. One of Bryanton's first major projects, upon arriving in town last year, was to oversee the popular activity.

"I'll tell you," she said last week. "It takes a lot of work and rescheduling. And Ray Remick is in control. He's totally devoted to ensuring that the seniors of Cohasset have accessible transportation. He's always recruiting drivers."

From the 70 drivers, 11 are members of the town's revered Old Goats Club. "Ray is a member," Bryanton confided, "and there's always a gentleman there who'll come forward and help with the shuttle."

The shuttle operates six days a week, with a morning trip sometime between 9 a.m. and noon. An afternoon trip will take place between 12:30 and 3 p.m. Sunday trips are scheduled to local church services.

"It's really a remarkable service when you realize it's done completely by volunteers through Ray," the director said. "And it all runs so smoothly. Ray does all the scheduling and he brings it into me. We've never had one day that a driver didn't show. There are changes and occasional delays, but these people are dedicated to the service."

Special trips are made to the Braintree plaza, and twice each month to the Hanover Mall. The shuttle also runs to the Hingham Plaza and the Harborlight Mall, and to local doctors and hairdressers for appointments.

"Any person, 60 years or older, can use this service," Bryanton said. "It's as close to a personal service as you can get.

"There's no town around that has a completely voluntary shuttle service that works as well as ours, It's a tribute to the tremendous efforts of Ray and his drivers."

Twelve women from the Elm Street housing are in charge of calling the scheduled drivers and reminding them of the impending commitment. The van service, Bryanton said, does not run Saturdays except for a special event.

A shuttle will be scheduled in the event of a special presentation of the Dramatic Club production, or to a town meeting.

The service is offered free of charge to the seniors, she added. It is funded through the Council on Aging's budget.

"Without the shuttle service," the director said, "the seniors of this town would be isolated. There is not even a taxi service here. And to go from here to Quincy on public transportation is difficult. We have drivers who will take the residents to the T station in Quincy every second Thursday of the month. They are then able to go shopping there, or take the train into Boston."

Special trips are made if the need arises. A shuttle was scheduled this past summer to the Marshfield Fair, and to the outdoor band concerts in Hull.

"Ray is open to new ideas all the time," according to Bryanton. "If the seniors request a certain place to go, 99 percent of the time, he fulfills that need.

"In fact, there was a time recently when a woman had been injured but she needed to get to the bank. Ray saw to it that a driver was there last week to pick her up and escort her to the bank and then she was brought home," she added.

Two drivers recently attended a training program where they were taught how to assist seniors with special needs. It was a valuable session, Bryanton said, although the town's shuttle is unable to easily accommodate physically handicapped persons.

Bryanton, along with the senior center directors in Scituate and Norwell, are attempting to coordinate a shuttle service for the handicapped after January 1.

The director recalled when she arrived in Cohasset just about a year ago. "I said this town was really unique," she said. "And it's true. There's a tremendous amount of good will in this town. People here are very willing to help others. If Ray is away, there's always someone to help out and take over his duties. They're quiet and unassuming, but they do what needs to be done."

Another organization in town, FISH, is available to drive residents to appointments. A lot of the shuttle bus drivers also volunteer for that organization.

The luncheon held in their honor, Bryanton noted, "is a nice way to bring all these people together. They deserve our gratitude."

Photographs taken by staff photographers and appearing in the Mariners are available for reprints.

Photos are printed black and white on glossy paper either 5"x7" size of 8"x10". Orders should be phoned in with date of publication, the page number on which it appeared, and if possible, the name of the photographer.

When reprints are ready, you will be contacted (usually about two weeks) to pick them up at the Mariner office on Main St. (Rte. 3A) in Marshfield at your convenience.

Prices are $7 for 5"x7" and $9 for 8"x10". We recommend reproduction in 5"x7" except for special purposes.

Dog officer endorses regional shelter

Murphy's plans for the shelter include classroom facilities for vaccine clinics and lectures on animal care.

"Education should be a big part of any animal control program," Yocum commented. "We have to educate people in animal care."

According to the deed, the construction of a shelter on the Beal Street site hinges on an educational program. Since it was formerly federal land, Uncle Sam still has a say in what activities that land will accommodate.

Ostensibly, any development there must have an educational element to be approved.

Murphy commented, "The Hingham School Committee is enthused about the idea, but when I first went before the federal government, they were suspicious about our educational guise."

Real classes, seminars and lectures will take place at the facility, he said. Various humane societies and animal rights groups will back him up on that point.

Another possible obstacle is a question whether the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority would accept effluent from sewerage of an animal shelter at its treatment facilities.

The parcel is accessible to sewer lines, but Murphy noted, if necessary, a septic system could be installed at the site.

Murphy added, the proposal has strong support from State Senator William Golden and State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray.

The Animal Shelter Study Committee will deliver its report to the Hingham selectmen in January, 1987.

If the board agrees with the committee's proposal, Murphy and his colleagues will further explore financing the project, and will approach the federal government for the go-ahead.

Local woman is Easter Seal delegate

Elizabeth Van Slyck of Cohasset has been re-appointed a member of the Massachusetts Easter Seal Society House of Delegates.

The Easter Seal House of Delegates is the principal legislative body of the Society. Approximately 100 members are drawn from communities throughout the state. The House of Delegates appoints the Board of Directors for the Society.

The Massachusetts Easter Seal Society is a statewide organization offering a wide range of services for people with disabilities.

☐ Fans of Donna Green's Art will be happy to hear that she has a wonderful new print out called "Once Upon a Time." Just in time for Xmas. Be sure and take a look at Kit and Kaboodle and the Artist's Sons Frame Shop. You'll be glad you did. It's great.

☐ One of Cohasset High School's graduates is now spending a year away from the Ripon College campus, where she is a junior. Rebecca Lovering is currently studying in Spain while enrolled in the College's Toledo Program.

Lovering is the daughter of Daniel and Joyce Curran of 43 Church Street. Ripon College provides the option of off-campus study to any of its students to enrich his or her understanding of a culture, a major and/or a career.

☐ The Kurtz family had grand news in time for Christmas, from their daughter Lisa Anne. Mr. and Mrs. Marlyn L. Kurtz will have a dentist in their family, as they learned when Lisa was accepted into Dental School at the University of Florida in Gainsville. Lisa attended CHS through the 11th grade (thats when Dad got transferred for a year) and graduated from Huntington in Long Island. She did her undergrad work at the University of Indiana and the University of Florida. Lisa received her Associates degree in Dental Hygiene from Santa Fe Community College in Gainsville. She has always been active in music, from CHS right through until now, being an accomplished flutist. She was a member of the jazz band and marching band, as well as the Mass Youth Wind Ensemble at the New England Conservatory. More good news for the Kurtz's and Lisa's friends, she will be home for Christmas! Be sure to give her a "buzz", she'd love to hear from all of her pals!

☐ December sure is birthday month for the Pompeo family! Laura Pompeo was a few weeks ago, Dr. Roger Pompeo celebrated his ?? on the 14th, and Holly Pompeo turns 17 tomorrow (Dec. 19th). Here's to a wonderful year for all of you!!

Even when you're having fun, when it's time to go. . .it's time to go. Here, John Mulcahey, 21 months, is giving his mom the signal during this week's Deer Hill concert.

☐ Lisa Shumaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Shumaker, makes the news this week (after already having won the 1986 Massachusetts Superintendent's Academic Excellence Award, the Harvard Book Award, Bausch and Lomb Science Award, the 1986 Field Hockey Spirit Award and Softball Spirit Award, plus being a member of the National Honor Society and being on the High Honors from grades 7-11, all semesters), as she has been chosen the DAR Good Citizen (by faculty and students). This award has been announced by the Col. Thomas Lothrop DAR by its registrar Dorothy B. Bates, and sure is one to be proud of! Lisa and her mom will attend a tea in her honor now, and will receive the award at graduation. We add with pride that Lisa is a writer for the Mariner, and that she intends to continue her education majoring in English/journalism.

☐ December 20th is a big day for Ken and Sue Fone, its their anniversary. Happy anniversary and may you both have many, many more!

☐ The hockey boosters held a season "face-off" breakfast at the Red Lion Inn last Saturday, and the team is still talking about how great the food was . . . here's to a successful season fellas!

☐ Wasn't it nice that the cast of Godspell was able to add a performance last Saturday night . . . all reports are that it was well worth the extra time and effort, as it was a grand success. Hats off to all of you.

☐ Has A. J. Antoine missed a Peek at the Past answer yet? He sure is a true Cohassetite, he has been able to identify more pictures of the past than anyone we can think of!!

☐ Congratulations to James D. Lyons, who was appointed recently to Vice President of Corporate Development for the Tocci Building Corporation.

☐ Thomas J. Waters, Headmaster of Derby Academy in Hingham, announced honors lists for the first term of the 1986-87 academic year.

Headmaster's List, for those students who have achieved an A- or above average of all subjects, was awarded to James M. Driscoll. Second honors. for earning a B average or better were awarded to Caroline K. Arbury, Jonathan J. Foley, Eve A. Liberty, Anthony W. Morgan, Kristine A. Pozatek, Stephen M. Pozatek.

☐ The George H. Mealey Post held a wonderful dinner for the residents of 60 Elm Street a few weeks ago, what a good way to kickoff the Christmas season. The food was reported to be yummy, and everyone loved the surprise visitor . . . Santa Claus of course.

☐ We hear that Bob Shultz has taken up playing hockey at Bowdoin this semester . . . a great athlete, we are sure that he will do a super job, just as he always did for CHS.

☐ Be sure to take a trip "around town" this week, and make it a night journey. The folks sure have done a beautiful job decorating, and if you haven't found the Christmas Spirit yet, that's sure to help. Our town is full of Christmas!

☐ That's the news from here, let us hear all about your Christmas, including visitors, parties, etc. We'd all love to hear it.

A time to think

The latest proposal now before selectmen is the construction of a $300,000, 72-slip town-owned marina. Before any decision is made by town officials, there will be a public hearing at which everyone will be given the opportunity to discuss the plan.

It is too early to immediately state an opinion here. There are a lot of pros and cons, good facets and bad. And no one is more aware of that than the members of the harbor study committee.

Since January, and surely years before that, they have been considering what to do to help ease the congestion in the harbor. The thought of gaining additional mooring space, while perhaps increasing the navigational flow in the harbor, is intriguing.

Right now, the average wait on the harbor mooring list is seven years. That is a dreadful statistic. The reason many people move to this town is to enjoy its scenic waterfront and to partake of the coastal activities offered here. To have to wait seven years to moor your boat is extremely distressful.

On the other hand, one can easily see that Cohasset Harbor in the summer is congested with pleasure boats. It is not a particularly easy harbor to navigate because of the congestion. Many sailors would rather travel past Cohasset than to take the slight chance a mooring will be available for a temporary stay.

And the fact remains, with all this talk of congestion, and in the current plans to build a marina, it is the commercial fishermen who again will be immediately and personally affected by the proposal. Once again they will be moved aside, out of their familiar innner harbor location to another spot outside the cove. They are not happy.

The fishing fleet has depleted since they once ruled Cohasset Harbor. Their numbers have dwindled and their industry is struggling. Nevertheless, they are an important and vital contribution to our town. They feel slighted when town officials talk about the amenities they want to provide affluent pleasure boatowners, when it surely means their berths will be taken away. It is not fair, they say, when the fishermen of this town are treated as second class citizens in favor of the more influential, monied residents and non residents.

The fishermen of this town have a right to state their opinion. And they should surely be careful observers to this proposal. But we urge them to use restraint. Yelling and rude behavior in front of town officials will often cause adversarial dimensions to a discussion. That is not what's needed here.

A bit of restraint will help to have their collective voice heard. Make your feelings known in an intelligent, well-prepared manner. The townspeople will be more inclined to listen to a reasoned discussion, than an emotional outburst.

We will all pay close attention to this proposal. And town officials are obliged to listen to all opinions.

Letters

To the Editor:

In a recent editorial in The Cohasset Mariner it was inferred that Cohasset public school students did so well in the state school assessment tests results primarily because the town generously supported its schools. That assertion is not completely true. In comparison with 14 similar communities (listed in Boston Globe and Ledger articles recently) Cohasset scored third in the total assessment scores while rating only 9th in per pupil expenditures.

Cohasset's present expenditure per pupil stands at $2,901, while Weston contributes $4,195, Natick-$3,094, Hingham-$3,067, Manchester-$3,420 and Norwell-$3,075. These sums seem to refute the statement that the Cohasset scores are due solely to the fact that Cohasset taxpayers pay more for education than similar communities in The Bay State.

Thus, if the Cohasset scores are high, this excellent performance can be said to be due to two other key factors. They are, the educational environment provided these children by their families, and the superior nature of the teaching staff in the Cohasset Schools I can state that Cohasset parents do provide a wealth of educationally-sound experiences for their children. Cohasset students are generally well travelled and well read.

I can also firmly say that the Cohasset teaching faculty is a unique body of dedicated and experienced educators. I feel that their superior knowledge of the art of teaching and true love of children has had a deep impact on the recently publicized educational achievement of their students.

In conclusion, let this teacher say that we must not look for simple answers (fiscal expenditures) to Cohasset's educational accomplishments. We must learn to recognize the all-important contribution of parents, their children and the teachers of this fine community.

A letter of Christmas love to a child

(This letter was written by a Cohasset resident especially for the Christmas season. Ed.)

Dear Daughter:

The "Now" is in constant flux, — can not be regulated by sums and factors and equations; only the past is certain, and tomorrow is always a secret, a mystery. How I wish to stop the clock!

Just now I looked out at the most intense sunset: bright pink, above the snow-covered rooftops, yards and trees. Exquisite! (It brightens momentarily as the earth darkens, and as I write — it disappears). . . . How often, lately, I sit alone — reading or writing, looking out, listening to the music of nature. It has become my happiness — along with the necessary functions of every day.

This "quiet life" — my daily excursions — I have tried to share with you, via the mail . . . my way, of keeping you with me and giving you a part of me. (Distance is a nightmare, but through communication one can evoke the dream of proximity.)

What shall I do with tomorrow's images? Shall I mail them? Or, shall I bundle them, wrap them in tissue paper, tie them with a satin ribbon, and stash them away in the bottom of an antique chest? Tell me! Shall I label them "compositions," "dreams," or "vanished moments?"

I have no gift today to give, except that bundle of letters which you keep somewhere! Last year's notes! Those spontaneous eruptions were outpourings from my heart — "love" composed of periods and commas and words, "love" improvised.

Merry Christmas!
Mom

State DPW explains Rte. 3 plans

(Here is a copy of a letter sent to the South Shore Coalition Project Manager.)

Dear Jean Christensen:

Thank you for your letter about the lane addition project on Route 3 between Weymouth and Duxbury.

The scope of the project was limited to the addition of a travel lane in the median because of the environmental sensitivity in the area.

The proposed project is scheduled to begin construction in about four years. If we included additional ramps at existing interchanges or additional interchanges as part of this project, extensive environmental studies would be required.

These studies would delay the widening project by an additional five years.

We, therefore, chose to limit the scope of this to widening within the median project.

Although the ramps are not included in this project, their operation will be evaluated as part of the environmental study.

Any actions that will be necessary to improve traffic operations at the interchanges will be treated as a separate project or projects in the future.

You also mentioned the MBTA Old Colony Rail Rehabilitation Project. We have been in regular contact with MBTA authorities and have provided them with whatever information on our project is available. We also have a liaison officer with the MAPC (Mr. Robert Patneaude) who has been working with the Route 3 project manager, (Mr. Robert Lapsley). If you have questions about this project in the future, please call Mr. Patneaude at 973-7144 or Mr. Lapsley at 973-7475.

Thank you for your concerns on the project.

NRC says Pilgrim can handle problems

By Rebecca Nevers
Staff writer

In the event of a nuclear accident at Pilgrim Nuclear Power Station, in Plymouth, plant workers are prepared to handle the emergency and assure the safety of Kingston and other area residents, federal nuclear officials said last week.

That determination came in the aftermath of an emergency preparedness drill at the plant on Dec. 10. The drill tested the ability of Boston Edison employees to respond to a simulated accident.

"The initial assessment is positive," Boston Edison spokesman Mary Wallan said on behalf of the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission. "There was marked improvement in the overall drill."

She said it was evident that employee enthusiasm and hard work benefited the company during the drill.

The NRC was looking for good communication among employees working from different sites during the exercise, she said. Some people were at the utility's new emergency operations facility on Obery Street, Plymouth, while others were at the on-site technical support center.

"It is a big challenge to get the word passed out accurately," she said. "We worked at keeping channels open."

Although NRC and Boston Edison officials are pleased with the preliminary test results, "It is important to see what areas need improvement," Wallan said.

NRC officials require all nuclear plants to run similar drills annually. This year's drill tested only utility employees and did not include other state and federal agencies in the exercise because it is an "off year," according to Boston Edison Vice President John Stevens.

Next year will be an "on year," Stevens said. A more elaborate drill will be conducted to include civil defense and state department of Public Health employees as well as local and state service personnel.

Pilgrim and the Yankee Rowe power plant in West Massachusetts, alternate "on" and "off" years, Stevens said.

This year's scenario, designed by HMM Associates, a consulting firm in Concord, NH, was subject to NRC review. No employees knew what the scenario would be until the drill began early Wednesday morning, Stevens said.

The six-hour drill began at 5:45 a.m., taking employees through the four emergency levels. The NRC looked for adequate personnel protection, quick response to rapidly changing situations proper procedure adherence and timely information release to warn the public of the emergency.

Six programs financed by $12,000 state grants

Horace Mann was the father of public education; now, grants in his name are furthering that cause in Cohasset.

Six programs will benefit from the distribution of $12,324 in Horace Mann grants, which became available through the state education reform act.

One of the grants may bring financial rewards to the school system, as Edward Leary received $2,000 to begin work helping Superintendent Stephen Hart apply for futher grants.

Leary, an English teacher at Cohasset High School commented, "It's difficult for the Superintendent to get notification of grants and hunt down teachers who might be interested in putting together the appropriate program.

"In order to get grant money, you have to have a specific proposal," he explained.

Leary said he would act as a grant writer and as a "conduit" for information between the Superintendent and teachers who are interested in pursuing grants for programs not funded in the school budget.

"The school has not had a grant writer before," Leary noted. "Other schools have actively pursued grants for years."

He said he heard of a grant program in another school which paid for itself within six months "and everything after that was gravy."

Leary said he won't promise such success in Cohasset right off the bat, because he is new at grant hunting. "I have to talk to the Education Department to develop a strategy for getting grant money. If I could get two or three grants this year, I would be doing well.

"The tree is there," he said. "I just have to know how to get on the ladder and pull down the fruit."

Four teachers will split a $2,400 stipend for the development of curriculum for special needs students who are unable to participate in the core academic classes.

Barbara Fanning, Gale Civale, Ed Leach and Florence Ely will use the funds to organize a program including math, science, social studies and language arts/reading classes.

They also plan to implement a "measurement scale" to chart the progress of their students.

Leach explained, the grant will pay for the time he and his colleagues spend on the project, and for materials which were not included in the school budget.

The formal organization of the program, he added, will allow them to plan the curriculum for a span of several years, giving the program a sense of direction.

Alan MacDonald will receive $2,000 for the development of an outdoor education curriculum, which will involve students from both regular classes and the Alternative School program he runs at Cohasset High School.

He explained, the outdoor program is an outgrowth of both natural science and survival courses. Students will read literature, such as Walden, will learn about edible plants, stars, recycling, backpacking and general survival. They will also perform experiments, such as building a compost pile.

"They will learn practical environmental awareness," MacDonald said. "The outdoor program will be sort of a compromise between Outward Bound and science class."

Joan Wool of the business department will use her grant to train students for occupations in sales and marketing.

Her program will include internships and will give students experience in the fields of: fashion,advertising, art and merchandising.

Wool said she is working to establish an advisory board made up of six business leaders from the South Shore area.

The board, she explained, will help develop the courses and may help in the placement of students graduating from the program.

"My hope is to establish a link between the course and those who will hire the kids after graduation," she said.

Wool noted, the proposal has interested a number of students, who find her courses popular.

And she already has received replies from 20 members of the local business community interested in getting involved with the program.

A proposal for a team teaching program garnered a $2,500 grant for Marie Schleiff, Elizabeth Beatson, Donald Kelly and Kenneth Cisneros.

"Team teaching is a concept which was tried at Cohasset High School several years ago," Schleiff said. "There were three teams at the junior high school and it worked well.

"It offered scheduling flexibility," she explained, "and allowed a student-teacher relationship to develop."

The team teaching program which formerly existed at the junior high school was dropped, Schleiff said, when enrollment declined and the junior and senior high schools merged.

The old program covered grades 7 and 8, she added. We took a new look at the concept and decided to incorporate the program in grades 7 through 10. We wanted to see if it can be done again.

Schleiff commented, the program will benefit students by breaking the locks in their schedules, giving them more flexibility. Students will also find greater security in the classroom and a smoother transition between junior and senior high schools.

The team hopes to travel to schools in Rhode Island and Maine which currently are using the team teaching method.

"We will investigate its feasibility," she said.

Colleen Lucas and Jean O' Malley were granted $2,000 to develop a sequential K-12 art curriculum.

Lucas said she hopes to improve communications between her high school department and O'Malley's elementary school program, to develop a cohesive curriculum.

"We want the curriculum to enhance every other part of school life," Lucas said. "We want students who graduate from Cohasset High School to have some knowledge about art.

"It's a gift they'll never lose."

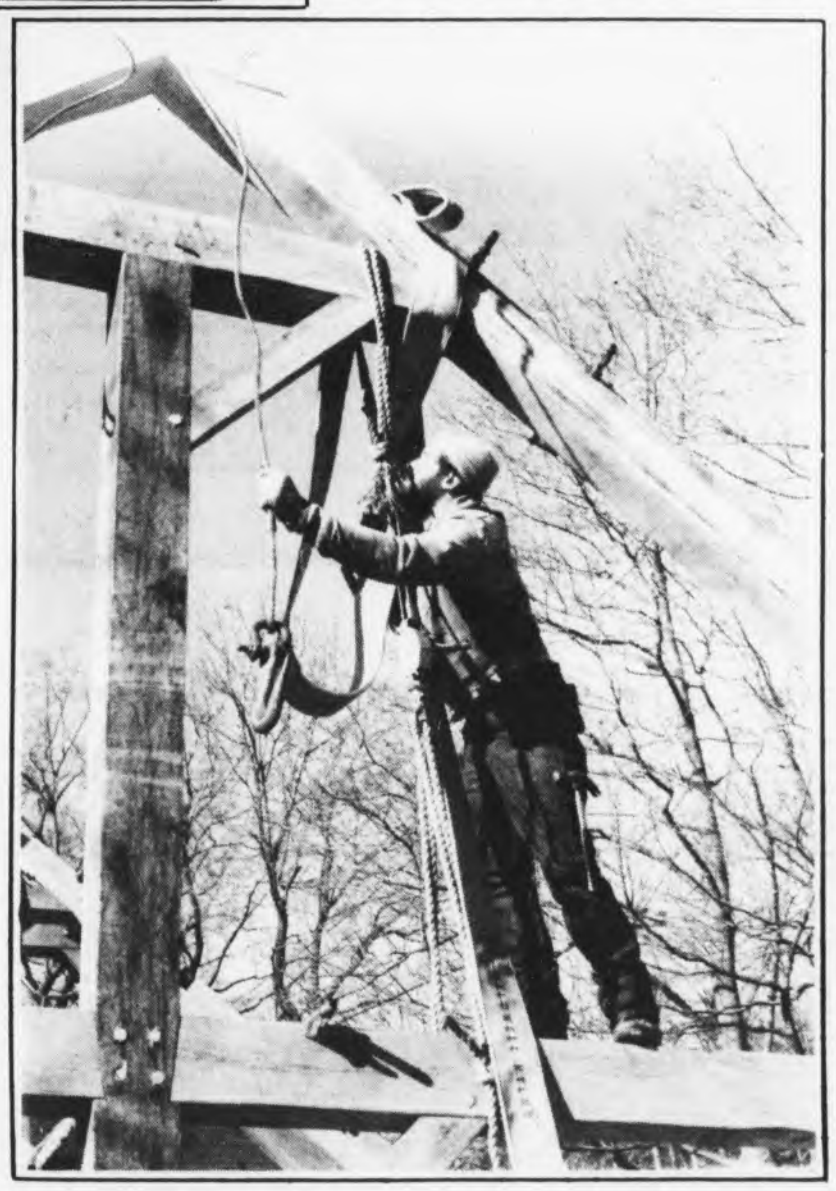
Building made of sticks

Photos by Ed Donahue



The transformation from a pile of lifeless timber to a structural form took place last Saturday. The addition at Hub Shipping Co. on Elm Street was raised by workers this weekend. The solid wood timbers will frame the interior of the addition. No nails or screws were used to piece together the timbers. It was completed in the post and beam tradition. Charles and Bob Brine are the craftsmen whose work is being admired throughout the town.

Youth Soccer Registration

Registration for the Coastal Soccer League Program will be held at the Deer Hill School, Saturday, Dec. 20 from 9 to noon. This inter-town soccer program is designed for boys and girls, ages 8 to 19 years.

Last year, the Cohasset boys under 19 years and boys under 16 years advanced to the State Finals Championship Round at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

The boys under 10 years compiled a nine win and one loss record in league play before losing to Plymouth in the League Championship game.

The president of the Cohasset Youth Soccer Association, Larry Schultz, advises all parents to register their children before Christmas. "It makes a great Christmas present", said Schultz.

Individual children can be registered for $30, the second child costs $20 and the third, $20. Team shirts are provided along with athletic shorts.

Most games are played Saturday afternoon and away games are no further than Plymouth.

Although 250 youths played on 14 Cohasset teams, space within certain age group teams should be competitive, with the first registrants receiving preference.

Vacation recreation programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct special games and team sports during the Christmas vacation, at Deer Hill School Gym:

Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 22 and 23 from 9 a.m. to noon for grades K-3; and noon to 3 p.m. for grades 4, 5, and 6.

Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 29 and 30, from 9 a.m. to noon for grades K-3; and noon to 3 p.m. for grades 4, 5, and 6.

There will be no fee for this program and the activities will be supervised by the recreation department staff. Children should wear old clothes and sneakers and may not bring food or drink to the gym. Parents are responsible for dropping-off, and picking-up children at appropriate times.

Channel 3 show

The Trivia Show Group, volunteers at Scituate Community Television, would like to extend an invitation to those young and young at heart to participate in the Third Annual Christmas Trivia Show Dec. 20, at 9 p.m., on channel 3 in Scituate and on channel 12 in surrounding towns.

Along with host Bill Shafer will be special guest: Santa Claus.

Seventh grade reading program

the interpretive reading they are expected to do is a shock. This program should help prepare students for that. I hope it will bridge the gap that exists now."

Committee member Diana Kornet agreed. "I'm very glad to see this as part of our budget for next year."

In a related move, the School Committee voted to extend through ninth grade, the time period students have for meeting their elective requirements.

Hart explained, "Students in the seventh and eighth grades must complete five semesters of electives, including: health education, art, music, industrial arts and home economics.

"Now that we are adding more English requirements," he added, "it would be difficult for a student to complete his elective requirements in two years, so we are extending the time period another two semesters."

Finally, the board voted to accept the initial gift of $100,000 and an additional 40 percent of the assets of the estate of Malcom Stevens for the purpose of establishing a scholarship fund to be known as the "Malcom H. Stevens and Helen C. Stevens Scholarship Fund."

This year, the school awarded three $3,000 scholarships from the fund.

The money was intended to benefit students interested and active in the field of health care. However, recommendations can be made if there are no students pursuing endeavors there.

The Perfect Gift

Your child can be immortalized in the Deer Hill School Library! If you care to purchase and select a book from the suggested list available in the library, a photograph of your child, along with a suitable book plate, will be placed in the book prior to its being placed on the library shelf.

Just think of the pleasure for your child in receiving this gift! And the additional pleasure of your child when so many other youngsters can enjoy reading it as well. So much pleasure, and all the result of your thoughtful generosity.

If you are interested, or have any suggestions, call Margie Murphy in the library—383-6115.

CHS Class Visits Nursing Home

Thursday, December 11, Al MacDonald's Ethics and Literature class from CHS went on a walking field trip to the Ripley Road Nursing Home to deliver a little holiday cheer.

The following students participated:

Social Studies Brought to Life

Professor Michael B. Chesson, a member of the History Department at University of Mass. at Boston, recently gave a lecture on a Civil War topic to Edward F. Sheehan's Advanced Section in American Studies.

He gave an illustrated talk on the little-known confederate raid on St. Albans, Vermont in October, 1864. Professor Chesson, who teaches undergraduate students at the Harbor Campus, is an expert on Civil War Studies. The Cohasset 10th grade students sat in awe as the visiting lecturer described the raid by 22 confederate soldiers who came down from Canada to rob St. Albans banks of $200,000.

The University of Massachusetts has recently undertaken a Faculty Speakers program. Faculty members visit Southeastern Mass. high schools to lecture to students on a wide range of interesting topics. The Cohasset High School Social Studies Department has had a "working-relationship" with U-Mass Boston for the past two years. Donald Costello, special assistant to the Dean of the College's School of Artsand Sciences, is the coordinator of the program.

During the second semester this year (February 1987) U-Mass professors will visit Psychology and the AP Modern European History classes at Cohasset High School.

Deer Hill science study

As reported in the Mariner On Nov. 13, Joe Becker's science classes at the Deer Hill School are participating in the SOC (Student Ocean Challenge) which coincides with the on-going BOC (British Oxygen Co.).

Around-the-World race of single sailors in Class I (59 foot maximum) sailboats and Class II (39-foot maximum) sailboats.

The boats left Newport R.I. on August 30, 1986 and are expected to finish back in Newport in June, 1987.

Mr. Becker's classes are following the progress of the race. Here is the latest bulletin from the SOC:

The BOC Challenge Leg I was a shake down for the skippers to test the waters and so it was for the Student Ocean Challenge students, as well. For every competitor who reached Cape Town, it was a victory. For each racer who was forced to withdraw, it was a time to reflect on the happenings of the voyage and plan for the future.

For the student whose adopted skipper has withdrawn, he or she must be disappointed. But like the skipper, you must look ahead. Now you have the opportunity to follow another sailor. To complete your log for Leg 1, you might want to enter the date that your first skipper withdrew: Airforce (sank) 10/4; Quailo, 11/2; Madonna, 11/7; Miss Global, 11/10; ACI Crusader, 11/21; Neptune's Express, 11/24. (Encourage the students to write about how they and or the skipper felt.) ACI Crusader was damaged in a storm 60 miles from Cape Town and had to be towed into port. A disappointing end to a noble effort by skipper John Biddlecombe. New Zealander, Richard McBride, and Neptune's Express, sailed into Cape Town, but then withdrew. Leg I took its toll on the boat and time ran out for this able sailor.

British competitor, 62 year old Harry Mitchell and Double Cross, finished off Cape Town on November 5, at 4:46 a.m. local time. He was warmly greeted by some of his fellow competitors who had remained awake for most of the night in order to welcome him over the finishing line. Once dockside he was easily persuaded to sing a few bars of what he termed, "proper Yorkshire ballad."

The early deadline for the Christmas issue is Friday, Dec. 19 noon for news and 5 p.m. for ads

Vo-Tech administrator's pay to be hiked

The South Shore Regional School Committee awarded six percent pay hikes to several administrators at South Shore Vocational Technical High School, and gave one adminsistrator a 10 percent increase last week.

Abington campus director Paul Bows, who has been at the school about 18 months, received a 10 percent raise, to $37,400 for the 1986-87 school year.

Other administrators received six percent raises. Assistant Superintendent Warren Anderson will receive $43,757 for the 1986-87 school year. Guidance Director Leonard Cody will get $37,488 and Abington secretary Dorothy Hartford will get $15,552. Rosemarie Hahn, secretary to the superintendent, will get $20,501, and Secretary-Treasurer Robert Kelley will earn $16,833.

The regional school committee unanimously approved the six percent increases, but Rockland representative John Doyle voted against Bows' 10 percent increase, saying the raises should be the same for all administrators.

"I'm not finding fault with Mr. Bows," said Doyle. "I feel he's doing a good job. But we have people that have been here 25 years who have done a terrific job every year who aren't getting raises that big."

"We're fortunate to have Paul Bows as an administrator," said Whitman representative Lloyd Patriquin, "and we were fortunate to get him at the salary that we did. It's worth it to retain him, and I'm sure the superintendent thought of this in making his recommendations."

Superintendent-Director Clifford Easton recommended the increases. Some members, while voting to support the recommendations, said they would have liked to see formal evaluations of the administrators.

"I support Dr. Easton's recommendations," said Dennis Blackwell of Hanover, "but evaluations would have helped.

"I think evaluations are also in the best interest of the administrators," he said. "They can see the areas in which they are strong and the areas they need to improve in."

The committee did not approve a retroactive raise for a secretary who left the school in October. Easton praised the work of Barbara Dunbar and recommended that she receive a prorated six percent raise for July through October, but the committee feared setting a precedent.

"I could support Dr. Easton's recommendation," said James McDermott of Hanson, "but I certainly wouldn't want it used as a precedent in the future."

"Will we have to go back and pay any cafeteria workers raises that were negotiated after they left the school?" said Doyle. "I think we can't start doing something like this."

Area man recognized for 'Beyond War' effort

By David Johnson
Mariner Staff

A Norwell man has been active in a peace group which honored the presidents of the four Contadora nations last Sunday.

The Beyond War Award was given to the leaders of Mexico, Panama, Colombia and Venzuela during a ceremony which linked Boston and four other US cities with four in Latin America via satellite.

Douglas Marshall, of 427 River St., Norwell, a fulltime volunteer for the Beyond War Foundation, handled logistics for the Boston site.

Marshall said he hoped the Central American nations would try the Contadora peace process "and not let the situation get like Lebanon."

In the face of escalating violence throughout Central America, the four nations met in 1983 on the Panamanian island of Contadora to develop a peace plan for the region.

The seven part Contadora plan calls for the eventual elimination of foreign military advisors in the region, arms control, the promotion of democracy and economic reforms.

The United States supports the process, said Marshall.

In 1985 the four nations were joined by Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay and Peru in the peace process.

However, neither Nicaragua, nor any of the nations most immediately threatended by it, Costa Rica, Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala or Belize has joined the group.

Marshall, who sold his painting contracting business in 1984 to work fulltime for the Beyond War Foundation, said of the Contadora efforts, "It's an educational process. You have to edcuate the Nicaraguans.

Marshall agreed that Nicaragua was "progressively less free," but said the United States should "give countries a chance to unfold their own history."

"We (US) are a much greater threat to them (Central Americans) than the Russians," he stated.

He said the Sandinistas had done much for Nicaragua, including raising literacy rates.

But, when asked if El Salvador, a US ally which recently held free elections, was not a better democratic model, Marshall said "I'm not a student of or an expert on matters in Central America."

"The truth is I don't know very much about it," he added.

During the two hour ceremony Sunday, much was said of peace, but no one said how peace could be achieved without the support of the Central American states, now on the verge of full-scale war.

Here's what to get that special someone in Cohasset.

Majestic Cars Ltd. is not officially open yet, but like Santa Claus they have been generous to interested consumers, selling a variety of Maserati sedans at prices competetive with BMW and Mercedes.

Autohaus has that Ferrari Grandma has been longing for. But you may have to wait two years if you want a new one; they go fast in more ways than one.

Arthur Masciarelli, general manager of Cohasset's new Maserati dealership commented, "For someone who's hard to shop for, this is the place.

"All Maseratis are hand-built," he said, "even the motors. And the interiors are 100 percent leather. It takes two men two weeks to stitch the interior of every car."

Masciarelli said Maserati's performance is "second to none. It's like a wolf in sheep's clothing."

Does that sound like Uncle Milty, or what?

On May 30, 1939, a Maserati 8 CTF driven by Wilbur Shaw became the first European car to win the Indianapolis 500. Masciarelli said it is this sort of heritage which puts Maserati ahead of its competitors.

"One big misconception about Maserati," he added, "most people think they all cost $80,000." Nay! Only one or two models reach that lofty price range.

Masciarelli said most models are priced between $26,000 and $35,000. Those cars come with a standard two-year/24,000 mile warranty. Majestic Cars Ltd. offers an optional six-year warranty.

"The big difference between the Maserati and its competitors," he added, "is the sheer excitement and joy of driving it. It's a sports car! "

Masciarelli noted, Maserati is the only foreign car on the market with a twin turbo-charged engine, "right out of the Formula 1 race car."

This feature, he said, affords the Maserati a lot of power, without undue wear and tear on the engine.

Majestic Cars Ltd. expects to sell 10 to 12 Maseratis per month, Masciarelli said. "That's not a lot, but these cars are not for everybody either. This car is for the type of person who likes to take risks in life, the type of person who lives life in the fast lane."

If you are considering putting a Maserati under the tree, you should keep in mind that speed limits should not bother your hard-to-shop-for special someone.

If you plan to gift wrap your loved-one a Ferrari this season, don't even think of the dirty double-nickel. After all, it's Christmas time!

Horsepower and lots of it, that's what they build into Ferraris.

Grandma's Testarosa boasts a 12-cylinder 380 horsepower engine.

Autohaus salesman Richard Cyr said the price tag for that gift is $110,700. It is Ferrari's top of the line model. Of course, all Ferraris are hand-made.

The most popular model is the 328 GTSI, at only $70,600. Ferrari's Mondial costs $69,200 and the convertible Cabriolet costs $75,300.

Both its price tag and its styling make the Ferrari "unique" and "exclusive."

"You won't see your neighbor driving down the street in the same car," Cyr said. "There are fewer than 3,000 Ferraris built for the entire world each year."

"It is one of the finest handling cars you can buy," he added.

The Ferrari is one of the most refined cars in the world in terms of ride quality, styling, steering, you name it, Cyr said.

With its loyal following and steady service for a backup, he added, the Ferrari makes "the perfect Christmas gift."

A special Christmas gift from Village Fair

By Ruthann Turner
Mariner correspondent

When Mary Mack saw the calico quilt displayed at the Christmas Village Fair, she immediately thought of her son, Tim. She purchased a chance and signed his name on the raffle ticket.

When Carol Sundblom, chairman of the fair's boutique table held the container for the raffle drawing, she silently wished the quilt would go to someone who needed it.

She had saved hundreds of "bits and pieces" of material which eventually comprised the double, full sized quilt, she explained, noting that several local women started sewing the pieces together in September.

When the phone rang at the Mack residence one week after the Dec. 6, Fair, Tim Mack answered, then handed the phone to his mother. It was Carol, telling her that Tim had won the quilt. Mary then told Carol that her son, 37 years old, was still tired from his last dialysis session — one of three he must undergo each week.

When the two later met, Mary showed Carol photos of her son.

A diabetic for 27 years, Tim first experienced kidney failure in 1985, and shortly after that, peripheral neurophathy, a crippling disease of the extremities set in.

One photo showed Tim standing for the first time in a year. At 6' 1" and 120 pounds, standing with a walker is now something he can accomplish about three or four times a week.

During an interview at the Mack's Scituate residence, a modest home near the ocean in Shore Acres where Tim spends most of this time, Mary pointed out it was "a good thing that the house is small so Tim can get around in his wheelchair."

Winning the quilt, she said, has helped both her and her son get into the Christmas spirit.

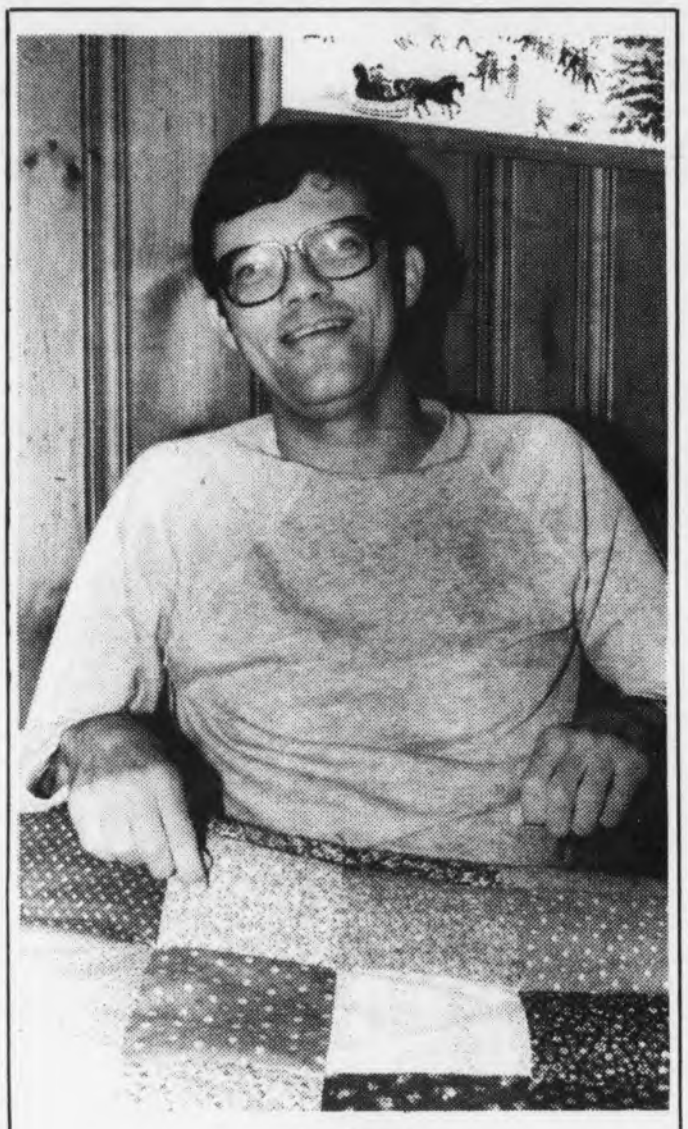
"We have to roll with the punches," she said, "winning the quilt has helped.

Asked what he first thought when he held the quilt, Tim smiled and said "warmth!"

"My circulation isn't as good as it should be," he said, explaining that his legs and feet are often cold. "I use the quilt all the time."

"It's also the nicest piece of workmanship I've ever seen," he added.

Tim can understand the satisfaction that comes from working with one's hands. Before he became sick, he enjoyed silk screening and working in the printing industry where he "loved the challenge," he said.



Tim Mack

Also a "hobbiest by nature," one of his bedroom walls is filled with framed jigsaw puzzles. Tim's other interests include antique cars, auto racing and science fiction.

A lot of his time now, however, is working with his therapist, Mary Downing, whom he credits much of his recent accomplishments such as lifting and moving his legs.

"I couldn't lift my right leg before I started working with Mary," he said.

She also helped him to walk again.

"When I stood up, I didn't realize how tall I was," he recalled. "I felt like the Empire State Building."

Although the past two years have been tough on Tim and his family, he's optimistic for a number of reasons. One is that he's gradually recovering from the peripheral neurophathy. Second, he is now on a donar list for a new kidney, which would, if successful, stop the dialysis sessions.

In order to even qualify for a new kidney, to even be on the list, he must be in "perfect health" for his condition — to withstand the trauma of the operation, he explained.

"I'm slowly going forward," he said. "I take one day at a time."

Asked what has specifically kept him going throughout the past year, Tim said, "Just to know I'll get a kidney transplant." Although the right donor is hard to find because it has to match his body size and blood type, he noted, "It looks pretty perspective right now."

Visits from his therapist, traveling to the dialysis center in Brockton, weekly visits from a nurse, sticking to his strict diet with the help of his mother and an optimistic attitude have all contributed to his improving health.

Visits from his brothers, nieces, nephews, aunts uncles and friends have also kept him going. The family will all be together on Christmas, said Mary.

According to Carol Sandbolm, "Everybody loved the quilt and wanted to win it. We wanted it won by someone who would appreciate it, and it certainly was."

"We enjoy the warmth of the quilt because it was made with the warmth of others," said Mary, who is already planning to contribute her Irish knits to the fair next year.

"The quilt is now our family heirloom," said Tim, "It will be here forever."

Beechwood Congregational

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to workship Sunday mornings at 10:45. Rev. Wally Cedarleaf will preside. Child care is provided.

Children in grades K-8 are invited to attend Sunday school from 9:30-10:30 a.m.

Sat., Dec. 20 at 10 a.m. there will be pagent rehersal. Sunday, Dec. 21, 9:30 a.m., Sunday school party; 10:45 a.m., Church service; 7 p.m., pagent rehearsal; 7:30 candlelighting service. Tues., Dec. 23, 6:30 p.m., Christmas caroling.

We will meet at the church and return for hot chocolate and cookies. Parents, friends and neighbors are invited.

Second Parish festivities

Sunday, Dec. 20 at the Second Parish, the children of the congregation will present an original Christmas play written with their help by Stephanie Shute.

Ms. Shute is a published playwright and a descendant of the first minister of Second Parish, Daniel Shute, who served the church from 1746 until 1802.

The Christmas play will be part of the 10:30 a.m. worship service. Nursery and infant care will be available. All are welcome.

A children's Christmas party will follow the service. There will be cookies, finger sandwiches, quick breads, and, rumor has it, a visit from a man in red with a sack full of presents.

Saint Anthony's

Sunday masses — 9:30, 11:30 a.m.; Saturday 5 p.m. Daily mass 7 a.m. Saturday, 8 a.m. Confessions: Saturday from 4:15 to 4:45 p.m.
CCD: Grade 2 first communion classes. Our annual Christmas Pageant will be presented Sunday, Dec. 21, 6 p.m. Everyone is invited. The children will meet at 5:30 in the upstairs conference room

Parish Penance Service - Tuesday, Dec. 23, 7:30 p.m.

Vilage Fair 1986 — To all chairman, workers, contributors, "attendees," to Mrs. June Simeone and Mrs. Bea Coleman: Your generous contribution of time, effort, and goods to the Village Fair were wholly responsible for its resounding success. The spirit of goodwill and cooperation is the noblest reward in this endeavor. We appreciate your willing and warm response. Thank you.

Senior Center: First annual 'trim a tree' Christmas Party will take place Friday, Dec. 19, 1:30 p.m. Music will be provided by Lou and June Simeone. Senior citizens and their families are invited. For a ride call 383-9112.

In Dulci Jubilo — Eary German Christmas music by the Boston Camerata will be presented Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3 p.m. here at St. Anthony's. An ensemble of vocalists, accompanied by an instrumental consort will perform music that was composed over 400 years ago, some of which is still sung today. Tickets may be purchased at Flemings, 24 Elm St., Cohasset.

Love and the Christ Child

A two-hour Christmas worship service will be held Sun. Dec. 21, from 9 to 11 a.m. at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Gardner Street in Hingham with music by the children's, women's, and adult choirs.

The sermon: The Spirit of Christmas is Love, with guest speakers Dr. Brent Lambert of Hingham and Gary Irish of Marshfield. The program is being prepared under the direction of John Alico, member of the ward bishopric.

Glastonbury Abbey programs

The monks of Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham will offer two special programs to the public for the Christmas Season, both in the Abbey Chapel.

Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3:30 p.m., storyteller Cindy West of Scituate will narrate the Tales of Christmas for the entire family. Cindy's stories will include the traditional and well-loved, The Littlest Angel, the contemporary Polar Express by Chris Van Allsburg, and T.S. Eliot's Journey of the Magi. Organist Judy Hardy of Hingham will accompany those present in singing favorite holiday carols as part of the afternoon's entertainment.

At 4 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 4, the Feast of the Epiphany, the monks of Hingham welcome the highly acclaimed "Unicorn Singers" under the direction of Margo Euler of Hingham for a uniquely uplifting program of Christmas Music. Besides selections of Modern English Carols and elaborate settings of traditional Christmas tunes there will be opportunity for audience participation together with the Chorale.

The highlight of the concert will be Hugo Distler's The Christmas Story (Die Weihnachtgeschichte). The program will conclude with the singing of Epiphany Vespers (Evensong) as the Monks of Glastonbury join the Unicorn Singers in prayerful song with musical settings of the Psalms by Father Paul Evich, O.S.B. of the Glastonbury community.

Both programs are free of charge but a donation at the door is greatly appreciated to help cover production costs. Due to limited seating in the chapel those planning to attend are asked to call the Abbey at 749-2155.

House of Prayer

A Midweek Advent Service will be held tonight at 7:15 p.m. at House of Prayer Lutheran Church, 916 Main Street. This will be a Contemporary Communion Service.

Sunday, December 21, House of Prayer will celebrate the Fourth Sunday in Advent with the Adult Choir presenting a cantata entitled "Emmanuel" by Eugene Butler which is based on the familiar hymn, "O Come, O Come, Emmanuel." Following the service, there will be a Family Carol Sing and Wassail will be served.

House of Prayer invites the community to participate in their traditional "Living Manger" which will be held at the church on Sunday, December 21 from 5 to 7 p.m.

Weddings/Engagements

Lowrey-Barrett

Second Congregational Church in Cohasset was the setting for the marriage of Susan Lowrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter S. Lowrey of Montgmery, Ohio and John Barrett Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Barrett of Cohasset, Mass. The Reverend John Benbow officiated at the candlelight ceremony. The reception was held at the Barker Tavern, Scituate, Mass.

Maid of honor was Sarah Barrett, sister of the groom. Matron of honor was Mrs. Frank Mahoney of Hull, Mass. Junior bridesmaid was Kate Barrett, sister of the groom. The bridesmaids were Leisa Lowrey, Madison, Wis., and Kathe Lowrey, Tampa, Fla., both sisters-in-law of the bride. The ringbearer was Christopher Golden, Cohasset.

Christopher Barrett, brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Frank Mahoney, Hull, Mass., Dr. Jonathan Lowrey, Madison, Wis., brother of the bride; Michael Lowrey, Tampa, Fla., brother of the bride; and Thomas Hernan, Scituate, Mass. Honorary ushers were Robert Healey, Marshfield, Mass., and Richard Barrows, Scituate, Mass.

The bride is a 1981 graduate of Sycamore High School and graduated from Lesley College, Cambridge, Mass. in 1985. She is presently employed as a special education teacher in Marshfield. The groom graduated from Cohasset High School and attended Unity College in Maine. He is self-employed in the Lobster industry.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple is residing in Cohasset.

Clark-Taylor

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Clark, Jr. of Fayetteville, N.Y. announce the engagement of their daughter, Laurel Anne Clark to Willard Stanley Taylor, Jr. son of Mrs. and Mrs. Willard S. Taylor of Pond St., Cohasset.

Miss Clark is a graduate of Jamesville-DeWitt High School and St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y. She is employed by the Boston Co.

Mr. Taylor is a graduate of Cohasset High School and St. Lawrence University. He works in Boston for Lessard Taylor Communications Inc.

A June wedding is planned in Syracuse, N.Y.

Gina Froio

Froio-Borklund

The engagement of Gina Theresa Froio is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James V. Froio, to Arthur C. Borklund. He is the son of Mr. Arthur E. Borklund and Mrs. Alice Mersh, both of Cohasset.

Miss Froio is a graduate of Cohasset High School and attended Emmanuel College. She is currently employed by Bradlees as a distributor of fashion jewelry.

Mr. Borklund is a graduate of Cohasset High School. He is a self-employed painting contractor.

A May, 1987 wedding is planned.

Obituaries

Daniel J. Flynn

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday at St. Anthony's Church for Daniel J. Flynn, 91, who died Dec. 11 at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. Burial was in St. Paul's Cemetery in Hingham.

Mr. Flynn was the oldest member of the Boston Plumbers Union, Local 12. He had worked for several Boston plumbing companies.

He was born and educated in Somerville.

Husband of the late Julia (Manning) Flynn, he leaves a son, Joseph A. Flynn of Scituate; two daughters, Marion Oliver of Hull and Joan St. John of Cohasset; two sisters, Mary Rankin of Marshfield, and Florence Kennedy of Brookline, and four grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Gaffey Funeral Home in North Scituate Village.

Ellis Litchfield

Funeral services for Ellis Litchfield, a lifelong Scituate resident, were conducted Dec. 16 at the Sparrell-McNamara Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Burial was private.

Mr. Litchfield died Dec. 10 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

He had been a sheetmetal fabricator on the South Shore for many years. He was a member of the 60 Plus Club in Scituate.

He leaves his wife, Ethel (Smith) Litchfield; a daughter, Shirley Southard of Mattapoisett, seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

He was also the father of the late Marsh Litchfield of Scituate and the father-in-law of Everett Southard and Pauline "Polly" (Laugelle) Litchfield.

Memorial donations may be made to the Hospice of the South Shore, 400 Franklin St., P. O. Box 334, Braintree, 02184.

The news copy deadline for the Christmas issue is Friday, Dec. 19 at noon.

The ad deadline is 5 p.m.

Alternative School explained to administrators

"I've always taken extra classes," she told the committee, "and I had the credits. I joined because I wanted to concentrate on what I am interested in."

Emmons took part in the Metro Pathways program, which allowed her to take a television production class in Boston.

"I'm not taking any less serious classes," she insisted. "I'm taking classes in things I want to concentrate on.

"I needed someone to push me," she added, "to root me on; I had that help in the alternative school program."

Joe Massa agreed. "The idea of alternative school is not to get out of regular school or to take less serious classes, but to concentrate on what you want to do after graduation."

Massa hopes to be a politician and currently serves as an intern on Beacon Hill for state representative Mary Jeanette Murray.

"I'm having a great time," he said. "It's work, but it's fun."

Massa invoked his right of free petition and has written a bill which will be on the legislature's docket in 1987. The bill would require student drivers to put stickers on their cars indicating their status.

Michelle Meagher joined the program because with six majors, she wanted time to improve her skating and musical skills.

She practices skating in place of a regular physical education class, and takes piano and voice lessons.

"I think it's great," she said. "You get lots of support in class; you want to come to school because it's a great atmosphere, very supportive."

The School Committee was notably impressed with the students' report.

"It's interesting," committee member Diana Kornet told the students, "the respect you have for others, your diversity and the range of support within the program...

"Perhaps the rest of the student body could learn a lesson from this."

Emmons commented, "Most students and many teachers wonder what goes on in that mysterious room up there. They don't understand the alternative school.

"It has always had a bad reputation as a place for druggies, but I think that's going to change."

Emmons compared the alternative school to the "Breakfast Club."

While in the "club" she has attended modeling school and has learned Japanese, while taking seven regular classes.

Michele Casolaro, a student representative to the school committee said, "I didn't know what the alternative school was; it's fascinating.

"I admire you so much," she told the group, "If you could shed more light on this it would really help."

Committee member Richard Conley commented, "It's unfortunate that the program has suffered big budget crunches and the school has to limit the number of students allowed to participate in the program."

Another member, Chris Ford added, "I wonder how far we could go with this. I wish we had it when I went to Cohasset High School, because I would have been in it.

"I think many students would like to balance their schedules the way you have," he told them. "I feel sorry for the students who don't have access to the program.

"But," he added, "I can imagine the administrative problems we would have if we had 400 students in the alternative school."

Ronald Emmons endorsed the program both as an English teacher and drama director at Cohasset High School, and Jenna's father.

"A lot of people keep their talents hidden," he said. "They are afraid to appear different. I think it's nice that these students are allowed to show their talents in such a supportive atmosphere."

Fair is a great success

The Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home Christmas Fair was a day of fun and great success. The residents of Cohasset Knoll would like to thank the staff, families, and community for their many efforts and donations towards the fair that made it the success it was. Thank you, and Merry Christmas to all.

Marina plans

can be for Cohasset residents only. That makes us ineligible for state funds. But the marina, of course, will be open to all."

Other town-operated marinas, including the Scituate and Hull facilities, were partially funded by the Coastal Facilities Improvement Program under the jurisdiction of the state Coastal Zone Management.

Local commercial fishermen, whose boats will be displaced if the marina is constructed, reacted angrily against the proposal.

But the plans were created, harbor committee members explained, to generate needed mooring space within the harbor and additional revenue to the town.

In his presentation to selectmen, Fink explained that since January, the harbor committee has studied the concept of a town-operated marina. Noting there are currently 135 people on the mooring waiting list, Fink said the average wait is seven years.

A second reason for the development of a town marina, he said, would be to create a "profit center" for the town. In Scituate, and in many Massachusetts coastal communities, town marinas are significant profit-makers for the municipality, he said.

A marina would help ease the waiting list for property owners in town who would like to moor their boats in the harbor, Fink added.

The marina, according to preliminary plans created by harbor committee members, would be a concrete floatation system. It would include 72 finger slips, 26 feet in length. It would be bottom-moored into the harbor, without the use of unslightly pilings.

The committee has suggested a mooring fee at the marina of $50 per running foot. That is comparable to Hewitt's Cove Marina in Hingham which charges $60-$70 per foot, and Scituate, which last year charged $39 per foot. Single, free-floating moorings in the harbor currently cost $4 per foot, and will remain at that price. But the marina will be equipped with electricity and water, and users will be able to walk to their boat, Fink said, explaining the discrepancy in costs.

A vital link to the planned marina is the use of Lot A on the Yankee Oil Co. property. The lot would be converted to a gravel parking lot for use by the marina patrons. Under an agreement signed by Yankee Oil Co. and selectmen, that property may be used as a town parking lot, Fink said.

An attorney for Yankee Oil, Kevin Donnelly, disagreed with that interpretation. He said the "intent" of the lease agreement was not that the lot be used for public parking. He complained that construction of a marina within Cohasset Harbor would also alter the esthetics of the area.

Robert Sturdy, a harbor committee member who helped draft the Yankee Oil lease agreement, charged that Donnelly's position was a "flagrant violation" of the terms of the lease.

Opposition to the marina was also voiced by the local fishermen. Herbert Jason said the influx of commercial construction in the harbor has gradually forced the fishermen out of their original moorings. "You're pushing the fishermen out," he told the harbor committee.

He also warned selectmen that in low tide, the fishing boats will be unable to navigate through the arm of the harbor and the marina. "You're on top of ledge there," he said.

William Figueiredo of Parker Avenue argued that if the town is interested in providing more moorings for residents "why is the town spending $40,000 to fight me for the same thing he (Harbormaster Harry Ritter) wants?" he asked.

An abutter to the harbor, Phil Murray Jr., said he was opposed to the plans, saying there will be additional security and noise problems created by people staying overnight on their boats at the marina.

According to calculations made by the harbor committee, there will be a net gain of 60 additional moorings in the harbor, with the development of the marina. Although the marina will accommodate 72 boats, 12 existing moorings will be displaced by the facility, resulting in a net gain of 60 moorings.

Committee member Emmett Holt explained that in one year, the turnover rate of moorings is about 15. So in one year, the number of displaced boats will be compensated. Current mooring-holders may decide to go to the marina, thus freeing up additional space within the harbor for more boats, he said.

Selectmen made no decision on the proposal. They will schedule a public hearing on the plans.

St. Stephen's

The Property Committee-will hold its next meeting at the church on Wednesday, January 7 at 7:30 p.m.

Christmas Caroling-Sunday, Dec. 21 at 4 p.m. we will take our Christmas caroling on the road singing for parishioners and at nursing homes. Meet at the church to join in this caroling. It will all conclude at Bob and Joyce Sturdy's for hot, mulled cider and refreshment.

"Christmas Eve Around The Hearth"-Parishioners are invited to exchange Christmas greetings and cheer around the warmth of a crackling fire from 9 p.m. Christmas Eve in the Bartow Room on the first floor of the Parish House. This is a wonderful way to begin an evening which then continues with a special musical program at 10:30 p.m. in the church and the "midnight" Eucharist beginning at 11 p.m.

Rehearsal for pageant-The "Feast of Lights" is a pageant held each year in Epiphany to celebrate Jesus' appearing to the three wise men. It will take place this year Sunday, Jan. 18. The service concludes with our carrying of candles signifying that we who have witnessed the Savior's birth are now the light of the world.

The first rehearsal for this pageant is Sunday, Dec. 28, at 2 p.m. The pageant is open to all young people in the parish. It is great fun. Tell your teachers that you would like to take part in it and we will see you the 28th.

Bishop to celebrate confirmation-Bishop Porteus will be with us Sunday, Jan. 4 at the 10 a.m. service to celebrate Confirmation. Greg Wallingford, NaThelle Leddin, and Avis Sweeney expect to be confirmed on this day.

Confirmation is the reaffirmation of our baptismal vows and a strengthening of the Spirit to carry them out.

Also, on this day the Town has asked us to recognize the bicentennial of our national constitution. This is not a bad juxtaposition. Our confirmation and renewal of baptismal vows as Christian people put us in a special position to strengthen and preserve the basic values of life as they are protected in our constitution, and to challenge us as a country to grow in the freedom, peace, and justice of God's kingdom. At noon our bells with those of other churches will ring out for a full minute.

Schedule of Christmas Related Events

Christmas Caroling-Sunday, Dec. 21, at 4 p.m., Meet at the church parking lot.

Christmas Eve-5 p.m.-Holy Eucharist with Children's Procession of Figures to the Creche; 9 p.m.-"Christmas Eve around the Hearth" Christmas cheer and greetings in the Bartow Room of the Parish House; 10:30 p.m.-Special musical program, "The Story of Jesus' Birth" by Heinrich Schutz, performed by choir and organist, Stephen Lee; 11 p.m.-Holy Eucharist "Midnight Service".

Christmas Day-Holy Eucharist at 10 a.m.

Lessons and Carols-Sunday, Dec. 28, at the 10 a.m. service.

Gordon Stevenson serves-The VFM Commitee assists those persons in the Diocese who have an interest in serving the Church overseas. Some teach; others are involved in parish work. The Diocese currently has volunteers serving in Honduras, Haiti and Zimbabwe. The Committee meets once a month in Boston, and each member stays in touch with one or more volunteers (and his or her family or support group) from the beginning of the process, right through his or her mission.

Second Congregational

Grades 1 & 2-have decorated the bulletin board in Bates Hall for the winter season. We are learning that during this holiday season, while it is wonderful to receive, it is also very rewarding to give.

We ask all who can help us to bring new hats, mittens, or gloves to add to our bulletin board to dress our snowmen, trees and hands. All of these will be donated to the Quincy Crisis Center to help those in need of warm clothing. Thank you, Mrs. Martin's Grade 1 & 2 Sunday School Class.

Wrapped Gifts- Anyone who would like to help make a needy child's Christmas a bit brighter may bring a wrapped gift to church this Sunday. Please give only new toys or clothes, and label on the outside wrapping if gift is for boy, girl, or either, and give the approximate age. Please leave the gifts under the Christmas tree just outside the Sanctuary. Thank you!

A hearty thanks and congratulations-to all of you who worked on the Village Fair this year. As a fund-raising event for the town's churches, it was certainly successful.

A greater success is realized, however, in the process of all of our churches working together in an ecumenical way. This is of far greater value than any monies earned, and the challenge for the future is to find ways to make this and other ecumenical efforts work even better.

The challenge faces Cruisers

By Mike Berger
Mariner Staff

And now - Eddie and the Cruisers, Part V - "The Challenge."

What can you do for an encore when you were rated the top basketball team in the country for Division III in 1986 by two basketball magazines?

What else can you achieve when your team has earned a state championship, a league championship for the past three years, 39 straight league victories, 49 straight victories against Massachusetts competition and your only two losses in 26 games has been out of state competition?

For Cohasset High School Coach Eddie Minelli the challenge is rebuilding a whole new Cruiser crew. It is a difficult challenge because 12 years of hard earned high school basketball experience left in all-star players Tony Bogarty, James Creed and Bobby Schultz.

There will not be a legitimate "big man" anchoring the center position for the Skippers this year. The tallest CHS player will be 6-4 Michael Smith. Minelli most likely will play three forward and two guards or three guards and two forwards. The "smurfs" likely will roam the courts this year, said Minelli.

The first challenge thrown at CHS this year will be to achieve six more straight wins to break the state record of 55 consecutive victories of instate competition.

The first curve thrown at Minelli was the absence of 6-1 guard-forward Bryan Edwards Tuesday night against Abington. Edwards was suspended earlier this week for three days for fighting in school. He is expected back against Norwell Friday night.

Edwards is currently the team's overall best player, shooting for double figures last year, with a good touch for defense and rebounding. Minelli plans to play Edwards either as a guard or forward and may guard the other team's tallest forward or guard.

Minelli's other key players will be 6-4 forward Michael Smith, 6-3 senior forward Tom Larson, 5-11 junior guard David Schumaker, 5-11 junior guard David Schultz, six foot junior guard Jason Marsac, 6-2 forward center Matt Maloney and 5-9 junior guard Rich Raddick.

Despite losing the wealth of experience in Bogarty, Creed and Schultz, Minelli still believes Cohasset is still the team to beat in Division III for these reasons.

"Until a Division 3 team beats us, we are the team to beat. We have looked good in scrimmages and the make-up of our team is championship caliber. Edwards, Smith, Schumaker and Schultz were on the team last year; Marsac-Reddick were the top tennis doubles team in the state and Marsac and Schultz were on the Cohasset team which reached the finals in state soccer.

"These guys have learned how to win," said Minelli.

Minelli believes the success of the team this year will lie with the hopes of Maloney, Smith and Larson. Both Maloney and Smith will be looked upon for rebounding and defense while Larson will be counted on for his shooting touch (almost double figures last year), rebounding and court smarts.

Three years ago Minelli lamented when center-forward David Barcomb graduated and he was sad when Phil Bernstein and David MacDonald went on to college. But during the Minelli five-year reign, players have surfaced out of nowhere to earn the wins.

But the road back to championship city will have some pitfalls. Everyone is "loaded for bear" this year waiting to beat Cohasset. And this includes annual rivals, Holbrook, Medfield and the newest strength on the South Shore is neighboring Hull.

"If I could only go to one basketball game this year it would be the Cohasset-Hull game. Hull is loaded this year with 6-5 players, great guards and quickness. I think we match up well right now with Medfield and Holbrook but it's Hull I'm worried about," said Minelli.

Cohasset will play 20 games this season, 16 in the South Shore League, two games in the Christmas Tournament (against Newton North and South and Charlestown High) and two more in the Hall of Fame Tournament against Weymouth North and South.

"It would be easy to repeat playing all weak teams. To be the best, you have to play the best," said Minelli.

There are two main questions to be decided about the 1987 squad.

Coach Eddie

Primarily, can the team play a total team defense. Minelli says there is no question the Cruisers will score a lot of points. But can they contain the opponent's highest scorer.

Last year James Creed played "centerfield" and blocked any shot coming his way. This year, who will fill the role?

How will the Cohasset Community react to this new team? "I think there will certainly be a dropoff in quality but the results will pleasantly surprise you. This team is anxious to prove their own legacy. They are hungry to win," said Minelli.

South Shore Art Center building drive forges ahead

The South Shore Art Center has formed a Capital Campaign Corporate Gifts Committee and the kickoff of business solicitations for the center's $1 million building drive.

Warren B. Noble of Norwell and Charles A. Pearce of Hingham will serve as Chairman and Vice Chairman, respectively.

Noble feels the Art Center's expansion project is one that deserves enthusiastic support from the business community.

"The Art Center is a dynamic member of our South Shore Community, bringing a lion's share of attention to our region," Noble says.

Noble is president of Noble's Camera Shops in Cohasset and Hingham, and a microfilm division and service bureau in Weymouth. He is past President of the Hingham Rotary Club, and presently serves as First Vice President of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Quincy Savings Bank and its holding company, Excel Corp., Pearce is involved in many community activities. He is Treasurer of the Board of Quincy Neighborhood Housing and a board member of the South Shore Conservatory.

Noble and Pearce cite the Art Center's enviable growth record and level of success over the past 31 years. The number of course and program participants has tripled in the past few years.

That growth, however, has put serious demands on the Center's physical plant and led to the launching of a capital campaign for a new, two-story, 8,000 square foot facility on a site near the Center's present location in Cohasset.

Ground was broken Nov. 2 and the new Art Center, presently under construction, is due to be completed in the spring of 1987.

The Capital Campaign Drive has raised nearly $600,000 of the needed $950,000 for the project.

Pilgrim nuclear emergency drill was only a test

It was only a drill . . .

The emergency at Pilgrim Station began at 5:26 a.m., Dec. 10, when a contract employee at the plant sustained a head injury. He was transported to Jordan Hospital for treatment of the injury and decontamination.

Plant officials declared an unusual event had occurred. That is the lowest of four emergency categories.

The scenario continued, and at 5:45 a.m., the emergency was escalated one level to an alert because of high radiation readings in the reactor coolant. The cause of the high readings was not immediately determined.

By 7:15 a.m., the plant, which had been operating at full power, had reduced power to 65 percent. The worker had been decontaminated and admitted to the hospital.

At 8:11 a.m., the emergency was upgraded to the third highest of the four categories, a site emergency. It occurred when the reactor was manually shutdown.

At 8:45 a.m., the site emergency still in effect, power was reduced to zero. Offsite radiation readings were normal, and Nuclear Regulatory Commission authorities were on-site.

A general emergency was declared at 9:33 a.m. when a break occurred in a steam line in an emergency system that had injected water into the reactor. The break resulted in a rapid increase in radiation readings.

At 9:56 a.m., evacuation of residents within 10 miles of the southwest area of the plant was recommended. An area out to five miles completely around the plant was also evacuated. Sheltering took place in the remaining 10 mile area around the plant.

Boston Edison officials identified the leak in the reactor coolant system at 11 a.m. A three-man team entered the reactor building to attempt to manually close a valve to isolate the reactor and stop the leak.

Substantial increases in releases from the plant have been measured near the reactor and one mile away from the plant.

The leak was isolated and contained at noon.

At that time, officials said radiation levels were declining to near normal levels at the plant's main release point.

The evacuation was discontinued and residents were allowed to return home.

Deer Hill School students view Boston University

The idea took form during a discussion by some future businessmen - sixth grade students at the Deer Hill School.

They were talking about their current project, Deals on Wheels. That is a portable bookstore and school supply outlet completely owned and operated by the participating students. They wondered how other bookstore owners set up their stores, displayed products, and sold merchandise.

"Mark Mecurio mentioned that his father supervised the bookstore at Boston University," teacher Dorothy Wondolowski said, "and so the students decided it would be nice to see how that business was run.

"The students," she explained, "wrote to the university and asked if we could visit the store. They explained what they wanted to see, and the reason they wanted to see it."

School officials replied, and two weeks ago the students in the sixth grade Talent Pool traveled to Boston University. There, they were given a grand, hands-on tour of the complex, which even included a personal talk with university president John Silber.

"I can't tell you how wonderful this trip was," Wondolowski said. "The students had so many hands-on experiences throughout the day. The university planned every moment for us, and it was wonderful. The itinerary was extraordinary. We saw the school of hotel management where each student was given an individual station to perform tasks, we went into the psychology department and to the graphic arts department."

The university even sent a bus for the students for the hour-long trip to the university on Commonwealth Avenue. "They made us feel like celebrities," Wondolowski said. "And every professor we met that day was so nice to us. They are very at ease with this age group. They really enjoyed having the

Politicus

by David A. Mittell, Jr.

The holiday riches of Carl Mittell

Since the publisher of twelve of the papers in which Politicus runs does not believe that politics and Christmas mix (it is one of the few things he is right about), this is the last time I will annoy most of you until 1987.

That being the case, and in my own way of observing the holy season at hand, I would like to share a letter that I found both touching and teaching.

The Mittells recently came across the last letter my great grandfather Carl Mittell sent to his eldest son Herman. Carl Mittell had been born in Germany. He was the son of the noted 1848 liberal and anti-monarchist August Mittell. An artist and musician, Carl came to the United States in 1870 rather than fight for the Kaiser in the war against France.

He settled in Jamaica Plain where he worked for the rest of his life in the Pfaff Brewery, which was one of 19 breweries along Stoney Brook in Jamaica Plain and Roxbury. Ill with cancer in 1898, he summoned his strength for the last in a series of letters to his son, who had gone to work in New Jersey, on the occasion of Herman's twentieth birthday. The next document in our possession is Carl's death certificate.

Both in the advice he gives and the loving man he reveals in this letter, Carl Mittell reflects the person I would like to be and the values that I aspire to impart in my own writing. Moreover, I believe that Carl Mittell's impeccable signature could have been that of millions of our great grandparents. In trying to live right and to bring their children up right they built America right.

My father just walked by grumbling that Ceccarelli in Plymouth, where we have taken our clothes to be pressed for 40 years, no longer has charge accounts. He explains that too many people who live in $400,000 homes do not pay their cleaning bills on time. As a generation that has been given riches we have, I think, much to gain in studying the methods of our great grandparents. For they had riches too . . . and it is the riches of Carl Mittell that I wish for you this holy season.

My dear Herman

I congratulate you to your birthday and I wish you good health and a long life. You are now 20 years old and from this time out you will have to meet all sorts of trials in life. You have been a good boy and I expect you will be a good man. ___ Always try to do right, beware of bad influences and temptations, continue to be a good son and brother and be attentive and willing in business, so that your employers will like and respect you, dont ever go one inch from the straight road of honesty and integrity, then everybody will respect you and you will become a valuable member of human society; a good citizen of your country and the pride and comfort of your parents, relatives and friends.

Enclosed I send you an order for $10.00 and I hope it will help you towards getting the necessary things for cold weather. In case you should run short and you need something that will go above your financial possibilities, just let me know and I will try to assist you. Of course I want you to be careful and saving with what you get, you must be sensible while you are young and it will be easier for you to get up and ahead in life later on.

Mamma and Emma and Carl have written to you and sent you a little birthday present. We all wish you could be here and spend this day with us. The time will pass along quick and soon it will be Christmas and we will have you in our midst again for a while.

Tell my best regards to Mr. Schuermann and I know I should have written to him after his visit here, but I have not been able of late to write any letters and I hope he will excuse me.

Sunday at Dinner at 1 o'clock we will take a drink to your health and you may think of us and respond wherever you are.

Hoping to hear from you soon

I am your loving father

Hanukkah commemorates Jewish freedom

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner Staff

In the second century BCE, Palestine was ruled by Antiochus, who decreed that the Jewish temple in Jerusalem would be taken over by the Syrians.

The Syrians ransacked the temple, set up their idols, and would not allow the Jews to practice their religion.

A Jewish priest named Mattathias spoke out against Antiochus' decrees. His sons lead a revolt which lasted three years. One son, Judah Maccabee, finally defeated the Syrians and the Jews regained their temple.

But they discovered that the sacrimental oil stored inside had been desecrated, and only oil enough for one day remained untainted. A messenger was dispatched to obtain more, but, the oil miraculously burned for eight days, until the messenger returned.

Hence, Chanukah is observed for eight days, and is symbolized by eight candles on a menorah. Chanukah, which means "rededication," is the celebration of the Jews' restoration of their temple.

Rabbi Stephen Karol of Congregation Sha-aray Shalom in Hingham said Chanukah is a holiday celebrating religious freedom, and the right of people to live together regardless of their differences.

"The Maccabees fought for the right to be different," he said.

The holiday sentiment of "peace on earth, good will to all" is universal, he said.

Objectively, Chanukah is a minor holiday in the Jewish year, he adds. Others--Passover, Yom Kippur, Rosh Hashonah--are much more important. Chanukah, occurring as it does near Christmas, has gained more importance, due to the Americanization and commercialization of Christmas.

Karol is very much in favor of more education about Chanukah, believing that problems stem from ignorance. Education results in greater respect among people of different backgrounds and beliefs, he said.

He is very pleased with the consideration and sensitivity demonstrated by the community in Hingham, noting the school system is responsive to educating the children about the different cultural aspects of Jewish holidays. He especially noted a display at the Plymouth River School, showing different holidays around the world, not just Jewish celebrations.

Karol said it is difficult for the Jewish children at this time of year, when they see so many of their friends caught up in the festivities that accompany the Christian holiday.

At the temple school, he said he tries to teach the children that it is "okay to be different," but there should be no stigma attached to the difference. He also tells them that one reason to learn about their religion and culture is to be able to explain it to anyone who asks, and therefore be able to spread the knowledge that can create more understanding.

He adds, though, there seems to be more awareness of the Jewish celebration, pointing to television spots that appear throughout Chanukah, with holiday wishes to the Jews in the viewing audience.

Latkes (potato pancakes) are traditional Chanukah fare, served with sour cream or apple sauce. During the three years the Maccabees fought to regain the temple, they lived in the hills relying heavily on potatoes in their diet, Karol explained.

He added that in Israel, doughnuts are very popular for Chanukah, since they are fried in oil, which is symbolic of the oil that burned for eight days.

This year, a family will begin its celebration of Chanukah at sunset on December 26, lighting the first candle on the menorah. This is also the beginning of the sabbath, so the sabbath candles will also be lighted at that time.

Dinner will be served, gifts exchanged, Karol said. The family may sing traditional songs and play games with the dreidel (a four-sided top).

Approximately 220 families belong to Congregation Sha-aray Shalom (which means "Gates of Peace"), with about half that number residing in Hingham. The balance come from 20 surrounding towns, Karol said.

A Stone's Throw — by Paul Steven Stone

Hey, feeling a little bored tonight? Or maybe you're not in the mood to hear how your spouse spent the day. Well, I know what you can do. Just turn on the tube, sit back on the La-Z-Boy, tell the kids to stop fighting and turn your attention to the man on the screen.

"It's time to play AMERICAN MADNESS!"

Sure, this is what you need: applause and laughter filling the room, contestants squealing in delight. And you only have to sit there quietly as Monte Hall starts the show rolling.

"Contestant Number One," he says, addressing an attractive young housewife from Akron, Ohio, "your first question is worth $3500. Answer correctly and you'll choose between two fabulous prizes: a three week trip to Hawaii for you and your family or a year's worth of food and medical supplies for a drought-stricken Nigerian Bantu tribe."

Somehow all this talk about prizes makes you think about your Christmas gift list, so you hardly notice the photos that flash on the screen: first the group shot of the African tribe, about 50 in all, then a photo of the Waikiki Hilton as seen through a grove of palm trees.

Before you can shake free from your reverie, Contestant Number One correctly answers her question and chooses the Hawaiian dream trip, joking to Monte that she'd always wanted to wear a grass skirt.

That girl's got a good sense of humor, you tell yourself. Not like some other people you could name. That starts you thinking about your boss, and if you were looking at yourself you'd notice wrinkles appearing on your forehead and the muscles around your mouth tensing up. Monte's carnival barker voice returns your roving mind to the images on the screen.

Contestant Number Two," he calls. "Your first question is worth five thousand dollars. Guess correctly and you get to choose between a new 1987 Yugo sedan or securing the release of Juan Diego, a political prisoner in Chile."

Contestant Number Two, a robotics repair technician from Derry New Hampshire, reminds you of your older brother — it's something in the way he leans his head — and you find yourself getting excited as the prize pictures flash across the screen. You even murmur a cheer when he correctly answers his question. But then, when he hesitates in selecting his prize, you experience a surprising level of irritation that relates more to your feelings about your brother than Contestant Number Two.

"Can I see the car again?" Contestant Number Two requests.

Instantly, the 1987 Yugo sedan fills the screen.

"And the political prisoner?"

As Juan Diego's image appears, you rise from your chair. You have it in mind to head for the kitchen, but you pause at the threshhold to hear Contestant Number Two choose his prize.

"I'm sorry," he says. "I thought it was someone I knew, but it isn't. I'll take the car."

You're already in the kitchen by the time Monte sums up the score and leads into the commercials, saying, "We'll be right back to see which of our contestants gets to choose between a fabulous antique Persian rug or temporary housing for five of America's unfortunate homeless families. But first, these important announcements."

Staring into the refrigerator, you realize you're still bored. Or maybe you're just hungry. In either case, you make yourself a sandwich and take it back to the TV room. You return just in time to see Contestant Number One making a joyous spectacle of herself.

As it turns out, she had just won herself a fabulous antique Persian rug.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

The perfectly perfect Christmas tree

"Well?" the Dragon asked,"Did you get it? Where's our perfectly perfect Christmas tree?"

Breida cleared her throat and Skip rubbed his foot against the rug.

"We ran into a few problems," Pat began tentatively. "Nothing that can't be overcome," he added hastily.

"I don't believe this," I said. "Last year you bought a prize winning tree, decorated it perfectly, and then Pat dropped it when he was moving it because Dad thought it was too close to the fireplace.

"So you vowed that this year you would have a tree surpassing all others. After all, our kids' families are getting bigger, and this January Skip will be going into the service. Who knows whether this may be the last Christmas we're all together? You said you wanted everything to be absolutely perfect this year, starting with the tree.

You said you didn't care how much it cost, you were going to get one that would rival the tree outside the White House in symmetry, size and beauty. You said you might even get Tip O'Neill to switch the lights on."

"Well," Breida began, "it didn't work out quite the way we envisioned. It seems by the time we went looking for a tree all the perfectly perfect ones were already sold."

"So what happened?" Larry asked. "Did you settle for one that was less than perfectly perfect?"

"Actually," Skip explained, "the less than perfectly perfect ones were gone, too. When you come right down to it, we settled for what you might call a lame excuse for a Christmas tree."

"But," Breida interjected, "once we get it decorated, you'll never notice. A bulb here, some ornaments there, a little tinsel in between—it'll look great."

Breida, Skip and Pat stepped aside to reveal their purchase.

In all fairness, it was a tree. And every branch had at least a few pine needles on it. Some of the branches were in unusual places, however, and as we watched they gave a collective little sigh, and the remaining needles floated silently to the rug.

Larry looked awed.

"Charlie Brown lives," he breathed.

"It's not that bad," Breida insisted. "If Dad drills a few holes in the trunk, we can move the branches around a little. And with enough ornaments and icicles, who needs needles."

I shrugged. "Are these the same children who refused to consider an artifical tree because they like the way the needles smell? Even though I made a strong plea for a fake tree because I get very embarrassed when someone who visits us in August drops something behind a couch cushion, reaches to retrieve it and comes up with a fist full of Christmas tree needles?"

"I would suggest," the Dragon interjected, "that I drill holes where Breida tells me and we give them every opportunity to create a thing of splendor. You and I can go shopping, and the kids can speak not a word, but get straight to their work."

"O.K.," I agreed. "You drill, I'll find the decorations, and we'll both shop. As the poem says, Christmas comes, but once a year is enough."

Breida greeted us when we returned a few hours later.

"Don't expect too much," she warned. "It looked better a little while ago, but the white kitten climbed up and knocked the whole thing over, and most of the ornaments got broken."

It was clear that they'd made a valiant effort. A naked pine tree has a certain rakish style, and the unbreakable ornaments had been clustered to disguise the bare spots that developed when they turned the tree in an effort to find the best side and broke a few branches. Drawings and decorations that the kids had made when they were in kindergarten were prominently displayed, and colored lights softly illuminated a grandchild who had crawled under the tree and fallen asleep clutching an angel that had never made it to the top.

"What do you think?" I asked the Dragon.

He cleared his throat. "I remember when Pat fell asleep under the tree. Just like that. And those ornaments—every one of them made some Christmas special."

He reached for my hand. "You know, I bet they didn't even have a tree in that stable. But they had the same thing we have. A family that's together."

I nodded and choked back a tear. "It's the most perfectly perfect tree I've ever seen in my life," I agreed.

A changed 'Christmas Carol' at Nickerson

By Judith Montminy
Special to the Mariner

Those of you who saw "A Christmas Carol" at Nickerson Theatre last year and expect to see the same production again will be disappointed.

For those who never saw the 1985 version, you can enjoy holiday singing with the cast and marvel at the special effects as the ghosts of Christmasses Past, Present and Future haunt Scrooge and teach him to change his mean, uncharitable ways.

A seven-year-old who saw both productions said this year's version is far less frightening than last year's. That may be an important consideration if you are taking young children to the theatre.

But in transforming "A Christmas Carol" and the streets of London of Dickens' world into a friendlier, and cleaner, place, a good deal of the theatrical charm and depth of last year's production has been lost.

Under Nora Hussey's direction last year, the texture, seediness and menace of Victorian London was captured. Ensemble recitations brought to mind the famed Royal Shakespeare Company's "Nicholas Nickleby."

Although the cast numbered the same, the streets seemed more crowded last year. The setting was distinct. Scrooge's world was not a pretty place. But that was in 1985.

This year's director, Grey Cattell Johnson, seems to advance the events of the play with much greater speed. He's had set designer Jace Homes supply the dressings needed to support the action. But they do little to suggest the time or place of the story. Don Soule's set last year filled the London streets with garbage and atmospheric touches. Holmes' set is spic and span clean.

Many of the actors have returned for repeat performances. John Adair, Robert Bouffier, Jessica DelGizzi, Lisa Foley, Peter Haydu, and Ingrid Sonnichsen lend an air of familiarity with the material, even if an ensemble approach is not emphasized.

One outstanding addition is Niels Miller as Scrooge. Miller has become a regular with the Nickerson Theatre, as an actor and a director, and his talents are welcomed. His Scrooge is both comic and pathetic. His "Bah, humbugs" remind the audience of Scrooge's famed expression. They seem to be natural comments, not artificial interjections.

Director Johnson moves his actors around with ease and makes use of them to change the props and scenery. The show opens with the cast mingling with the audience, exchanging chit chat about getting ready for Christmas. They arrive on stage, singing Christmas carols.

Once a novel approach, the technique of bringing the cast through the audience has become trite. It's clear Johnson is striving to create a friendly mood. But when he repeats the technique at the beginning of Act II and again later in the show, the novelty is gone. Enough is enough.

Other elements, such as the stage smoke, are overdone as well. The appearance of Scrooge's dead partner Jacob Marley and the various ghosts bring wafts of powder into the audience. One explosion startled the crowd, but for the most part, the special effects were tame. Again, the "scariness" was diluted, perhaps in an effort to attract more young persons to the theatre.

Arnold Nickerson has arranged special school performances for students from Marshfield and Hanover in an effort to give children a live theatre experience.

As with Boston's "Nutcracker," where some productions are better than others, the tradition of going to the Nickerson Theatre for "A Christmas Carol" may come to outweigh any flaws of a particular year's show.

"A Christmas Carol" plays through Sunday, Dec. 21 at the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell.

Some holiday ideas to give 'Junior' as a teacher's gift

It's time for holiday fun, especially in the kitchen. Cooking goodies is part of the merriment and best of all, they can be a part of the Christmas spirit of giving. There'll no doubt be people stopping by and you, being the perfect little hostess, will be prepared to serve them a delectable tidbit or two. Now, when the air is filled with the bustle of Christmas preparations, it's time to scoot over to a friend's house with a gift package of home made cookies tied up with gay red ribbons.

Sending junior off to school with a gift for teacher is a nice holiday gesture, too and don't let the holidays slip by without a special visit to someone in a nursing home. Here is a recipe for a chocolate treat that costs a small fortune in a nearby gourmet shop, but is easy to make in your very own kitchen.

CHC COLATE TURTLES

3/4 pound vanilla caramels
1 T butter
2 T water, divided
1 pkg., 6 oz. semi-sweet chocolate morsels
3 T light corn syrup
Confectioners sugar & pecan halves

Melt caramels, butter and 1 tablespoon of the water over boiling water. Keep warm. Melt semi-sweet chocolate, corn syrup and ramining 1 tablespoon water over hot water. Remove from water. Sift sugar on foil-lined baking sheet. Drop caramel mixture onto sheet by teaspoonfuls. Press 4 pecan halves flat side down on each caramel round and spoon chocolate mixture on top of caramels. Chill 'til firm.

Dust off the punch bowl, hang up the wreath and mistletoe and soon the entire household will be full of that magical Christmas spirit. Here are suggestions for a festive dinner table: stick holiday seals on your plain glasses (they wash right off).

A centerpiece needn't be expensive and elaborate; just lay a green wreath flat in the center of the table and trim with a red bow, shiny small balls, pine cones or red berries. Lay a mirror on the table, edge with greens and stand several red apples on glass with a tall white candle stuck in a hole in each. A bowl of greens from your yard trimmed with shiny balls and small red bows tied to the branches looks well in the center of the table. Just to carry out the traditional color theme of red, why not a dessert such as this one suggested by Betsey May, called simply:

CRANBERRY PIE

2 c. cranberries, chopped
1/2 c. raisins, chopped
1 large apple, chopped
1 scant c. sugar
1 tsp. vanilla

Combine berries, raisins, apple, sugar and vanilla. Spoon into unbaked pie shell and top with upper crust. Bake at 450 for 10 min. Reduce oven to 350 and bake 45 to 50 min., or until top crust is nicely browned.

Even the smallest of the small fry can join in the fun of making Christmas cookies. They always appear as if by magic when it comes time to lick the bowl, but they can also be very helpful with the little time-consuming jobs. For instance: shelling and chopping nuts or fruit, mixing, rolling and cutting cookies, as well as decorating; to say nothing of packing and prettifying packages of cookies intended for others. A gingerbread man is a pretty wonderful thing that they can decorate with raisins for eyes, nose and mouth and a wonderful snack to leave for Santa on Christmas Eve.

GINGERBREAD MEN

1/3 c. shortening
1 c. brown sugar, firmly packed
1 1/2 c. dark molasses
1/2 c. cold water
7 c. sifted flour
1 tsp. ea. salt, ginger, cinnamon, cloves, allspice
2 tsp. soda dissolved in
3 T cold water

Mix first three ingredients. Stir in water. Add sifted flour, salt and spices. Add dissolved soda. Chill thoroughly and roll out 1/2" thick on floured board. Cut with gingerbread man cutter, or use a greased cardboard pattern. Transfer to greased cookie sheet. Press raisins into dough for face. Bake in 350 oven for 15 to 18 min. Cool before removing. Will keep indefinitely, (if well hidden). Makes about 12 big men.

May the spirit of Christmas which transforms each home into a haven of holiday joy reign in your kitchen throughout the year to come. Merry Christmas to you all "From the Kitchen."

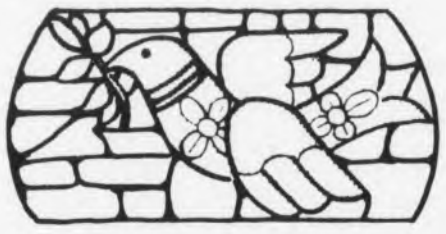
kids there."

The highlight of the day was a personal conversation with President Silber. The students sat down with the noted educator and asked him questions about his work as the school's top official.

"They asked him really intelligent questions. One student wanted to know who nominated him for his position. Another asked if he liked his job. When someone asked who really owns the university, Dr. Silber explained all about the board of directors," Wondolowski said. "One student asked how he improved the university, and he replied that a fine faculty is the key. We were with him about 25 minutes, and it was wonderful."

The college students they met that day were polite and helpful to the young visitors. They returned to Cohasset about 4 p.m., having boarded their bus at 8 that morning. "They really kept us moving all day. But even though we were tired and had learned so much, we had a hard time pulling the kids out to go back home," she noted.



These sixth graders from the Deer Hill School recently got a day-long tour of Boston University including a cookie decorating demonstration at the University's Hotel and Food Management School.

Maggie Warshaw makes 314 pies look easy

By Judy Enright
Mariner Staff

Most of us spent the last few days before Thanksgiving debating the merits of stuffing recipes or possibly baking a pie or two. That same time span for Maggie Warshaw, owner of Maggie's Corner in Norwell Center, meant preparing and baking a total of 314 applie, mince, pumpkin and pecan pies in two days.

Christmas promises to be just as busy for her baking business but there won't be the same demand for pies. "For some reason, people in New England don't buy pies at Christmas," she says. She added that she will probably bake about 30 pies, all of which are pre-ordered. She doesn't take too many pie orders at Christmas, she said, so she has more time to spend with her family.

Taking a break from pie-making will let Maggie do things she thinks are fun. "I can make peanut brittle and Christmas cookies and all the things I don't have time to do the rest of the year." The novelty items are in demand as teachers' gifts or small presents for friends or neighbors.

Maggie learned to cook "in self defense," she says, when she was growing up in Hingham. She said her mother "couldn't cook anything" so she and her sister, Flo Ward, who still lives in Hingham, started cooking at an early age.

Both Maggie and her sister stuck with that early training. Flo works in the Hingham school system and caters for fun in her free time. Last year, she did the Norwell Town Hall Christmas party and recently the opening of a new store, "The Back Door," in Norwell Center.

Maggie still uses a lot of the recipes she learned when she was a teenager from a friend, Evelyn Olsen. Evelyn was bedridden with heart disease at the time. "I would help her into the kitchen and we'd cook," Maggie said. "She gave me a lot of recipes I still use every day."

Maggie also uses a recipe for chocolate cake that she once clipped from The Boston Globe. When she was married, she said, she had a recipe for sour cream chocolate cake that was good but not great. The Globe's recipe was called "Never-Fail Chocolate Cake" and is mixed by hand. "It's terrific," Maggie says.

Her success, she adds, is because she sticks to old favorite recipes and uses no preservatives. "I just use whole, natural ingredients. I think that's what people are looking for and why we've been so successful. They're looking for all the old standbys like chocolate cake and chocolate chip cookies. They want the kinds of things Grandma used to make...things that taste good. Things don't have to be fancy, the just have to taste good."

While Maggie has tried other occupations over the years, she always returns to cooking. She worked as a switchboard operator, a nursery school teacher and in a nursing home, "but I always came back to cooking. It seems to come naturally to me. It's not a big effort and I love it."

Maggie works in a compact, whitewashed kitchen in Norwell Center in the cellar of the Quik Pik building. She calls the shop "Maggie's Corner," and reminisces that her first foray into commercial baking had the same name.

When her father died, Maggie said, she needed a job. She stopped at a produce market, run by a friend from school, and he asked if she knew anyone

'Maggie's Corner': A special pie baking place

who cooked because he needed someone to make home-baked goods. "I do," she said. That was the beginning. Maggie's products were displayed in a corner of the market with a sign hung over them that said "Maggie's Corner."

She said that when she found her commercial location in Norwell Center, it too was in a corner. "It's kind of funny how it worked out. When I needed a name, 'Maggie's Corner' just seemed to fit."

When she decided to move the business from home to a commercial location about 2½ years ago, she said friends discouraged her about the cellar in Norwell Center. "They said I'd be lonely and that I wouldn't see people. They said people would never stop by to see me. But, they were wrong. Someone's always popping in, so I don't feel at all isolated down here."

Maggie's most popular items, she says, are cranberry coffee cake, chocolate chip cookies and lemon bread. She said she makes and sells thousands of cookies every year. "Cookies are very popular because they're something that mothers just don't have time to do anymore." Maggie can do 20 dozen cookies at a time in her two commercial convection ovens.

She markets her products primarily at Farmer's Pride Market in Cohasset, The Deli on Herring Brook Hill and the Copper Corner Exchange in Norwell Center. She also started recently selling to Iannone's in Scituate. Her customers are from all over the South Shore, she said, and recounted that several Braintree residents drive to the Copper Corner Exchange for her baked goods.

When Maggie started baking commercially at her home in Norwell, the town's health board told her she would need a license and would be better off to find a commercial location. She said the town's health agent, Lester Hiltz of Cohasset, "was most helpful. He's really been very good," about giving her advice and helping her get established.

She added that her husband, Ted, a mechanic for Brodie, is extremely supportive and helps out whenever he can by peeling apples or doing other chores. "He's the one who convinced me that I should do this," Maggie said. "One day he said, 'Look, you're 42 years old. Get in the car.' We drove all over looking for a commercial piece of property for me to rent."

While it wasn't easy to get started, Maggie says that her success has been an inspiration to others. "They saw me start small. Other people can see what can be done without going into a lot of debt." Working for herself and making a success of her business (which has nearly doubled in two years) has given her a lot of self confidence, she said.

But starting a baking business was not without its personal drawbacks. She works seven days a week for eight hours a day almost year round although winter is slightly slower. Because the job was so hectic at first and she didn't take time to eat properly, she gained 22 pounds. She signed up at Weight Watchers, took the weight off and has maintained her slim figure. She now takes the time to sit down and eat a salad for lunch rather than munching on cookies.

Maggie's right hand in her kitchen is Bob Litchfield, 75, of Norwell who refers to himself as retired. Maggie says he peels apples, makes deliveries, shops and picks up mail..."all the things I'm too busy to do." Litch, as Maggie calls her co-worker, describes his job with a chuckle. "This is a perfect retired person's job," he said. "It's work that probably should run about an hour or two a day but right now it's running six to 10 hours a day, seven days a week. There's so much to be done."

"I think people make a big mistake not hiring retired people," Maggie adds. "They have so much experience and they're so reliable. They have so much to offer." Bob 's wife, Jan, who many area residents know for her years of work with Norwell South Shore Natural Science Center, runs her own shop, the Copper Corner Exchange, where Maggie's products are sold.

When Litch leaves on another errand, Maggie confides that he "has such a wonderful attitude. He loves living. He makes me see the positive side of things."

One project to which Maggie is very committed is MainSpring House in Brockton. She bakes desserts for the home twice a month and any other chance she has. "I enjoy doing that," she says. "I think poor people deserve the best. I think maybe they appreciate it more because they are homeless and they don't get that kind of thing." She also works with her church, United Church of Christ in Norwell, to make pies for "Pie Sunday," when pies are sold to raise money.

Maggie commented that she doesn't ever want to be "like so many others I see around me who have let success go to their heads. They don't remember where they came from. I'm happy to share what I know and what I've learned by being in business."

Maggie loves her work. "I'm probably happier than I've ever been in my whole life. I never thought in my wildest dreams that I'd achieve what I have and that this would be mine," she said looking around the spotless kitchen. "It's a nice feeling.

(Maggie Warshaw of "Maggie's Corner," is well-known to Cohasset palates. Her pastries are popular fare at the Farmer's Pride Market in Cohasset. Ed.)

We are serious cash buyers of gold, silver & platinum; both old & new diamonds, estate & antique jewelry, sterling flatware, gold filled items, industrial precious metals, dental gold, old & rare coins, tokens & medals, postcards & collectables. Our evaluation & gold & silver assay tests are free & at no obligation while you wait. We will meet or beat any legitimate offer to buy published locally, nationally, or internationally. Many local dealers claim to be the "highest buyers" so shop around & see us last. We may be a little further away but the few extra miles are worth the effort. We also exchange all denominations of foreign currency & coin on the spot. Banks send their customers to us for just that purpose. We have the most competitive prices on new jewelry in New England & also do expert jewelry repair & appraisals.

Get All You Need To Succeed

Why are so many people switching to careers in Burger King® Management? We ask them, and here are some of the reasons they gave us...

SALARIES: "Burger King® management salaries reflect their rising sales... they're among the best in the industry."

BENEFITS: "It's not just the benefits package that's good, it's the intangible benefits, like company support."

PEOPLE: "Burger King is atypical in the fast food industry—they really care about their Managers."

Maybe you should consider switching. A Burger King Franchise needs dynamic, promotable Restaurant Managers now especially, because of new store openings, record sales and an expansion plan that has made the fast food industry stand up and take notice.

In the Kingston, Pembroke, Rockland areas.
These are Burger King Towns!

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

The mythic image of winter

The changing of the seasons has long been personified through the death and resurrection of various deities.

The Greek goddess Demeter mourned her daughter Persephone's capture by Pluto, lord of the Dead. When Persephone went to the underworld, the devastation of winter came to Earth.

Zeus commanded Pluto to return his captured damsel, and the land began to flower again.

This story is like those of Aphrodite and Adonis in Syria, Cybele and Attis in Phrygia, and Isis and Osiris in Egypt.

The birth, death and resurrection of Christ is supposed to be something more than another version of these myths, yet its similarity to them is striking.

Christianity's mythical component does not detract from it. Rather it shows how universal are the themes it exemplifies, and how dependent all people are upon the revolutions of our planet.

While most celebrations of the winter solstice show winter as a solemn, dying time to be endured, there is one mythical character, of recent origin, that represents the joys and magical possibilities of winter: Frosty the Snowman.

While Frosty is not a god, he is indeed a mythic figure, representing the fun one can have while everyone else is being solemn, waiting for spring's salvation or mourning the passing of last summer.

As such he is a Dionysian figure, that is, a bringer of freedom and ecstatic joy, named after the god of wine, sometimes called Bacchus.

Frosty's magic tricks recall Merlin, or Elijah. His dying with the coming of spring is the opposite of the principal sun gods, who are reborn in the spring.

Frosty could even be called a Satanic figure, an anti-Christ, if you're into that sort of thing. He is a creation of humans, he beguiles our children and rules when the benevolent gods of the harvest are dead.

But children do love him. I know. I have been Frosty.

For about four years our church has invited Frosty to its Christmas fair. He waves at passers-by, encouraging them to visit. He allows his picture to be taken.

The most Satanic thing he does is give away candy canes.

I'm not always Frosty, but sometimes I am. I recommend it.

It helps to dress warmly under the white plush costume. One sees through the black mesh of the two coal eyes with difficulty. It is impossible to look down at all. For a magician, Frosty is pretty vulnerable.

But he is magical. With a wave of a hand he transforms adults from dour drivers into smiling human beings. And his effect on children is mesmerizing.

He is an avatar, a sort of John the Baptist for Santa Claus. He's not nearly as overwhelming to children as Santa, and children are much more receptive to playing with him.

They hug Frosty and take his hand. Inside it makes me feel like a big Snoopy doll or Teddy bear.

Santa never gets this kind of attention. He's too powerful, too judgmental.

A mother said of her son, "Look, he loves Frosty. And he's scared to death of Santa."

The magic doesn't always work. Some drive by without a wave or even a nod. But what is the percentage of people who do wave to Frosty from their cars? Care to guess?

I'd say over ninety-five percent. Very few resist. This proves that we have more joy inside us than we allow each other to see. Frosty sees.

Folks would think I was weird if I stood in front of the church and waved at them dressed as an ordinary guy.

But dress up as a snowman and the act moves beyond weird, into the realm of myth.

I have developed a repertoire of Frosty gestures. Not only do I wave, but sometimes, especially at large American cars, I salute, or bow.

To vans and funky cars I dance or play air guitar. To sports cars or pretty girls I stick out my thumb. No one has ever offered me a ride, but a dump truck blew its diesel horn once and I thought that was neat.

I guess you have to be a kid or a skier to mourn the passing of snow, which the sad relics of Frosty's hat, carrot and coals symbolizes. Fortunately I don't have to act out Frosty's death scene. He just fades away.

The myth of Frosty has endured because it taps into the great mystery of the earth and its seasons, just as Demeter, Persephone and the rest. But he's just about the only one that portrays winter as something that might be fun. In New England, that's a gift to be cherished.

(Darrell Berger is minister of the First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate.)

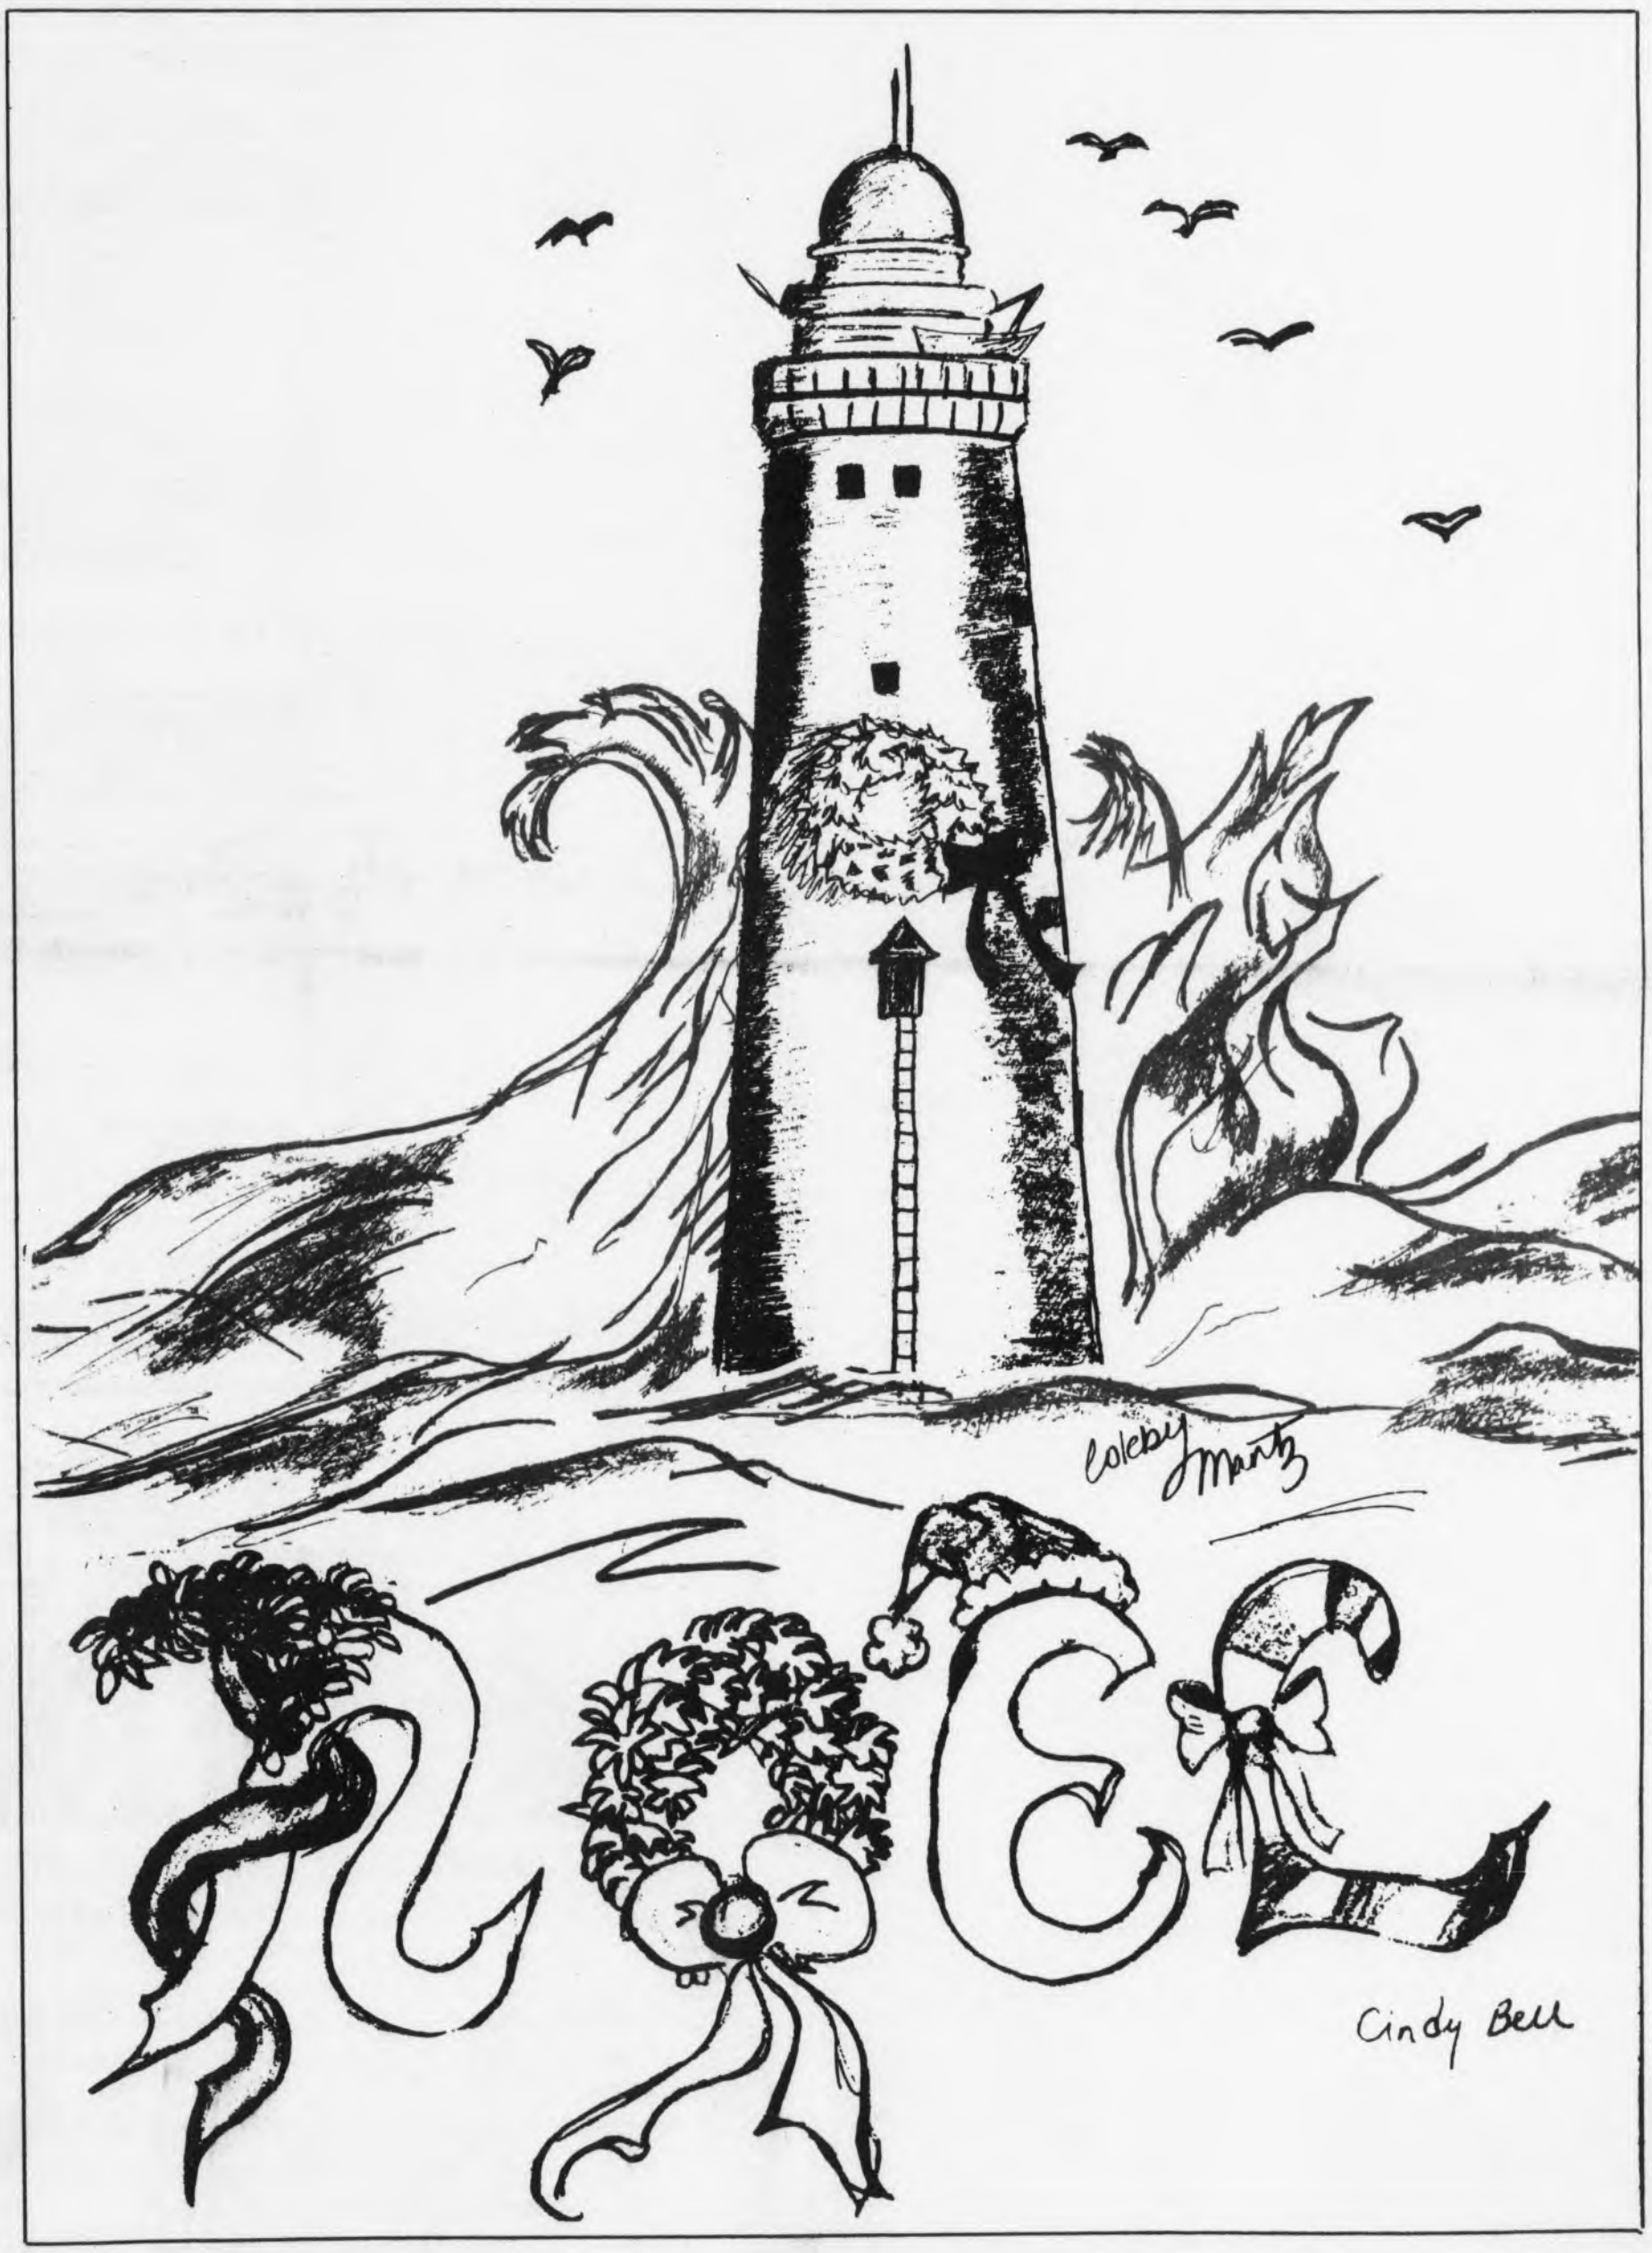
Cohasset Mariner

Vol. IX, No. 13 | 383-6731/545-7060 | Thursday, December 25, 1986 | One Section | 35 cents



Cohasset's week . . .

Members of the high school art class spread holiday cheer throughout the downtown area as they painted store windows. The artists included: (l to r) Jen Powers, Beth Wagner, Sarah Hamilton, Coleby Mantz and Cindy Bell.

Town hall holiday schedule

Selectmen have adopted the following holiday work schedule for the town hall:

Christmas Holiday:

The Town Hall will be open from 8:30 a.m. until 6:45 p.m. Monday, Dec. 22, and Tuesday, Dec. 23.

New Year's Day Holiday:

The Town Hall will be open from 8:30 a.m. until 6:45 p.m. Monday Dec. 29, and Tuesday, Dec. 30.

The Town Hall will close at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 31, and not re-open until Monday, Jan. 5.

Note: Town Hall will be closed all day Dec. 25, 26, January 1 & 2.

Engineering amendment

The advisory committee approved a request by the health board for a $5,000 amendment to the board's contract with Camp, Dresser and McKee.

Health board chairman C. Michael Bliss explained last week that monitoring wells at the Cohasset Heights landfill must be reviewed quarterly to detect any danger to the town's water supply.

Cohasset Heights is the privately-owned landfill located on Crocker Lane. As part of a legal agreement worked out between the town and Cohasset Heights, monitoring wells were constructed to check the leachate flowing from the commercial landfill.

Dr. Bliss argued that because the readings and data are so complex, they must be reviewed by the CDM engineers. The board also intends to have the engineer review plans for a proposed treatment plant the owners intend to construct to purify contaminated ground water.

The $5,000 is in addition to the current $10,000 contract with CDM.

A second request by the health board was also approved this week by the advisory committee.

A transfer of $2,650 was approved which will allow the health board to repair a faulty septic system at 15 Parker Avenue.

According to Dr. Bliss, the owner has not responded in the past year to repeated orders by the board to repair the overflowing system.

The work will cost about $4,000, but the board has some money left after a similar problem was solved on Sohier Street. Dr. Bliss explained that a lien will be placed on the property owned by Rose Hoss at 15 Parker Avenue, so the town will retrieve the money if the house is ever sold.

Employee attends seminar

Denise J. Parsloe of Cohasset's water department attended a two-day training course on water fluoridation sponsored by the Dental Division of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. Cohasset has been fluoridated since 1956.

Poor water pressure plagues Church Street

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Drip, drip, drip, drip, gurgle, drip. Would you be happy if it took 45 minutes to fill your bathtub?

It takes 45 minutes to fill the bathtub at Michael and Beth Lyons' house at 47 Church Street, and they are not happy. In fact, they are considering a change of address.

The Lyons are not alone. At least a dozen families homes along Church Street are plagued by low water pressure, or poor flow.

Beth Lyons commented, "If we flush the toilet, no water will come out of any faucet in our house. And if the faucet is running and someone flushes the toilet, the toilet won't fill.

"We have a dishwasher," she added. "The water goes into it so slowly, we have to stop it before the rinse cycle and fill it with water to get the dishes semi-clean. It's very frustrating.

"When I heard they were going to dig up the street to check for clogs, I talked with my plumber. He suggested checking the fitting (connection to water main), but the job is real expensive."

Last month, Edward Hettstrom of 57 Church Street, Joseph Carbone of 56 Church Street, the Lyons's and several neighbors congregated before the Water Commission to voice their complaints.

The board noted, all the houses in the affected area were built at about the same time.

Board member Ronald Goodwin commented, "We have tested in the area farther up the pipe, and there were no complaints there. If there were a problem with a water main, those people would have been affected."

Goodwin said he believes the problem is not pressure, but reduced flow, because sediment has built up in the old pipes which connect the houses to the water main.

The connections, he added, are the responsibility of the residents and not of the town.

"We could spend a lot of money to put in another main, but what if the problem isn't solved. Much of the cost would be borne by the residents in embitterment."

The residents pinned much of the blame on the start up of a pumping station in 1978. They claim, the pumping station shoveled siltation into their connecting pipes.

Goodwin commented, the residents could have pipes, such as copper or iron, which have corroded.

"We were told," Hettstrom said, "our manifolds are too small. They should be bigger.

"The bottom line," he said, "is that we all have problems. I will gladly refit my house. I asked them if they would pay my repair bill if it doesn't solve the problem. They said, "No."

Ben Curley, Superintendent of the water department said, he has checked out the tests he has performed, "and there is nothing wrong with the pressure.

Curley said he tested the main for pressure, ph, and flow.

Joe Carbone is used to waiting. "I've been here 22 years, and have been complaining for 20 years. When they opened Bates Lane and Flintlock, the pressure really went down.

"They're talking about sewering the whole town," he noted. "So, I'll be able to flush the toilet, but I can't wash my face."

"It's a process of elimination," he said. "These are older homes, and back in the old days, they only had one flushing toilet. Now, they have dishwashers and washing machines."

Curley noted, the water department will not be able to open up the street to investigate the individual house connections, until spring. A town bylaw forbids street openings between November 15 and April 15.

So, the Church Street residents will have to wait.

Special needs students head for area Winter Olympics

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

They are learning to skate with the greatest of ease. But it takes practice, and a little help from their friends.

Seven of Cohasset's special needs students will be heading toward the area competition for the Winter Olympics. As they practice for the January 19 event, they are leaning on their coaches for physical and moral support.

And they get it from the volunteer skating teachers, all members of the high school hockey team.

These teens, who volunteer one hour every Monday morning, do more than just lend their time and their talents to the young students. They are role models for the developmentally disabled youngsters.

"The kids really look forward to seeing their high school friends," community organizer Irene Volpe explained. "The first week, when the hockey players weren't there, the kids were really disappointed. They'd much prefer the high school kids than any parent or teacher helping them."

The older boys serve as role models for the special needs skaters. Once each week, in preparation for the Winter Olympics, these boys reach out to the youngsters with an outstretched hand and encouraging words.

But the satisfaction is not one-sided.

"The little kids really get a lot of enjoyment from skating with us," volunteer Jeff Hartwell explained. "But it's really fun for us, too. They pay attention to us, because they want to learn. We do different things, like clocking them during their sprints. It's fun for everyone involved."

Hartwell, co-captain of the CHS hockey team, volunteered for the program last year. "I really didn't know what to expect the first time," he said. "But it was pretty good. We all had a good time. The kids are at different levels, so we can help them with a lot of things. They get a kick out of it, and so do we."

Four members of the hockey team volunteer each week in preparation for the January 19 competition. They began training four weeks ago at the Winter Gardens skating rink.

According to Hartwell, the team members were asked to participate in the program. Those with a study period Monday morning, joined the coaching staff.

Included in that group are Hartwell, sophomore Brian Curran, junior Peter Sandblom and senior

A GREAT PERFORMANCE DESERVES AN ENCORE.
Vermont Castings has revolutionized the art of woodburning. Again. They did it the first time with the Defiant, a handsome, efficient woodstove with doors that opened for a view of the fire.
They've done it again with the Defiant Encore. With a strikingly beautiful design that will enhance any decor, a large, clear glass area for fire viewing, a super convenient ash removal system, and an incredibly clean-burning combustion system, the Encore is a tough act to follow.

Winter Olympics preparation. . .

Todd Henry.

Sandblom has been a coaching volunteer for three years. "Irene asked (former assistant principal) Mr. Di if any of the hockey players could volunteer their time. Mr. Di asked a group of us to help out," he explained. "This is my third year now."

According to the 16 year-old junior, the young skaters are "great guys. My sister cares for Michael Goodhue and Ryan Wiggs in the summer, so they're like little brothers to me.

"Most of them know how to skate. Some can just barely stand up, so we're showing them how to do the basics on their own. Everyone goes at their own speed."

There is a total of ten boys in the skating class. Sandblom noted, "they all know we play hockey for the high school. They tell us their goal is to win a medal. They really want to learn how to skate. Quite a few, including Michael and Eric, are good skaters. One kid plays hockey and has his own equipment."

Sandblom added, "I think helping out with these kids has made me more patient with everyone."

Community organizer Volpe, a former special needs teacher in Cohasset, explained how Ruth Nedrow of the Cohasset Boosters Club and Athletic Director Clark Chatterton organized the first Winter Olympics squad from Cohasset.

"It was back in 1983. Ruth got the kids from the hockey team to volunteer. Some of the same kids who are helping out now began as sophomores."

Volpe recalled that one student, Chip Muncey, coached the special needs kids in the past. He graduated last year from CHS and is now an instructional assistant at the South Shore Collaborative. "And he still comes back to coach our team," Volpe said. "He's worked real hard for us. I think it was his participation in the program that sparked an interest in working professionally with special needs students."

In addition to the volunteer coaches, each year the Winter Gardens has been generous in the ice time allotted the students. The children are provided with free rental skates. "We've always been treated really well by the Winter Gardens. And we're grateful to them," Volpe added.

Although ten youngsters skate each week, a total of seven are capable of skating in the area competition. The January 19 event will be held at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham and will incorporate students from several counties.

"We wouldn't be able to participate in the Olympics if it weren't for all the support we receive from the community. In Cohasset especially, there's a lot of tremendous support from the families, the coaches, gym teachers and the community. Chip Muncey is just one example of how much this town does for its special needs students," Volpe said.

The high school volunteers, she noted, are highly regarded by their young, admiring students. "The hockey players weren't there for the first practice, and the boys were so disappointed. I, as a teacher, wasn't half as fun as the hockey players. It really makes a big difference to them. They're all boys, and the youngsters really look up to the high school kids. They remember their names from the previous years. And now that the kids are maturing, it means a lot to them to have male friendships and role models. There aren't that many in their lives, so the hockey players are important to them."

The young skaters, she added, "are incredibly dependent on the volunteers. And the high school kids are really dependable. They're here every week."

Maria Plante's son, Peter, is one of the Special Olympians on the Cohasset team. With the able assistance of the hockey players, her son has learned to skate. "Peter has a visual problem," she explained, "which makes it very difficult for him to function on the ice. But these boys made him feel very comfortable. They know how to teach the kids. It's so much better than if the parents had to do it. The hockey players can skate so much better than any of us."

After four years, Peter is "improving" his skating skills. This will be his third year of Winter Olympian competition, Mrs. Plante said, having won previous medals in the 45 meter speed skating event.

Peter, Jay Nothnagle, and Michael Goodhue are all experienced Olympians. "They really have had a great time," Plante said, adding that all entries receive a medal from the Olympic committee.

"But this year, the rules are more strict and the kids first have to skate in an area competition. And best from those races will be selected to compete in state Olympics."

Peter's mother noted, "anything the boys have learned is because of the volunteers from the hockey team. The kids are very lucky to have them."

So. Shore Coalition approves first set of group bylaws

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

For the first time in the 18 months since its inception, the South Shore Coalition has a set of bylaws under which to operate.

Coalition representatives approved the bylaws Thursday night. They are the result of several months' work by a subcommittee of three representatives.

The charter will be ratified as boards of selectmen approve a separate memorandum of agreement, which will serve as confirmation of the town's membership in the regional organization.

The bylaws establish in writing many of the customs under which the coalition has conducted business since its 1985 inception.

For example, the monthly meeting of coalition representatives will continue to be held at the town hall of each member town on a rotating basis. Last Thursday's meeting was held in Weymouth; on Jan. 15, the coalition will meet at Hull Town Hall.

The bylaws also establish a "one town, one vote" rule, even though each town sends three representatives to meetings — a selectman, a planning-board member and the community's representative to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC).

The agreement memo spells out coalition function and procedures, and strengthens the organization's role in the flow of information, particularly about pending developments.

The coalition will distribute information from MAPC and from state agencies about reviews of developments, such as environmental-impact statements and reports.

In turn, selectmen will be required to forward any recommendations of the coalition to involved town officials, and to notify the coalition of proposed "major or significant" developments that meet the folllowing standards:

— Commercial or industrial developments of more than 50,000 square feet or those which result in the addition of more than 100 parking spaces.

— Residential developments with more than 50 housing units.

— Developments that could affect any other community, such as a proposal with sole access through the neighboring town; rezoning land that abuts another town; or any proposal considered significant by either local or coalition officials.

— The proposed acquisition of open space.

The bylaws are "quite similar" to those drafted by MetroWest and MAGIC (Minuteman Area), two similar organizations in the western suburbs, said Hull Selectman John Silva, a member of the bylaw subcommittee.

Both documents were approved after an hour-long discussion of MAPC's voting rights in coalition meetings.

Though all other subregions within the 101-town MAPC district allow its representative one vote at meetings, the South Shore Coalition decided not to give MAPC that right.

That could change in the future, however. Representatives agreed to review that feature of the bylaws yearly.

Some representatives were ambivalent about denying voting rights.

"I don't think they should have a vote, but we shouldn't bite the hand that feeds us, either," said Janet W. O'Brien, Hanover selectman. "We can't fool ourselves here — MAPC has been there to help us since the start."

Hingham Selectman John Brady suggested that other towns might lose interest in the coalition if MAPC were given voting rights.

"We lost Pembroke from the start because they didn't want greater involvement with MAPC, and they're an integral part of anything that happens on the South Shore," Brady said. "We were supposed to be 11 towns, not 10. MAPC should not be more active within this local organization."

McDonald echoed those opinions. "There's an old saying that goes 'if it ain't broke, don't fix it,' " he said. "MAPC has been beneficial to us, but we must realize they're an interest group."

While MAPC will not get a vote in coalition matters, it will remain an ex-officio member.

Coalition Project Manager Jean Christensen of Marshfield — an MAPC planner prior to her assignment to the coalition last spring — indicated MAPC's status may change when it is reviewed next year.

Coalition sets January agenda

Restoration of South Shore commuter rail and an update of progress in the study of widening Route 3 will be the major topics of discussion before South Shore Coalition representatives next month.

The coalition will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 15 at Hull Town Hall, Atlantic Avenue.

Recent developments in both issues prompted the coalition to postpone a press conference it had planned for January. Representatives last Thursday voted to put off the event until February, giving the panel a chance to consider the latest information on all issues.

Weymouth plant seen as possible solution

South Shore Coalition officials see a possible solution to the rubbish-disposal crisis on the horizon — but it's going to be tough to turn it into reality, they say.

The Weymouth Board of Public Works voted Dec. 11 to ask a firm to draw up language for a contract to convert the town's defunct incinerator on the Back River into an electricity-generating trash-to-energy plant.

General Electric and Laurent-Bouillet Howard Inc. of Phoenix combined efforts this fall to propose a conversion system for the incinerator, shut down 10 years ago due to stricter air-pollution standards implemented by the federal government.

The plant, built in the 1960s on a 17-acre site off Wharf Street, has been idle ever since.

The coalition formed a solid-waste subcommittee nearly a year ago to seek a regional solution to the disposal crisis.

That crisis became critical this year due to dwindling landfill space brought on by tougher state controls on landfill design. Dumps are a chief threat to the quality of groundwater.

Because of the reduction in capacity, tipping fees — what municipalities pay for disposal only, and not other costs — has risen from about $20 a ton two years ago to $50 to $70 a ton. Officials expect the fee will increase to $100 within a short period.

A trash-to-energy plant will not completely eliminate the need for a landfill, but it will reduce the amount of trash currently deposited into them by as much as 90 percent. Another attractive feature of "resource recovery" is the relative long-term cost stability.

The Weymouth plant proposed by GE/LBH would have a top capacity of 300 tons per day, far more than the 100 tons generated by Weymouth alone. For this reason, other South Shore towns might be invited to use the plant.

"All of us are going to be caught between a rock and a hard place for waste disposal," coalition project manager Jean Christensen of Marshfield told representatives last week. "We're facing very major and very expensive problems with this in the near future."

However, plant conversion must be approved by Weymouth Town Meeting before construction begins — an issue that is sure to be controversial.

"Because the site is on the Back River, there are certain environmental issues there. It's going to be a heated discussion" that will probably take place at annual Town Meeting, which begins May 4, said Weymouth Selectman Brian J. McDonald.

Photographs taken by staff photographers and appearing in the Mariners are available for reprints.

Photos are printed black and white on glossy paper either 5"x7" size of 8"x10". Orders should be phoned in with date of publication, the page number on which it appeared, and if possible, the name of the photographer.

When reprints are ready, you will be contacted (usually about two weeks) to pick them up at the Mariner office on Main St. (Rte. 3A) in Marshfield at your convenience.

Prices are $7 for 5"x7" and $9 for 8"x10". We recommend reproduction in 5"x7" except for special purposes.

☐ All of you sailors, be sure to watch for the January issue of Sail Magazine, which will feature amateur photographs submitted by readers. Bill Becher's submission was awarded second place out of thousands of national entries. Not only will Bill's marine photograph be printed in the upcoming issue, but he will also receive a new camera and lens from Sail! Next year's pictures could be even better with that . . . .

☐ For those of you that may not know it, Bob Stanton has been in the University Hospital since last August and will have to remain there as a patient over the Christmas holidays. There's nothing like a card to cheer anyone up (and they make a nifty decoration for a hospital room), we're sure he would love to hear from you. His address is: Bob Stanton, Room F302, University Hospital, 75 East Newton St., Boston, MA 02118. Here's hoping the new year brings you good health, Bob!

☐ Lauri Doherty sure had good news in time for the Christmas break! Lauri is a freshman at Franklin Pierce College in New Hampshire, and learned that she made the varsity ski team for the college. Lauri was a member of the Cohasset high ski team last year, and feels certain that was helpful in her successful bid for this year. We'll be waiting to hear what are sure to be great results for all of you efforts, Lauri.

☐ Wouldn't you love to see Johanna Horn in the dress that she modeled recently in the Neiman—Marcus fashion show? The picture sure did look beautiful, rather like a dress that royalty would wear . . .

☐ Heard from Jim Farley recently, and he wanted to be remembered to all of the Cohasset folks. Jim and his family are livng in Florida, and love it but for one thing — he would love to be here for a white Christmas (doesn't look like its in the cards this year, Jim).

Cub Scouts and Tiger Cubs from Pack 38 celebrated the upcoming holidays with a special guest appearance by you-know-who. It seems that Santa's keeping a close watch over Scouts (l to r) Bob Meehan, J.C. Parzyck, Jeremy Williams, Sean Cogill and Doug Cameron. (by Alan Chapman)

☐ Speaking of Florida, Bud, Shirley and Chris Watters are happily settled in down there now, in time for the holidays. We sure do miss them, and wish them a wonderful holiday season from all of the "cold" folks back home.

☐ Elizabeth Van Slyck sure will be a busy gal in the weeks to come. She has been re-appointed a member of the Massachusetts Easter Seal Society House of Delegates, representing our community, and she deserves a pat on the back for a job well done.

☐ If your child is "looking for something to do" over the vacation, Cohasset Recreation can be of assistance. They will be conducting special games and team sports at the Deer Hill School Gym, on Monday and Tuesday (Dec. 22 and 23 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon for grades K-3, and noon until 3 p.m. for grades 4-6. The same schedule will be followed the following week on Dec. 29 and 30. Sure can be of help to Santa!

☐ Its fun to watch the progress of the South Shore Art Center building, due to be finished in the Spring. That corner looks a lot better already, imagine what it will be like when completed! And, on the other side of the Village, to watch an addition being built the "old fashioned" way by The Hub Shipping Company can be an all-day project if you're interested in how it was done then . looks grand.

☐ Be sure to watch carefully as you drive this week, its the week of the Christmas carollers! Is there anything that puts you in th mood more than a cheerful group singing those carols that we all love?

☐ Let us hear all about your Christmas, hope its a happy and healthy one . . . one group that is sure to be happy this year are the skiiers, there is oodles of snow for all of you. Tell us about it.

☐ Merry Christmas.

Holiday wishes

'Tis the season for giving. And in that holiday spirit, we wish everyone joy and peace and good health.

To some of our friends and neighbors we bestow some special wishes. They include the following:

to Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton, full-time secretarial help; to all our Senior Strutters, paid endorsements for Reebok;

to CHS basketball coach Eddie Minelli, an eight-foot Dinka tribesman; to Walter Sweeney, a return to Cohasset and a seat on the Board of Health;

to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, something MEMO-rable;

To Sen. Bill Golden, a whistlestop tour of his district; to Executive Secretary Don Andrew, an office refrigerator loaded with diet colas; to the downtown merchants, a sequel to The Witches of Eastwick;

to the Conservation Commission, a direct telephone line into the selectmen's office;

to David Wadsworth, a journey back into time;

to Police Chief Joseph Kealey, a new home . . . in Cohasset; to the Milliken Field renovation committee, a prayer.

to Bill Figueiredo, a long walk and a pier to do it on; to the sewer commission, the genius of Ed Norton in working out an agreement with Hull; to Ken Coleman, a repeat of 1986, with a reverse score on game 7;

to CHS principal Mary Ellen Gallagher, to skipper the winning yacht in the America's Cup;

to Clark Chatterton, office decor by Pierre de Salvation Army;

to Polly Litchfield, a giant Dustbuster;

to the Cohasset Riding Club, Pampers for their ponies;

to Health Agent Joe Godzik, decaffeinated percolation tests;

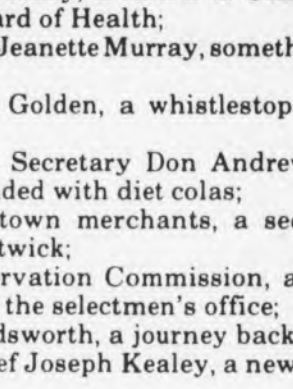
to Molly Hochkeppel, a year's supply of caffeinated coffee;

to audience members at the selectmen's meetings, ear trumpets.



Toxic safety, bank check issues still kicking

To the Editor:

While we are busy wrapping up our last minute gifts, there are two very important consumer packages that have already come a long way through the legislative process, but may never be wrapped up for delivery.

The Toxics in Art Supplies Bill would protect our children from exposure to dangerous chemicals in their art materials, and the Unconscionable Bank Fees measure would protect us all from unfair bank charges. Both bills have passed the House of Representatives and now await Senate action.

Toxics in Art Supplies (H 6377) would require art supplies manufacturers to label their products which contain toxic substances with health and safe use information. In addition, the bill would forbid the sale of these products to elementary schools. Obviously, this legislation is especially important to the safety of our children who are particularly susceptible to risks associated with dangerous substances such as asbestos, lead, and benzene commonly used in clays, paints, glues, and other art materials.

Letters

Unconscionable Bank Charges (H 1060) would place more reasonable limits on the amounts banks could charge customers for bounced checks. Instead of the $10-$20 that most banks currently charge for bounced checks, they would only be allowed to charge consumers $5. This fee would allow banks to more than offset the 36 cents that the Federal Reserve Bank estimates it costs to process these transactions. Meanwhile, consumers would be protected from unfair bank charges.

We urge Senator Anna Buckley to do everything possible to ensure that these two bills pass during the 1986 legislative session—two packages appropriate to all seasons.

Mature hockey decision making needed

To the Editor:

Last Sunday, I was extremely disappointed in finding that the Sea Hawks, Plymouth-Carver and Stoughton-Randolph Yankee Bantam teams were apparently all refusing to play Hingham teams due to the unmistakable inequalities in hockey expertise. Admittedly, the two Hingham teams belong in a somewhat higher level; but if the kids themselves had been left to resolve the problem instead of the protest being allowed to come from the parents, as I presume it did, I believe the action and results would probably have been more maturely accomplished.

My son was on a Hingham team which won only three games in three years (one per year). Scores against it ran so high that before the games started scorekeepers were told to stop advancing the scores on the board after they reached 9:0! Never in three years did any of the kids or any of the coaches not arrive for a game. Perhaps the worst run of high scores in one year was when you, Bob Rioux, took the team, as its coach, to Ottawa where the scores were 24:0, 23:0 and 15:0. Our team put up such a determined fight that opposing parents came from the next province to "root" for Hingham against their Canadian players. That was sportsmanship. Those were kids. And you knew how to turn a potentially bad situation into a winner from all angles. After that bad series in Ottawa the kids' only cry was "I know we're no good coach, but can we come back next year?"

It was that spirit that prompted me to arrange games in Montreal for Hingham in 1985 and for Hingham and Seahawks in 1986. Our same spirit presided in Germany and Italy last spring and will make everyone a winner again this winter in Switzerland.

I hope you can find a means to improve equity. In the meantime, let's allow the kids to play. The games are for them, not us, and they are the ones who were hurt last weekend.

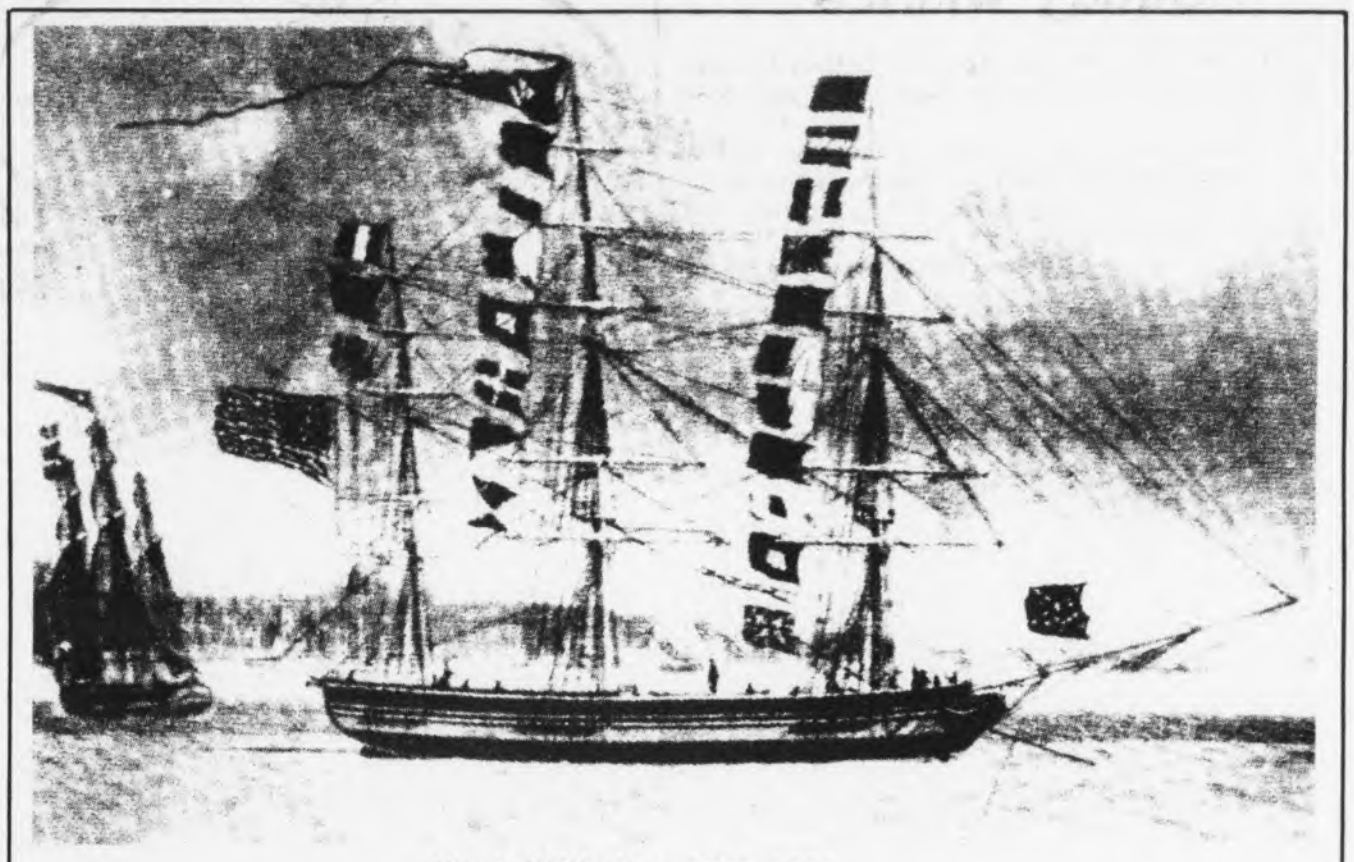
Cohasset Master Mariners of foreign births

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

Early New England seafaring towns often were a blend of the rural and the cosmopolitan for their time; as world-wide travels aboard ocean-spanning sailing vessels of the merchant fleet afforded local sailors a glimpse of diverse cultures and distant lands.

Similarly, foreign sailors visited this nation and sometimes stayed to become adopted Americans. Cohasset was no exception. Almost from the beginning a trickle of Europeans came to the town as transplanted seafarers. A number settled here and raised families. Perhaps the earliest of record was the Englishman John Stephenson, born in England in April, 1690. He came here, according to tradition, as a ship's carpenter aboard His Majesty's warship "Lucitanus". Stephenson and a shipmate arrived in Hingham. In July of 1717 he married Rachel, daughter of early Cohasset settlers Richard and Abigail Tower. Listed as a "Master Mariner", Stephenson served as one member of a committee which drew plans for and constructed the new Parish and Precinct Meetinghouse on the Common in 1746 and 47.

Captain Stephenson and Rachel had eleven children, the seventh of whom, a boy, was named Lucitanus. The Stephensons resided on South Main Street in an early house still existing. John Stephenson's will was proved on May 7, 1773.



Capt. Philip Fox, 1795-1832.

Ship Emerald—Philip Fox, Commander.

From Spain came another early Cohasset Master Mariner of note. Salvador Sabate y Morell had been born in Villeseca, Taragona, in April of 1790. As a cabin boy he came to this country with Cohasset's Capt. Ephraim Snow. The young Spaniard settled here, became a naturalized citizen in Cohasset on April 9, 1816, taking the Anglicized name of Samuel Snow. In 1813 he had married Betsey Pratt, daughter of Samuel and Betty (Lincoln) Pratt. Capt. Samuel Snow resided first on Margin Street, and in 1815 purchased a home on South Main Street. Capt. Snow commanded a number of ocean-going vessels, including the fishing schooner "Independence", the schooners "Good Intent" and "Six Brothers", the brig "Mayflower", and in 1824 the schooner "Joseph". He was lost at sea on October 3, 1825. His son, Samuel T. Snow was Treasurer of Boston's Revere Copper Company for many years, gave the land upon which Cohasset's Paul Pratt Memorial Library was built, and became the first President of its Board of Trustees.

Referred to as "the most picturesque figure" among Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains was Capt. Philip Fox of Lincolnshire, England. By route unknown he arrived in Cohasset and in April 1815 married Anna Willcutt, daughter of diarist Joel Willcutt and wife Tamar (Sutton) Willcutt. Philip Fox had been born in 1795, in England. He is noted as having been 1st Mate aboard the ship "Milo" in May 1818. Fox then commanded the 302 ton packet ship "Herald", taking over the vessel when its Captain was lost overboard during a voyage. In December of 1819 Capt. Fox took "Herald" on its regular route from Liverpool to Boston in a record-setting 17 days, one that stood only briefly until broken again by himself in a subsequent command. Fox's wife Anna and their children often accompanied him on voyages to southern American and Caribbean ports. By 1824 he was Master of the packet vessel "Emerald" on the Boston to Liverpool route. Under his command "Emerald" broke Fox's own record for westward port-to-port crossing from Liverpool in 16 days to Boston. That record stood until broken years later by the famous clipper "Red Jacket", a vessel of some four times the tonnage of "Emerald". In 1821 Capt. Philip Fox purchased the house on North Main Street previously owned by John Pratt near the head of Ripley Road. Capt. Fox died at sea in the Mediterranean in 1823. He had been known as a "driver of ships and men" but had never lost a single spar or crewman.

Capt. John Barker was born in Italy in July of 1791. Before coming to Cohasset his name is believed to have been Giovanni Batiste, and in later years his fellow Cohasseters often referred to him as "Teesta" Barker. In Cohasset he married Hannah, daughter of Laban and Sally (Lincoln) Worrick. They had ten children between the years 1813 and 1833. In 1830 he was listed as Master of Capt. Nichols Tower's schooner "Tower" then sailed to the West Indies on the schooner "Juno". In 1841 he was master of the barque "Lewis" and in 1845 of the Cohasset schooner "Herculean". Capt. Barker resided in a home he bought at the corner of Spring and South Main Streets, across from today's library. His last command was the schooner "Grey Eagle", owned by himself and the Whiton family of Hingham. On January 6, 1856 "Grey Eagle" capsized near Long Island, New York, with the loss of all hands including its Captain.

From Sweden came Capt. David Wilson of Cohasset. In December 1837 he married Mary Ann Hayden. She died in 1848 and he married Mary L. Pratt, who passed away in 1850. His third wife was Mary Anna Tucker, widow of Thomas Tucker. Capt. David Wilson was Master and part owner of several vessels, notably in 1843 of the Cohasset brig "Casket", in 1845 the brig "Speedwell", then the barque "Julia". In 1852-53 he was Master of the schooner "Georgianna" and in 1854-55 was Master and 3/8ths part owner of the barque "Kepler", and a year later of the ship "Daylight". 1855 saw Capt. David Wilson listed as 1/3rd owner of the "Herculean".

Another English Sea Captain to call Cohasset his home was Capt. Joseph H. Smith, born in Portsmouth, England in 1817. In his youth he had been a sailor on the Queen's yacht. In this country Capt. Smith married Almatia Poore of Portland, Maine, then resided in Cohasset. In 1841 he was Master of the schooner "Triton". Then in 1845 Smith and Cohasset's Laban Souther joined in building the brig "Almatia", in which Capt. Smith would sail to the port of Curacao 37 times as Captan and owner. In 1852 he owned the brig "George Otis" and soon was Master and part owner of the Scituate built brig "Martha Allen". While at Turks Island in the Caribbean Capt. Smith purchased two vessels stranded ashore at a low price, salvaged both and commanded one. They were named "Munge Park" and "River Belle". Later he commanded the barque "Eveline", which had been the last vessel built on the North River by Sylvester and Barnabas Briggs. Following the Civil War Capt. Smith became one of the few Cohasset sailing masters to make the transition to steam powered vessels, commanding Nickerson Company's 671 ton steamer "Aurora". On "Aurora" Capt. Smith made his last voyage, to Callao, Peru, before retiring from the sea to become an insurance Underwriter's Agent. He built a home on North Main St. opposite the Common. Capt. Smith had seven children, of whom Almatia Josephine, born in 1846, was the mother of the late Cohasset historian Gilbert Sanders Tower. Capt. Joseph Smith died in the year 1879.

From Ireland came Capt. Thomas Doyle, born in 1817. In 1852 he married Mary Ann Lincoln of Cohasset. It is noted that Capt. Doyle came here "through the instrumentality of the elder Capt. Ephraim Snow". Capt Doyle was a Master Mariner and Captain of the schooners "Antelope" and "Abigail", the brigs "Eliza Burgess" and "Almatia" and the barque "Maryland".

There were other Cohasset Master Mariners of foreign birth, notably those of the mid and latter 19th century, from Portugal's Western Islands, now called the Azores. From Fayal came Capts. Manuel Soito Enos and his brother Joseph Soito Enos and Minot's Ledge Lighthouse Keeper and Master Mariner Joseph Enos Frates. From the island of Pico came Mariner Joseph Jason and Lighthouse Keeper Frank Farier Martin as a child in about 1854. From Calliete, Isle of St. George, Master Mariner Manuel Valine came to Cohasset. Professional Salvage Diver Michael Neptune Brennock was born at sea near Newfoundland in 1824 and made Cohasset his home. These and many others, too many to detail herein, played their roles in Cohasset's history as a seafaring town and must have given this small New England village a miniature international community, each member of which helped to make Cohasset a part of the original American "melting pot".

New trash sites urgently needed

By Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

There are currently 202 operational landfills in Masssachusetts, most of which are quickly approaching their capacity. The result is a trash disposal crisis, recently addressed by trash haulers from around the state, which threatens public health and safety, clean drinking water supplies and the economy.

In response, the House Ways and Means Committee has approved a $250 million trash disposal bill that would give the state increased powers to locate regional solid waste facilities over the objections of local communities.

Specifically, the bill would provide $160 million in grants to municipalities to clean up water supplies contaminated by landfills and 50 percent matching grants for expansion of existing municipal dumps. In addition, it offers $50 million in loans to municipalities for new landfills and no interest loans for closing sites no longer useful; these could be replaced by regional facilities. Another $35 million would be offered to deal with solid waste pollution and there would be an increased emphasis on recycling reusable trash, which makes up about 17 percent of materials disposed in landfills.

Obviously the biggest stumbling block to the trash crisis is finding locations for landfill sites. Prisons and landfills are similar in this regard - everyone agrees we need them, but nobody wants one in his or her backyard. The House bill promotes regional sites over the out-moded system of individual community landfills, stressing the need for more long-range solutions.

Chanukah commemorates freedom of Jews

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner Staff

In the second century BCE, Palestine was ruled by Antiochus, who decreed that the Jewish temple in Jerusalem would be taken over by the Syrians.

The Syrians ransacked the temple, set up their idols, and would not allow the Jews to practice their religion.

A Jewish priest named Mattathias spoke out against Antiochus' decrees. His sons lead a revolt which lasted three years. One son, Judah Maccabee, finally defeated the Syrians and the Jews regained their temple.

But they discovered that the sacrimental oil stored inside had been desecrated, and only oil enough for one day remained untainted. A messenger was dispatched to obtain more, but, the oil miraculously burned for eight days, until the messenger returned.

Hence, Chanukah is observed for eight days, and is symbolized by eight candles on a menorah. Chanukah, which means "rededication," is the celebration of the Jews' restoration of their temple.

Rabbi Stephen Karol of Congregation Sha-aray Shalom in Hingham said Chanukah is a holiday celebrating religious freedom, and the right of people to live together regardless of their differences.

"The Maccabees fought for the right to be different," he said.

The holiday sentiment of "peace on earth, good will to all" is universal, he said.

Objectively, Chanukah is a minor holiday in the Jewish year, he adds. Others--Passover, Yom Kippur, Rosh Hashonah--are much more important. Chanukah, occurring as it does near Christmas, has gained more importance, due to the Americanization and commercialization of Christmas.

Karol is very much in favor of more education about Chanukah, believing that problems stem from ignorance. Education results in greater respect among people of different backgrounds and beliefs, he said.

He is very pleased with the consideration and sensitivity demonstrated by the community in Hingham, noting the school system is responsive to educating the children about the different cultural aspects of Jewish holidays. He especially noted a display at the Plymouth River School, showing different holidays around the world, not just Jewish celebrations.

Karol said it is difficult for the Jewish children at this time of year, when they see so many of their friends caught up in the festivities that accompany the Christian holiday.

At the temple school, he said he tries to teach the children that it is "okay to be different," but there should be no stigma attached to the difference. He also tells them that one reason to learn about their religion and culture is to be able to explain it to anyone who asks, and therefore be able to spread the knowledge that can create more understanding.

He adds, though, there seems to be more awareness of the Jewish celebration, pointing to television spots that appear throughout Chanukah, with holiday wishes to the Jews in the viewing audience.

Latkes (potato pancakes) are traditional Chanukah fare, served with sour cream or apple sauce. During the three years the Maccabees fought to regain the temple, they lived in the hills relying heavily on potatoes in their diet, Karol explained.

He added that in Israel, doughnuts are very popular for Chanukah, since they are fried in oil, which is symbolic of the oil that burned for eight days.

This year, a family will begin its celebration of Chanukah at sunset on December 26, lighting the first candle on the menorah. This is also the beginning of the sabbath, so the sabbath candles will also be lighted at that time.

Dinner will be served, gifts exchanged, Karol said. The family may sing traditional songs and play games with the dreidel (a four-sided top).

Approximately 220 families belong to Congregation Sha-aray Shalom (which means "Gates of Peace"), with about half that number residing in Hingham. The balance come from 20 surrounding towns, Karol said.

New Art Center logo needed

The South Shore Art Center is expanding its facilities and wants a fresh new image for their letterhead, advertising and promotional material. The deadline for submitting artwork for a new logo design is December 31, 1986.

All entries must be camera-ready, black and white, mounted on white drawing board, 9"x12". No limit on the number of entries and the design should be one color with no half-tones. The artist may indicate a PMS color.

The design may incorporate the address, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA 02025, but should contain the words South Shore Art Center. $100 will be awarded to the artist with the chosen logo to be selected by the Board of Directors. All artwork becomes the property of the Center.

For further information contact the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

For many, Christmas is a day of work

By John O'Donnell
Mariner Staff

While others celebrate the holidays with family and friends, some people will be on the job.

"It can be depressing working on Christmas," said Lauriebeth Allen, a switchboard operator at Jordan Hospital in Plymouth.

"But the people who are here in the hospital really appreciate that you are here to help them," she said. "There is a lot of closeness in the hospital on Christmas, and that's nice."

Santa Claus gets to take 364 days off before he has to work on a holiday, but for people in some occupations, holidays are just like any other day of the week.

"After a while working on a holiday becomes routine," said Mark Bellwood, owner of Brigadoon Kennels in Marshfield. "I work 365 days a year.

"Somebody has to be here to maintain and care for the animals," he said. "A lot of times I miss weddings and other family functions because of my responsibilities."

"I've been on the job 15 years," said Firefighter Scott McMillan of the Hingham Fire Department. "Working on the holidays is like second nature.

"It's tough on my family," he said, "but they're used to it. We just get up really early and celebrate, or sometimes I can split up a shift with somebody so I have more time in the morning.

"After 15 years I know better than to make definite plans on holidays," McMillan said. "But I don't have to work on Christmas this year, luckily."

"Work definitely interferes with your holiday," said Patrolman David Stera of the Braintree Police Department. "But you get used to working nights and Sundays when other people aren't working. It goes with the job."

Dot Lombardi, a staff nurse in the birthing unit at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, said that after 31 years as a nurse her family is accustomed to celebrating holidays at different times.

"My husband and I have four children, and we've learned to celebrate when we can," she said. "It doesn't really bother me. Also, the hospital has a holiday dinner that your family can come to."

People said that Christmas Day is not usually busy compared to other days.

"I can't recall anything unusual happening on a Christmas," said Detective Kevin Collins of the Braintree Police Department. "It's usually a quiet day."

"It's usually exceptionally quiet," said Firefighter Kevin Nord of the Kingston Fire Department. "Hardly anything happens during the day. If anything happens, it's toward the evening.

"Working on Christmas can be kind of a drag," said Nord. "It can interfere with family plans. We have to get the kids up a little extra early so I can be with them."

"Most of the time things are pretty quiet on a holiday," said Petty Officer Reginald Baird of the United States Coast Guard Station in Scituate.

"We are on duty 24 hours a day every day of the year," he said, "and holidays are no different. We might cook a special meal, but basically it's just another work day.

"In the military, families get used to these things," said Baird. "It's like getting used to moving every two or four years."

Sometimes, however, Christmas events can be special. Lombardi said she especially enjoys working in the birthing unit on Christmas.

"It's very thrilling and exciting," she said. "Of course anyone born on Christmas Day is in good company. They have a very special birthday."

Bellwood reported a strange occurance that happened last Christmas.

"Last Christmas the dogs were quiet all day," he said. "It's not something you normally see. Even the dogs who are always barking were well-behaved.

"I can't explain why they were so quiet," he said. "It was one of the easiest days I've ever had."

Some people work on the holiday to earn extra money. Ruory Gregg, manager of Curtis Compact in Hanover, said he will have workers on Christmas Day.

"We go with a skeleton crew on Christmas, and we ask our employees for volunteers," he said. "We're open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., so it's not a long shift.

"We have college students usually volunteering," he said. "A college kid who has only a three or four week break to earn money wants the hours."

Bellwood said that it's easy to work on holidays if you get yourself in the right frame of mind.

"I guess it's all in how you adjust your head," he said.

Christmas donations

The confirmation class at St. Anthony's Church has worked hard to make Christmas a special time for 162 underprivileged children in Brockton.

The Cohasset youngsters, aged 13 to 15, gathered and shipped the 650 gifts, which Catholic Charities will distribute to needy Brockton families.

To be confirmed in the church, the youngsters were required to perform 20 hours of Christian service. They asked the congregations at all the masses for donations, manned tables and gave out the names of needy children to interested donors.

This program is in its third year and it has grown steadily. In 1984, 100 families benefitted from the work of Cohasset's confirmation class.

This year, the children in 150 poor Brockton families will have a brighter holiday, thanks to the kids at St. Anthony's.

The Chanukah-Christmas dilemma

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

For most families in Hingham and across America, 'tis the season for Christmas trees, Santa Claus and piles of presents for little kids. But for non-Christian families, it can be a season of irritation and guilt.

Fred McDonough, chairman of the outreach committee at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham, spoke with a group of concerned parents Thursday on "the Chanukah/Christmas dilemma."

McDonough's program was designed for Jews-by-choice, interfaith couples and parents whose children are involved in "mixed marriages."

"There is a lot of pressure by Jewish children to make Chanukah a sort of Jewish Christmas," he noted.

They are impressed by the carols and Christmas shopping and hype that surrounds the Christian holiday in this country, they will ask, "Why can't we have Christmas too?" he said.

John Nickerson who attended with his wife, Terry, commented, "I grew up Catholic. There was always such pressure to perform, I was always tense over the coming event.

"I dread Christmas," he said. "I hate it. It's the worst day of the year."

Nickerson said he thinks Christmas has become a big media event and suggested it should be celebrated in a low key manner like Chanukah.

McDonough agreed. "Christmas has become everybody's holiday. I think if I were a Christian, I would be offended by all the commercialism, because it takes away from the religious significance of the holiday."

The group agreed, many of the extraneous elements to the holiday, such as Santa Claus, trees and wreaths have no religious significance and confuse the issue.

"One way we can deal with this problem," McDonough said, "is to help our Christian friends and relatives to try to put Christ back into Christmas and get away from the hype that begins at Halloween."

He added, it is tough for Jewish parents to explain to their children why they can't have Christmas, when Jewish children have the same desires other kids have.

"We have to explain that we live in a predominantly Christian country," he said, "but we shouldn't be lost as Jews. We shouldn't want Christmas and we shouldn't feel left out."

"They need to know you should be proud of what you are," McDonough said. "You are part of a heritage and legacy.

"I know it's tough with the little ones," he added. "There is no easy answer."

McDonough argued against trying to incorporate the trappings of Christmas in Chanukah, such as putting up a 'Chanukah bush.'

"If you try to rationalize taking something that doesn't belong to you," he said, "you take away from the religious significance of the holiday.

"Christmas has nothing to do with us," he explained. "When Jews celebrate Christmas, it's like taking something that is not yours."

A woman in the group commented, "Don't you wish they would stop asking you to have a merry Christmas everywhere you go? Don't you feel like shouting, 'I'm Jewish; I celebrate Chanukah?!'"

McDonough argued, most people say merry Christmas as if they were saying hello, good-bye or have a nice day.

The parents were especially indignant that Christmas is "pushed down our throats" by advertisers, and that it is brought into the schools.

"What do you do," said one concerned mother, "when your five-year-old daughter goes to school and is told to make a wreath and is given a stocking with presents from Santa?"

McDonough responded, "You have to give your kids a good foundation and make them feel a part of their heritage. You should be proud of what you are.

"We shouldn't try to compete with Christmas," he added. "We have as many good things to celebrate as Christians do."

Wishes for this holiday season from Deer Hill

These Christmas wishes were written by the fifth grade students at the Deer Hill School.

ONE WISH

If I were to have one wish, I would wish for all the starving and poor people to have plenty of food and clothing. Also, if they are sick then we could help them. I guess I want this wish because I feel that most people have plenty of food and clothing and the starving and poor people don't even have enough. I think that Africa has the most starving people. We should help them the most if my wish comes true.

by Megan Bruns

WHAT I WISH FOR

I wish I could live in the Caribbean with the hot sun gleaming on my back and a nice cold iced tea in my hand (doesn't it just make your mouth water)? I would just sit in my beach chair and watch the azure colored water reach up my ankle, going farther and farther up my legs each time it crashes down on the sand. My radio would be blasting out loud, echoing over the beach. But too bad, here we are in the beginning of winter sitting in school. What a pity!

by Charles Endris

MY ONE AND ONLY WISH

If I had a wish, I would make it a special wish in my heart. I'd wish that love and peace would stay forever, and be welcomed into everyone's life. What I'm saying is, that if something hurts you, express feelings, but don't take them out on a friend. I'd wish that everyone in the world would care for everyone else. I would also wish that peace would be welcomed, just like love. I wish we would stop fighting and leave the world alone. And very last, I wish cannons and guns might never be heard again. But most of all, I wish at least love would stay forever.

by Lauren Almeida

PEACE

I wish there would be peace throughout the whole world, the country, and even the school. Peace is something that should be a part of our lives, and would take place without even thinking about it. We've become used to hearing about wars. Imagine what it would be like to have perfect world peace for just one day. Think of it not having to worry about wars or violence. There are, I'm sure, many people who could do a lot about peace but are just faces in the crowd. Peace is something that most of us take for granted.

by Tyler Studds

COLORED CHRISTMAS

This Christmas I hope it will snow. I mean colored snow, like plaid, polka-dot, checkered, red, blue, yellow, orange, tan, white and black. I think it would make this Christmas wild, weird and more fun. And when you throw it, it will end up really bizarre looking. And you can ski, sled, and have snowball fights because it's fluffy.

by Nick Terry

CHRISTMAS

When I think of Christmas I think of joy and happiness, not only of presents and candy. This year I was thinking of all the children who are missing. Some have been taken from their homes and can't even remember their family's faces. I have tried to think of a way to help these children and now I can by writing out my Christmas wish. I wish that all the programs like the pictures on milk cartons and the missing children's pictures on T.V. will help families to find their children. Hopefully some will be found and returned home to share the joy and happiness of the Holidays.

by Sarah Kirk

MY HOLIDAY WISH

If I could make one wish at this time of year it would be that I could fly with no motor or power. I would fly high above the clouds and talk to the birds and they would understand. I would rest in the tree tops and when night came, I would go back home and no one would know where I had been.

by Lindsey Tibbetts

"PEACE" IS MY WISH

A lot of kids say peace is a stupid wish. If there were peace in this world, it would be great. Just think you would not have to worry about World War III coming. Birds, dogs, cats and mice would all be so friendly. Whenever I hear the word peace I feel so good inside. I mean, just think, no terrorism. I just hope some day there will be peace.

by Elizabeth O'Brien

WHITENESS

I hope it snows.

I love the way it tickles my nose.

It should be white, it just wouldn't be right, if it isn't white.

So, I hope it's white, and I hope you do to, for its fun to play in the snow so white.

And best of all, it makes Christmas so beautiful and bright.

by Bonnie Krueger

WHAT IS IT WE'RE WISHING FOR?

What would you wish if you only had one wish? If I could have one wish it would be that everyone would be treated equally and no one would be left starving or homeless. That everyone—Blacks, Whites, Indians, Vietnamese, homeless, poor, hungry and so on would all be considered equal. I wish that being wealthy wouldn't make you better than anyone else. We're almost there, but let's go all the way.

by Jennifer Foulke

PEACE

If I could have a wish and only one wish, I would wish that the whole world would join hands in peace. Everyone would be kind to each other and like each other. People wouldn't fight, and there wouldn't be any wars. Countries would have peace treaties. I wish there wouldn't be wars and there would be peace.

by Katie Ridge

WISHES

If I had a wish, I would wish that my dog could come back to life. It would be just like when I first got him. He was a beagle and he was black, white and brown. When he was six months old he got hit by a car, but it was all for the best, this way he never had a sad moment in his life. Anyway I think he died because God needed him in heaven. I do feel bad, but if my wish came true, I would be happier than ever. But my cat that I got in his place would have to stay, too!

by Wes DeSantis

PEACE ON EARTH

My wish for the holidays is that there will be Peace on Earth, no more name calling, being polite and nice to other people, and especially no more wars. I don't really understand wars. But I still wish there was no such thing. I've also never been in a war but I've seen pictures in magazines and papers. I wish there was peace in this world.

by Mindy Cheel

IF I HAD ONE WISH

If I had one wish, my wish would be that all the world would have peace. I hope a couple of years from now everybody from everywhere in the world would be friends.

by Hope Gaston

MY WISH

If I had a wish I would wish Jesus was reborn. I would ask Him to stop wars and fix people's handicaps. I would ask Him to help solve people's problems. But it's just a wish.

by Gecht Lubitz

MY WISH

I wish there were no starving people in the world. I wish everyone would have food and water. I wish that people would contribute money to buy people clothes and houses. I wish the homeless could have homes and the sick and dying be well. If everyone contributed something we could fight starvation.

If people adopted some people they could have all the things we have, like good education, holidays, clothes, fun, houses, food and water. Also if people adopted starving people, at least they'd have someone to care for them.

by Courtney Schultz

MY SPECIAL WISH

My wish is for no one to fight.
Because I don't think it is right.
'Cause if everyone fought,
What a terrible thought!
I just wish that no one would fight.

by Andy Henry

IF MY PAPA WAS ALIVE

I never met my Papa but I met him in my heart. If he were alive we would do many things together. We would laugh, sing, go to the park, and play games. He died of cancer. My mom and her sister and family were sad. I wish I could meet him in person.

by Larissa Huskins

PEACE

This Hanukkah I wish for peace in the whole world. I know it might not happen but I wish it could come true. Even in a little town like Cohasset, there isn't peace. People hurt each other, even their friends. So all I want for Hanukkah is Peace.

by Sheryl Saef

WAR

I hate war, because people can get killed. I just want to know who started the war and who keeps it going. My uncle is in the army. He is coming home for Christmas vacation. I am so excited that he is coming home. We send postcards to him every month. Almost everybody on my mother's side hates war. I don't know if he does or not.

by Sean Meehan

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

For Christmas I hope people all around the world could have peace and lots of food. For instance, people in Africa need food and doctors to stay alive. I think people from all places should send presents to people that don't have anything. For Christmas I hope everyone that doesn't have a present could have one or two presents this year.

by Brian Pattison

IF I HAD ONE WISH

If I had one wish, I would wish that everyone that is homeless would have a place to stay, and someone to keep them company. Because then life would be a lot happier for them, and during the holidays they would be able to decorate the Christmas tree. I think that would be fun for them. Also there would be more peace in the world.

by Diane Saldi

WAR

I wish that all wars would stop. War is a very dangerous situation, that can also harm someone. Sometimes people can't handle weapons, so they get out of control. I say this and a couple of my friends say so too. So please stop war before it stops us.

Sherinne McCovery

Some people are very poor. I think some people should buy gifts for them. People are dying almost every day. A lot of people should send clothes for them so they don't die. Some people should fly down with food and bring things to help them.

by Chris Stevens

MY ONE WISH

If I could wish for anything in the whole world it would be for people throughout the world to have food, clothing, shelter and a place where they could go for help if they got sick.

We don't appreciate the things we have. I think we should give to those who don't have as much as we do.

by Sarah Atkinson

PEACE

I wish there was peace in the world so there would be no more wars or fights. People wouldn't get hurt or killed. If people could cooperate with each other, we could have a happier and safer world! People could help each other and cheer one another up when they're sad. Peace is beautiful.

by Karen Kristiansen

HELP!

The one thing I would like to have is to help the poor and the dying. I would want to make sure that nobody is in need of food, clothing, or shelter. And if I had the chance to do this I would need the help of everybody in the world!

by Chris Goodman

MY WISH

My big wish is to have a lot of snow for Christmas. It would be awesome if we had maybe two or three feet of snow. I would have so much fun. I could make so many things like a snow family. Each snowman would be at least six feet high. I would also have a huge snowball fight with my friends with a high wall. It would be so pretty and white, like a huge blanket covering the land. And that's my wish.

by Renee Prisble

WHAT I WOULD WISH FOR

If I had one wish I would wish for everyone on Christmas and Christmas Eve to have fun and be happy and joyful. And for people who don't have homes and money to be happy because it's Christ's birthday. And everyone would pray for the sick and dying. That's what I would wish for.

Cohasset High School winter sports preview

HOCKEY

After two long and hard weeks of practice, the boys are ready to face the tough hockey season ahead. Coach Dennis Walsh was pleased with the way in which his team worked hard and played well in the pre-season. Walsh does not want to make any predictions about the season but would rather take one game at a time and not look too far into the future.

Walsh says his team's strength lies in its experience, speed, and explosive scoring ability. Walsh felt that Jeff Hartwell, Danny Pompeo, and Todd Fitzpatrick will lead the team on offense this year. Walsh also praised his good solid defense and named Philip Mahoney, Craig Mulcahy and goalie Peter Sandblom as the backbones of the defense. The team will also be looking toward senior co-captains Jeff Hartwell and Philip Mahoney for leadership.

Thus, after a successful pre-season, the boys opened with an upset victory over Abington, 5-4. Abington had been ranked number one in the South Shore League and played a tough game against Cohasset. However, the Skippers hung in the game, allowed no letdowns and came from behind twice in the game to give themselves the victory. Walsh felt the key to the victory was the fact that his team controlled the tempo in the crucial third period and skated very well.

Craig Mulcahy, Danny Pompeo, and Jamie Hoffman each had one goal. Jeff Hartwell led the offense with two goals including the winning goal. Walsh cited Todd Henry as playing especially well and felt he showed alot of improvement in this game.

Saturday, the boys travel to Lexington and take on Bedford in a non-league game. Monday, Cohasset faces last year's league champions Rockland at Winter Garden at 5 p.m. Finally, the boys are once again participating in the annual Lobster Pot tournament which will take place Friday when the boys face off against Marshfield. Saturday, the Skippers play Whitman/Hanson in what should prove to be an exciting game.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The girls have been working hard for the past two weeks in preparation for the season's opening game. Coach Bill Fallon was pleased with the way his team played in the pre-season and was especially happy with the fact that Cohasset crushed such strong teams as North Quincy, Milton, Weymouth North, and St. Claire's in scrimmages.

Fallon's goals for the team this year include winning the Christmas tournament to qualify for the state tournament, and to win the South Shore League Small School Division title. Fallon feels this year's team could fulfill all these goals and more because of its depth and quickness. Fallon believes his team's strength lies in its well-balanced offensive attack which includes the great shooting of Maureen O'Leary and Margie Murphy and the inside attack of Cindy Spooner and Melissa Shea.

In the first game of the season, the girls clobbered Abington, 53-41. After getting off to a slow start and being down by one at halftime, Cohasset fired up in the second half and played good defense which sparked the offense and came away with a decisive victory.

Margie Murphy led the offense with 18 points followed by Maureen O'Leary who had 17. Liz O'Leary according to Fallon was the key to Cohasset's turn around in the game.

This Skippers will be participating in a Christmas tournament this vacation and will open with Blue Hills on Friday at 6 p.m. in Cohasset. Blue Hills knocked Cohasset out of the tournament last year and should prove to be a tough team to beat once again this year.

BOYS' BASKETBALL

After a successful pre-season in which the boys played evenly with talented division one and two teams, the Skippers are ready for yet another successful and exciting season.

Coach Ed Minelli feels his team lacks in experience but makes up for this loss with athletic ability. Furthermore, Minelli feels this team has more depth than Cohasset has had in the past and will be in strong contention for a division three state champsionship once again.

Cohasset started in the right direction on the path to success by beating Abington Tuesday, 71-61. Cohasset led by as much as 20 points in the game and showed explosive offensive power in the first half. First game jitters set in during the second half and Abington started to make a comeback. However, the boys hung on to the lead and showed the poise of a true championship team.

Michael Smith and Tom Larson led Cohasset on offense with 22 points apiece followed closely behind by Mat Maloney who had 19. David Shultz and David Shumaker also turned in good defensive efforts for Cohasset.

Friday, the boys crushed Norwell, 72-55. The game was over very early when Cohasset established a decisive lead by the end of the first quarter. Minelli attributed this victory to the true team effort of the squad.

Brian Edwards led all scorers with 28 points and proved to be Cohasset's offensive weapon. The rest of the scoring spread out evenly among the remaining players which proves how much of a team effort this victory was.

The boys play Sandwich on Saturday and Scituate on Monday. Both games should give Cohasset a chance to really show their true potential. The Skippers are also participating in a rigorous Christmas tournament on the 26th and 27th at Newton North High School which should indicate how the Skippers will fare the rest of the year.

Traffic ramp figures baffle planners

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

The state had a hard time believing the consultants who measured traffic at Route 3 interchanges last month.

The state's Central Transportation Planning Committee was shocked to find that traffic on Route 3 ramps has already outstripped Metropolitan Area Planning Council projections for the year 2010, South Shore Coalition representatives learned last week.

The coalition also received a letter from state public-works Commissioner Robert Tierney indicating that the state has no plans for a major reconstruction of the ramps leading to and from Pilgrims Highway.

The Edwards and Kelcey Organization of Boston is currently working on plans for construction of an extra lane on Route 3 from Weymouth to Duxbury. Unless consultants hit a snag in the planning stage, reconstruction of the highway is set to begin in 1990.

Although the state says no major ramp work is planned, coalition project manager Jean Christensen of Marshfield said the letter does not indicate that the state plans to do nothing.

"They're planning what they call traffic management: new signals, wider ramps and new traffic islands," she said.

Two new signals are already on the drawing board for Exit 14 at Route 228 in Rockland, both at the ramps and at the nearby commuter parking lot.

Ramp reconstruction would be highly complex for two reasons. First, it would add to the work needed to prepare an environmental statement, and it would also mean land-takings near the interchanges. That could delay the reconstruction project for three to five years, Christensen said.

Land-takings would be particularly painful, said Selectman Janet W. O'Brien of Hanover. "There's very little open land left to implement ramp changes. "Our ability to re-work the ramps is almost totally constrained."

Traffic volume has grown by at least 50 percent in three years, and state transportation planners "could not believe the enormous growth we've seen here," Christensen said.

That growth has mostly occurred during off-peak hours, indicating explosive growth in commercial and retail development, she added.

About 24,000 vehicles a day were counted at the Exit 14 ramps in 1983. In November, that number had shot up to 36,000.

At Exit 12 — Route 139 near the Pembroke-Marshfield town line — traffic counts have increased from 21,600 vehicles three years ago to 31,000 last month.

Special needs mini-camp

The South Shore Association of Retarded Citizens will sponsor a special needs holiday mini-camp on Dec. 29, 30 and Jan. 2 at United Church of Christ, 460 Main St., Norwell.

The mini-camp will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and will cost $8 per child per day or $21 for three days.

The three-day mini-camp will include games, arts and crafts and music. Children 7 and older are welcome.

For more information, call Kelley Curtis at 335-3023 or Norene Carter at 773-7781.

What the Kindergartners want this holiday

"Snowmen. Santa Claus. Reindeer. I like to give presents. I like to throw snowballs."

Melissa Pyfrom

"I like to go out to play. I like when Santa comes in the night. I like when it snows. I like it when I play with snowballs and hear Rudolph with his bells. I like when I go to sleep at Christmas and Santa comes."

Benjamin Roine

"Christmas trees and ornaments, presents and songs at Church."

Katherine Ronan

"Snow. Presents. My brothers come home from school. Cutting down the Christmas tree. Eating the snow and icicles."

Morgan Sandell

"Santa's around. I like to decorate the Christmas tree."

Alexander Scherin

"Snow. Snowmen. Christmas trees and putting on ornaments. Everybody is home."

Benjamin Smoot

"I like having my Mom and Dad home. I like my special ornaments for the tree."

Ryan Story

"I see reindeer and Santa Claus. I like to watch my brothers open their presents because they're happy and it makes me feel good. My mother and father wear reindeer hats and Santa hats. Christmas day is my birthday too. You can even ask my mother!"

Karena Parzyck

Wishes. . .

TO BE WITH THE WHOLE FAMILY

This Christmas I wish to be with my whole family. There are a lot of times when only a couple of people are there. Christmas is a happy time when I see everybody in my family. I love my family. Christmas is a joyful time. I love Christmas all together as a family.

by Victoria Maynard

MY WISH

My wish would be to live in California with all my friends and my church friends. We wouldn't have any cold weather except in the mountains. We could go to the beach every day after school. If it was too far to go to the beach you could always go to the town pool. In school if someone forgets their homework you wouldn't have to stay after school and that's why I would want that wish.

by Carrie Peters

A PRESENT TO THE WORLD

My present to the world is to give to the poor so they can buy a house, so people who have money should give them money and so no one ever is poor in this beautiful world. I wish that there was never a war, just a peaceful world forever.

by Amanda Hahn

A WISH FOR THE POOR AND PEACE

I wish that when Christmas comes that everybody in the world who is poor would get clothes and food so people can have healthy diets and be able to do basic work and play. Peace on earth is also a wish of mine. If we have peace we can lay down our weapons. If so, we could be friends with one another and other countries. Then, there would hopefully be peace on earth. That is my wish.

Archaeologist visit

On November 25, Edward Bielski came to the Deer Hill School.

He is an archaeologist. He has been one for about 50 years and has over 1,000 artifacts. He found his first one when he was 8 or 9 years old. It was an arrowhead. The artifacts he looks for now are that of the Indian. He looks mostly in Southeastern Massachusetts. The reason he does this is because he enjoys this, and he says "When you touch something like an arrowhead its like touching hands with history."

What he means by this is an Indian touched it then he did. When Mr. Bielski came to the school, he brought his things and set them on a display table. He talked about a few things on the table, and the Indians.

He had a friend who's name was Richard D. Bent. He used to go digging with him. When Mr. Bent died he left his artifacts with Mr. Bielski.

Now that you know a little bit about some archaeologists, what do you think about it? Would you like to become one? It sounds very interesting to me.

Obituary

Margaret McMullan

Margaret H. (Mrs. Richard D.) McMullan of Norwell died Dec. 16 at the South Shore Hospital. A private burial service is planned; there are no calling hours. A memorial service will be held early in January at the First Parish Church in Norwell (Unitarian).

The family asks that, in lieu of flowers, contributions to the Margaret H. McMullan Memorial Fund be mailed to the South Shore Natural Science Center, P. O. Box 429, Norwell, 02061-0429.

Mrs. McMullan was born in Gloucester on August 15, 1905, the daughter of Frank W. and artist Caroline (Burnham) Hastings of Cambridge. She was educated at Miss Wheeler's School in the Back Bay and at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

In 1928, she married Richard Dale McMullan of Philadelphia, then an instructor at Mt. Holyoke college and subsequently Vice President of the Katharine Gibbs School in Boston. The McMullans have lived in Norwell since 1938.

Long a member of the South Shore Art Association, she painted land and seascapes in both watercolor and oil on canvas. She was frequently exhibited on the South Shore and at the Childs and Vose Galleries in Boston.

Active in her church, she served as secretary and was a member of the Ladies Aid Alliance. She also belonged to the North River Community Club, Norwell Historical Society, Republican Club, and Osborn School Building Committee.

During World War II, she was a lieutenant in the Massachusetts Woman's Civilian Defense Corps. She was active in the South Shore Natural Science Center. She had a family interest in the Lord and Burnham (greenhouses) and Burnham Boiler corporations of Irvington, New York.

A veteran sailor, she crewed, with her husband, on several adventurous passages in the North and Baltic Seas on the schooner "Wanderbird" out of Gloucester in the 1930s. After the war, she was inducted into the Society of Sponsors of the U.S. Navy.

Members, at various times, of the Boston, Cohasset, and Scituate Yacht Clubs, the McMullans owned the Danish cutter "Wind Whistle." Mrs. McMullan was recently elected to the Intrepids Club for sponsor-passengers of the worldwide oceanographic voyages of the "Lindblad Explorer."

Besides her husband, she leaves three children, Addison Dale McMullan of Lancaster and Richard Kollock McMullan and Caroline Burke (Mrs. Edward J. Burke, Jr.) both of Norwell, 11 grandchildren and 2 great-grandchildren.

Sixty Plus Club December news and programs

Sixty Plus Club's last social of the season held Wednesday, Dec. 10. was attended by eighty-eight members.

Handsome Xmas decorations, a lighted tree, Hugo's super cuisine, and a fashion show, by Bowman's Dress Shop made the day a success.

The latest sequined and fringed gowns, worn by lovely models, then vocalist Donna Fay, with her accompanist on the piano, made a most enjoyable party.

Thanks to a really hard working committee headed by Mary Donovan.

A gift of a pen for everyone was donated by local banks. Thank you all.

Sixty Plus Club's next social, will be Thursday Jan. 15, 1987, at Trueblood Hall. Lunch will be served at Noon. Bingo games will follow.

Plans for future entertainments are still pending. More details in your Mariner. If the weather is stormy, listen to W.J.D.A. for cancellations.

Saturday Dec. 6, the George Mealy Post, was host to the residents of Harbor View Apts.

Tuesday, Dec. 30, is a scheduled trip to view the Xmas lights, at Edaville in South Carver.

If anyone wishes to have a lunch, this is not included in the price of $10. Call Connie, only, for reservations 545-3349.

Anyone who has had the good fortune to be transported to appointments by volunteer drivers of "Fish" will agree we owe them a sincere and public, Thank You.

Katherine McGrath

Consultants continue to prepare railroad impact report

By John O'Donnell
Mariner Staff

Work on a draft environmental impact report for South Shore commuter rail service restoration is progressing, according to consultants for the MBTA.

Outlines for the first three chapters of the six-chapter report were presented to the Old Colony Railroad Citizens Advisory Committee last week by Donald Graham of Sverdrup Corporation, the MBTA's project consultant, and Barry Faulkner of Cambridge Systematics, an engineering subcontractor.

State regulations require the filing of an environmental impact report for the project. Information from the report will also be submitted to the federal Urban Mass Transportation Authority for review.

The MBTA's Old Colony Railroad rehabilitation plans call for re-establishing rail service on three lines: a Middleborough line, a Plymouth line and a Scituate line terminating in Greenbush.

The first chapter of the environmental impact report will include a statement of need for transportation improvements on the South Shore, Faulkner said.

The chapter will feature descriptions of existing transportation facilities and services, such as major highway facilities, bus service and commuter boat service; a study of transportation problems, including Southeast Expressway congestion and MBTA Red Line capacity and access problems; and an outline of the planning process.

The second chapter will highlight transportation alternatives studied, including those being considered by the MBTA and those that have been rejected.

The chapter will define the alternatives being considered, including existing "no build" services including bus, boat, Red Line and major highways; transportation systems management and improvements that can be made; and commuter rail service.

The third chapter will include a study of the affected areas on the South Shore. A regional study and town-by-town information will be presented in this chapter.

The last three chapters will deal with transportation impacts, a site-by-site study of environmental consequences, and an evaluation of all alternatives considered.

Graham said he hopes that the first chapter will be finished and available for advisory committee review in February. Faulkner said that the draft of the environmental impact report is scheduled to be completed in late 1987.

The advisory committee's next meeting is Jan. 22 at Braintree Town Hall.

PRAYER THROUGH APPLICATION OF HOLY SPIRIT — Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I may attain my goal, you who gives me the Divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you, even and in spite of all material illusion, I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine.

The person must say this prayer for 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the favor requested will be granted even if it may appear difficult. This prayer must be published immediately after the favor is granted without mentioning the favor. Only your initials should appear at the bottom. J.P. (12/24)

Mass transit experience asset to MAPC leader

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council's new executive director is of course a planner by profession.

However, David C. Soule of Merrimack, New Hampshire brings a wealth of experience in one planning issue — mass transportation — that is becoming increasingly important to the 101 eastern Massachusetts communities who are MAPC members.

Soule met for the first time with members of the South Shore Coalition in Weymouth Thursday night. The coalition, while formed by its 10 member towns and state Sen. William B. Golden (D-Weymouth), has strong ties to the metropolitan planning agency.

Soule, with 15 years' experience in regional planning, was director of the Nashua Regional Planning Commission from 1980 to1986.

The agency covers much of southern New Hampshire, an area "experiencing the same kind of explosive growth we're seeing now in the Boston area," he said.

Before the meeting, Soule toured South Shore Coalition towns with project manager Jean Christensen of Marshfield. He told representatives that the coalition needs greater "staff support" — technical assistance from MAPC planners and experts — to address issues of growing importance in the region.

"More staff support for the coalition is one issue we will be looking at as MAPC begins putting together its 1987-88 work program," he said.

Christensen will identify the areas in which technical assistance is needed most in the region and forward those ideas to MAPC budget planners. Soule indicated three areas — transportation, solid waste and groundwater protection — in which the group may require more-intensive assistance.

The coalition early this year formed a solid-waste subcommittee to study ways of dealing with the growing crisis in rubbish disposal. In spring, it formed a committee to study ways of protecting water supplies.

Greater assistance from experts will be needed as these panels identify the South Shore's specific problems and needs.

Prior to working with the Nashua orgranzation, Soule, a graduate of Trinity College with graduate-level course work in urban studies from Southern Connecticut State College — was planning director if the Capital Regional Council of Governments in Hartford.

He held the post for eight years. For the previous two years, he had been a planner with the Connecticut Department of Community Affairs for two years.

Public transportation is perhaps Soule's strongest point, however.

In both Nashua and Hartford, he was involved with planning increased bus transportation.

Nashua had lost its public transportation system and "was the 10th-largest city in the U.S. without a system," Soule said.

Under Soule, the regional commission was able to re-introduce public buses.

Hartford's system was in exsistence, but it needed enlargement because of growth in central Connecticut suburbs. "One of the things we did, in addition to planning for changes in the highway system itself, was the establishment of express lanes for buses only."

Though these changes have been implemented elsewhere, South Shore residents cannot expect extended MBTA bus service until groups like the coalition first do their "homework."

"It's a little premature to talk about that," Soule said. Instead, MAPC planners must litterally start from the ground up.

"We have to ask questions such as, how is land used on the South Shore? What amount of traffic does that generate, and when?"

As shown by recent traffic counts at Route 3 interchanges, heavier traffic need not result from higher population. All along the South Shore, traffic has far outstripped MAPC projections for the year 2010 because of retail development, particularly along the Route 53 corridor.

Though rush-hour traffic has increased somewhat, congestion has shot up in off-peak shopping hours.

With that type of traffic increase, the MAPC will begin to explore the possibility of requiring developers to pay more for future transportation improvements made necessary by more businesses.

Developers currently can be required to pay a portion of the cost of immediate highway improvements, such as new turning lanes or a traffic signal. Soule said builders may be required to go a few steps further in the future.

"What we're talking about is not just the immediate improvements, but also the work that's needed down the road — both literally and in the future — because of congestion generated by those developments.

"People are sitting in traffic a lot longer than they expected when many no doubt moved here to get away from that," Soule said.

The new federal tax law is also prompting planners to take a wait-and-see attitude. "We don't know its impact yet. We have to work with communities and track growth to see what the cumulative effect will be."

Although he now heads the major eastern Massachusetts planning agency, Soule said he has no current plans to relocate closer to Boston for family reasons. Merrimack is very close to the state line.

"You might say I have a personal commitment to public transportation," he said. "I must rely on the MBTA commuter rail to get to work now."

Groups request safety priorities

Several groups, including the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Boston Edison, and Citizens Urging Responsible Energy, joined Gov. Michael Dukakis at a legislative hearing last week regarding safety issues at the Pilgrim Nuclear Power Plant in Plymouth.

The hearing, held by the legislature's Energy Committee at the request of Sen. William Golden of Weymouth focused on safety-related issues at the Pilgrim plant, and included testimony from Dukakis.

The main issue of the hearing was whether or not the Pilgrim plant, which has been shut down since last April, should be reopened in the spring.

Dukakis stated that public health and safety must be the principal criteria regarding the re-starting of Pilgrim.

Golden asked the Nuclear Regulation Commission why there had been no response by the agency to a petition calling for a public hearing on the Pilgrim matter.

"Some 50 legislators signed on to the petition, which was delivered to the NRC back in July," stated Golden. "In the meantime, the NRC has been meeting behind closed doors with (Edison) when there should be a public hearing on the matter.

"It's the same thing as a judge meeting with a defendant to discuss the particulars of a trial," Golden said.

Golden, who has filed legislation to increase the emergency planning zone from 10 miles to 40 miles around nuclear power plants and three other measures dealing with nuclear power, has called for continued hearings on the Pilgrim issue, specifically reactor design safety and emergency planning.
